The show of the Royal Agricultural Society will this year be held at Bristol, on July 1 to 5. Readers interested in this fixture can obtain particulars of the classification, etc., from the sec., Mr. T. McRow, 16, Bedford Square, London, W.C.

A splendid selection of foreign birds and the foods and appliances incidental to their keeping and breeding is kept by Mr. Frank Collingbourne, of Sheen Valley Aviaries, East Sheen, Surrey, and those interested should certainly write for a price-list. Budgerigars are a speciality; also mixed collections of small foreign birds.

Messrs. Metcalfe and Malone, writes a correspondent, convened a meeting of Liverpool bird fanciers to discuss the proposed cycle club at one of the swagger cafes in the city. The Fancy on wheels is something new in Liverpool, though the "fancy-dressed" cyclist is quite an "old bird." May the proposed Fanciers Cycling Club have a long flight—no, run—of success.

I am going to a situation in Canada, so all my stock is for sale, writes Mr. J. Thompson (Stevenston, N.B.). After I have been out a while and studied the climate I shall perhaps take up the hobby again. I have been a reader of your very valuable paper this last nine years, and hope to continue to be so abroad. I should like to thank all those fanciers who congratulated me on my success at Scottish National show, as I can't find time to write everyone.

A very neat price-list reaches us from Mr. W. Cottingham (7 and 9, Peveril St., Nottingham) who stocks practically every cage requisite and kind of seed or food required by the bird-keeper. We can confidently recommend this dealer's goods. His special seed mixtures and foods are excellent. The "Pick-um-up" wild-seed mixture for British birds is one of the best we have seen; a large sample packet will be sent in return for a penny stamp forwarded to Mr. Cottingham.

On purchasing my Cage Birds last Friday, writes Mr. W. N. Turner (Hylton, Manchester), I was delighted to see such an excellent sketch of my Palace winners. The inscription, however, should have read: Buff hen 1st and buff cock 2nd. They are no longer my property, the Rev. B. Nume being the purchaser last season, at what I consider a record figure. I hope they will put in an appearance at the Palace this year, and do as well for him. (The Rev. Nume writes us to the above effect; also saying that he has been fortunate in having a good number of young sired by the buff cock.—Editor.)

THE MANAGER, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

I have severed my connection with the Barrow and District C.B.A., writes Mr. J. S. Fleming, late hon. sec. I take this opportunity to tender my sincere thanks to Cage Birds for your assistance and kindness during my term of office.

The election of officers of the Nottingham and Notts. O.S. takes place at our next monthly meeting, Feb. 11, writes Mr. J. E. Royce, assist. hon. sec. Balance-sheet of late show, also yearly accounts will be presented, which will show a small balance in hand, despite a loss of over £4 on our open show. We hope for a full attendance of members.

The year book of the Hull C.B.S. is to hand. It contains a list of the officers for 1913. The classifications for the March, April, June, July, August, October, and Boxing Day shows are given in full, with the names of the judges; also the particulars of the cups which will be in competition, and the conditions attaching thereto.

Chaffinch-Canary Mules.

That well-known North Country exhibitor and judge, Mr. A. Hay (Berwick) has been unfortunate in losing his muling cock Chaffinch last week. This bird, he informs us, bred Mules last year with a hen Canary, and he thinks it the only one of its species to successfully mate with the Canary.

She C.C.C. Balance Sheet.

We have received the balance-sheet of the Crested Canary club. The "cash in hand," which last year stood at £5 12s. 10d., is now £7 7s. 5d., this amount including, however, £1 3s. due on outstanding accounts for advts. Besides this, there are assets estimated at £36 12s. 6d., these including the Roberts Cup £25, and two ten guinea bowls.

Back to the Old Home.

A Mule owned by Mr. C. Hanson, of North Street, Calne, after it had been in his possession for over six months, escaped and promptly returned to its old quarters at the Grange, nearly a half-mile away. The cage in which it had been bred was there with its door open, and the homecomer entered it, and was captured by one of the men who had witnessed its return.

Something New in Pair Shows.

Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S., writes "A Well-wisher," held their first pair show on Sunday, Feb. 2, at St. George's Church, Charlton, when Mr. H. R. Hearne and Miss A. Downs were married. Mr. H. R. Hearne is well known in the district, having been the late sec. of the old Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S., also sec. of the New Cross C.B.S., and now an ardent worker for the above Society. Mr. Meades acted as steward at this venture, which, I am glad to say, was a very real success. I am sure that all members will wish Mr. Hearne and wife every joy.

Wild-Bird Life.

Precocious Birds.

"Sufficient unto the day, etc," is the motto of the wild birds, they have absolutely no thought of to-morrow. Year after year do we hear of precocious pairs nesting at unseasonable times, and this winter is no exception. Young Thrushes have been seen in the writer's district, a nest containing eggs has been found further south, and others in different parts of the country. Our garden Robin has been seen with a companion. He has been strutting and swaggering before her in a manner that appears quite comical to those not versed in the ways of wild birds when courting. In these advance proceedings, naturally the cheeky Sparrow must take part. Since he got over his moult, his plumage has changed immensely, his colouring is far advanced, even his black gorget, which is usually the last point to colour up, is assuming quite a respectable depth of tone. he struts around in all his old cheeky manner, and is equally ready to take a beakful of feathers from a neighbour, as to engage in a free fight in the hedge. Out in the fields signs of pairing for the coming season are evident on every side. The bold Missel Thrushes have disbanded their always small flocks, and can be seen feeding in close companionship out in the fields and meadows. These birds are among the earliest to pair; even in autumn the flocks seem to be made up of couples. Notice the large gatherings of Linnets; see how they split up when disturbed from their feeding grounds. The outside birds are made up of a mixture of both sexes, and when they settle upon the hedgerow they undoubtedly settle in pairs. The sheltered side of a hay rick near a hedge gave the writer a capital opportunity of watching them; the cock birds are already tinged with a rosy flush upon the breast, their darker backs distinguish them at a glance from the hens, who are not nearly so forward in colouring, and have still the same sombre tones they had in the early winter. Many writers claim that the Greenfinch is the commonest of our Finches, but the Linnet must run him hard for premier position. In places they are far more numerous than Sparrows.

MORE CONGRATULATIONS ON THE BIRTHDAY ISSUE.

The Birthday Number was a treat for everyone.—O. Wilson (Heywood).

I think your Birthday Number was simply splendid.—J. Newman (Chippenham).

Thanks for the grand Birthday Number. I have had the plates framed.—G. Johnson, (Belfast).

Many happy returns of the day. The Birthday Number was lovely, a grand threepennyworth.—T. Piper (Pontefract).

Your last Birthday Issue I thought magnificent, and congratulate you on your achievement. It was a cheap threepennyworth. The plates look grand framed.—W. Innes (Edinburgh).

The Birthday Number was excellent in every respect. The coloured plates reflect great credit upon the artists. Cage Birds is indispensable to all bird lovers, and I wish the paper the success it well deserves.—H. E. Smith (Blackheath).

Praise for such an exceptionally magnificent production, truly the cream of journalistic enterprise, can hardly be expressed, for your Birthday Number was most interesting, while the coloured plates are not only works of art, but masterpieces, and an achievement of which you may be justly proud. The 3d. I consider not spent, but invested, for the articles are most helpful.—T. Charleton (Boston).

A rush of concert work alone has kept me from sending my good wishes to "the" birdy paper on another Birthday Issue. It is the sixth I've seen, and it goes one better every time. I shudder at your task next year to beat it; but that's your look-out. (It serves you right.) The charming plate of Foreign Birds appealed especially to me—it gave me several twinges of envy—while the picture gallery of Britishers is alone worth the "nimble thruppence." It's an education itself, and the printers are to be commended.—Dan McArthur (Edinburgh).

Allow me to congratulate you on your Birthday Number. I intended writing you before, but business prevented me. I may add that I have been a reader of your valuable paper for the past six years, and I consider it to be far the best of the day. The valuable photographs bring you face to face with old friends afar off, while the valuable information given every week makes bird-keeping a delightful hobby. I have been a lover of birds from a boy, and I find the most experienced fancier cannot afford to be without Cage Birds.—John Tipton (Churchstoke).

CANARY BREEDING IN AN OPEN BIRD-ROOM.

ITS ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES.

By C. EDWARD GRIBBON (Belfast.)

I FIRST caught the bird fever some years ago through being presented with a pair of common Canaries. I determined to breed with them, and promised no less than twelve young cocks to my schoolboy friends. I quite believed that the birds would go to nest five times and rear every bird hatched. But, alas, "The best laid schemes o' mice an' men gang aft agley." I put them together in the beginning of April, and the little hen built and pulled to pieces nest after nest for six weeks. At last she laid an egg in the seed trough to my great delight, although it was cracked and empty. I placed a marble in the nest, which she "incubated" for twelve days, and she refused to lay any more—at least to my knowledge, for I now believe she was a cannibal.

At the end of twelve days I was given a clutch of new-laid Canary eggs by a friend. I placed them under the hen and awaited developments. Two of the eggs disappeared, not even leaving their shells behind, and the other two hatched. One youngster died and the other was reared, owing to the gallant efforts of the cock. It turned out to be a cock and a beautiful singer. I always kept the window wide open, and one day when the youngster was a month old, on entering the room I was horrified to find the cage door open and the bird gone. I raced down to the garden and spent an hour plunging through bushes looking for the young rascal. Then I thought he might be in the room all the time; and there he was behind an old box in the corner.

What the Sweet Shops Lost!

It was most annoying when all my boy friends came asking for their young Canary. As I had only one, I naturally did not wish to part with him. So I told each one of them that as they did not ask first they could not have him. One was very angry about it as he had already bought an expensive brass cage. His agony must have been very great when he thought of what he might have bought with his wasted money.

My father afterwards said I might have an old hay loft for an aviary, as the birds, he thought, would do much better flying about than caged. It was an ideal place, large, well built, and damp and draught proof. I took one of the windows out, and made a small, all-wire flight projecting over the garden. It is absolutely invaluable, as the birds can get all the fresh air they want and sun themselves, also bathe without making any mess, as all the splashings run on to the ground below. I nailed pea-sticks all round the walls, planted a few small fir-trees in pots and sowed some canary and rape seed in boxes. I then turned my birds into their new quarters, and they instantly started to demolish the fir trees. Three birds seemed too little for this big aviary, so I purchased another cock and three hens. One of the hens was a really fine Norwich, and very tame. In fact, in the Spring, when she was nesting, and had young birds, if you held a few grains of hemp near her she would come off the nest, fly on to your hand, and having eaten the seed, go and feed the youngsters while you were standing within a few inches of her nest.

I gave my birds as many baths as they would take, which necessitated the use of about one gallon of water daily! I always kept a supply of plain canary seed in the aviary, and on alternate mornings threw down a handful of German summer rape, hemp, linseed, or niger. On frosty days I always gave them some maw seed before going to roost, as I believe it helps them to resist the cold. For green food I gave dandelion, groundsel, chickweed, and shepherd's purse. I always gather plantain in the autumn and hang it up to dry for winter use, as I find it is greatly appreciated by the birds. Canaries are also very fond of flowering grass.

My birds did not seem to mind the cold in the least. During one week, hot water froze in fifteen minutes after being placed in the aviary, yet the birds sang more lustily than ever. They began to nest at the beginning of March, and the first young bird was hatched on the 28th March. One great disadvantage of breeding Canaries in an aviary is that you have to supply egg-food when a young bird is hatched, and then every bird in the aviary partakes of it. The result is that sitting hens are brought into too high condition, and as soon as they hatch they want to go to nest again. I supplied moss, fine grass, string and feathers for nesting material.

A Hopeless Kind of Home.

Three of my hens were model nest builders, but the fourth was absolutely hopeless. She built nest after nest with imperfectly constructed bottom, so as soon as an egg was laid it fell through. At last she built in a tin half-filled with seed, and hatched five young birds, which died when they were two days old. My hens would have nothing to do with the boxes and nest-pans which I placed about the aviary, but preferred to build in the bushes. My Yorkshire hen went to nest seven times, laid 33 eggs, hatched 21 birds, but only reared 3. Altogether I reared 13 young, 8 cocks and 5 hens.

The little episodes of birdy life which may be seen by sitting quietly in your aviary are very interesting. It is very funny to see a young bird taking its first bath. They often plunge into the bath like a professional high diver, then when they realise that water is wet, they take fright and come out with a jump and a scramble. Often a hen takes a fancy to a very large piece of string, and it is very amusing to watch her frantic efforts to weave it into her nest.

No two hens will build alike. I had one which made a nest of wood shavings, paper and cotton-wool. Another built a fine nest of dead groundsel, string and feathers. I had placed four sanitary nest-pans lined with felt round the walls, and the birds pulled all the lining out and used it to line their own nests. This gave me an idea. I procured a large piece of felt and fastened it securely to the floor. When the birds want some lining they now attack the felt. It makes a splendid lining and is much cheaper than cotton-wool or cow-hair.

Breeding Exhibition Specimens a Possibility.

I think Canary-breeding in an aviary is far more interesting than in cages; also there is much less work in attending to the birds. Some people say that it is impossible to breed exhibition specimens in an aviary, but it is quite possible provided that not too many birds are kept. As it is necessary to run two or three hens to one cock, two cocks and six hens will be ample. The fewer birds there are the better will be the breeding results, and a few good ones are worth a roomful of wasters.

The cock and the hens you wish him to pair with should be caged together for two or three weeks towards the end of February. It will be found that they usually pair the way you desire if this is done. All birds bred in the aviary should be caged for a few weeks to steady them, as they are usually wild through being bred in a semi-wild state.

The floor should be covered with sawdust, and a quantity of coarse sea-sand should always be kept within reach of the birds. I may say that I have never lost a Canary through disease. But never introduce a bird that has been kept in a warm room into your aviary on a cold day, for you are certain to give it a severe chill.

THE CHARMING MINIVET.

This very rare, lovely plumaged, and extremely graceful bird comes from India. The subject of this drawing was exhibited by the Hon. Mrs. Bourke at the Horticultural Hall Show, where it secured second prize.

THE CURIOUS BELGIAN CANARY.

This fine example of a curious and ancient type of Canary won 1st prize at the New Year Show of the Edinburgh S.F. and Belgian Society for Mr. G. C. T. Hope (Edinburgh).

MOULTING AND MANAGING THE BULLFINCH.

By F. J. WICKHAM (Chatham).

This well-known exhibitor gives his method of retaining the breast colour, which is so ready to vanish in captivity during the moult.

MOST of your readers will have acquired sufficient knowledge on moulting and selecting the exhibition Bullfinch from the splendid articles that have appeared from time to time in your valuable paper, but my own experience may be interesting. First I will deal with the required type. The bird should be as large as possible, short and cobby in appearance (not barrel shaped) and have a good full head. Now take colour; the head must have a large black cap extending as far as possible down the back of neck and coming as far under the beak as you can get it. The back should be of a nice clear slate colour, the wing bars large and distinct, breast colour a nice clear red, not dull brick red. The most common fault with otherwise good specimens is to be ragged at thighs; it is very difficult to find a bird without this fault; in fact to get a bird as described you will have to search over a good many dealers' stocks before you find one.

When Outdoor beats Indoor Life.

Master Bullfinch has a bad habit of moulting out a very poor colour when compared to the beautiful colour of a fresh-caught specimen. I will describe how I have moulted him, and retained some of the lovely colour of the natural moulted specimen. I have no doubt which is the right place to moult Bullie in; a large cage or aviary outside is always to be preferred to an indoor moult, if you are to maintain the necessary colour. Having got a suitable place, I feed as follows: Canary 4 parts, German rape 1 part, English rape 1 part, linseed 1 part. No hemp; if you give hemp you will lose breast colour. A little sunflower will do good; a teaspoonful daily is ample. Give wild seed, dandelion and shepherd's purse for preference.

Now comes the most important part. Give the bird as many blackberries and privet berries as it cares to eat. If it will eat all fruit through the moult, so much the better.

Having got your bird through the moult you can take it into the bird-house and put the finishing touches on for the show-bench. Supply a bath every morning. You will soon see him splashing away in it. After he has had a good dip take the bath away. No good can be done by leaving a bath hung on the cage all day; in fact very often harm, for if the bird washes late in the day and does not get dry by night, a cold is often the result, hence the advisability of removing the bath early.

Using One's Eyes at the Shows.

If a fancier has not seen an exhibition Bullfinch, and intends getting one for show, he should not depend on dealers to select it. My advice is, go to a good show and carefully study the winners. I mean where there is a class of about twelve Bullfinches, not one or two only. You will gain more knowledge at a good open show than from all the reading there is to be obtained on Bullfinches.

I often hear people say that Bullfinches so easily die. My experience is that the fresh-caught Bullfinches are as hardy as any other Britishers. I know that birds sent to shows will sometimes come home looking "thick," but it is generally through over-showing which can be remedied by rest. If you feed fresh-caught Bullies the same as I do, you will not lose many. If a bird does look queer at any time I give seven drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for two days, or as much Epsom Salts as will cover a threepenny piece (either will do). At the same time I give a liberal supply of maw and dandelion seeds. I never let birds have a bath while I am giving salts; you risk giving the bird a chill by so doing. At the same time, from experience I do not believe in giving birds drugs; I have never yet had good results from it, and have discontinued it.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

BREEDING FOR SONG (Nelson).—Cocks, as a rule, certainly do not sing so freely when breeding as when enjoying "single bliss," but this does not necessarily mean that breeding spoils them for singing. If they are highly trained Rollers, there is a risk of the song deteriorating whilst breeding, but for ordinary singers the only effect is to reduce the quantity of song during the period that they are engaged in domestic operations.

NORWICH GONE BLIND (J.C.C.)—You might try the effect of a stimulating lotion but I have serious doubts of any material good resulting. Dissolve 10 grains of sulphate of zinc in an ounce of rose water, and add five drops of tincture of opium. Catch bird and hold it in hand with one eye looking directly upwards. Drop one drop of the lotion on eye and allow it to work its way into the eye as the bird moves its eyelids. In a short time soak it up in a little soft rag, and put on a fresh drop. Use three drops in this way on each eye twice daily, morning and evening, for a week. The lotion is poisonous, so be careful.

SUNLESS ROOM (P.D.R.).—I have no hesitation in saying emphatically that the fact of the room getting no direct sunshine has nothing whatever to do with your failure to rear young birds. Dozens of rooms are situated similarly to yours as regards sunlight, yet thousands of birds have been, and will be, reared in them. Indeed, many such rooms are very successful, and in a hot summer undoubtedly have an advantage over those getting sun all day long. Your failure is most likely due to wrong feeding and management. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and study this before mating time comes round. If any difficulty crops up do not hesitate to write us at any time.

DIARRHOEA (W.D.C.).—Keep in a comfortable temperature and see that the room is free from cold draughts, fumes from burning lights, and nicely ventilated. Keep cage and perches as clean as possible. Give plain canary only as staple diet. Every second day give a good pinch of maw and a morsel of banana, and on alternate days a morsel of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it. Twice a week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts niger, teazle, and rape. Fix a grape, broken open on end of perch for bird to peck at. In the water add six drops each of syrup of rhubarb, and dandelion juice, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece for one day. After this give 20 drops of whisky, six of tincture of gentian, and three of tincture of opium daily for three or four days. When the bowels have resumed a more normal condition stop the opium, and substitute six drops of dandelion juice in its place, and continue this mixture every second day for two or three weeks.

WHEEZY AND OFF SONG (Peel).—Considering the previous history of the bird, if it has been in this condition any length of time it will undoubtedly be very slow to recover, and may never fully do so. Keep it in a comfortable place, neither very warm nor cold, but free from draughts, and heated air or fumes from burning lights. Feed for a month as advised to "A.G., Bristol," in this issue, except the mixed seed, and instead of this give a pinch of equal parts niger, black rape, and teazle, with a sprinkling of maw and gold of pleasure twice a week. Also keep a piece of the paste advised to "F.E." last week, in the wires. In the water give 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and Ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a fortnight. After that suspend treatment for a week and then go on for a few weeks, if necessary, giving the chlorodyne mixture you have already been using, every second or third day, as may seem advisable. Shall be glad to hear result in, say, a month.

ENAMEL (T.C.).—You do not say whether you refer to show or breeding cages. If the latter, you might have seen by an article in birthday number that I prefer sanitary distemper. Aspinall's and Porcelain enamels are both excellent, and the only kinds of which I have personal experience. Others, of course, may be as good, but I do not know. As regards colour, you should get a shade card from the maker or vendor of the brand you choose. You could then gratify your own taste. There is little to choose between whites. For light blue, a blue-grey, sky, or hedge sparrow egg may be suitable, but different makers use different names for very similar colours, so the only satisfactory way is to order from a shade card.

RING CAUSING PAIN (F.B.).—Possibly the foot is a little swollen or inflamed, and bathing in boracic or wych hazel solution, and anointing sparingly afterwards with zinc ointment, would relieve it. If you really wish to remove the ring, the only means of doing so is to cut it off with a tiny pair of wire nippers or small scissors with very narrow and hard steel blades. One blade needs to be narrow enough to go through the ring, between it and the leg, without crushing the leg, just far enough to get a grip on the ring and nip it through. The ring is then easily pressed open and removed. A jeweller would probably have nippers of suitable size and would take it off in a moment if asked.

OFF SONG AND MOULTING (A.G., Bristol).—The bird will not sing as long as it is moulting. You probably keep it in a draughty place of extremely fluctuating temperature. See that these causes are removed, and do not hang near or over burning lights in the evening. Also see cage and bird are free from insect pests. Then, in addition to staple diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry in it, and sprinkled with a pinch of maw every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana, and a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, and teazle. Give a leaf of dandelion, if obtainable, daily. Also give it a little of the paste advised to "F.E." last week, and add six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel to the water every second day for a week or so.

FOOD FOR REARING YOUNG (A.H.).—I have never used either of the brands of "egg-bread" you name, so cannot pass any opinion about them. The other food and puppy biscuits have been frequently used to rear young birds without the orthodox egg-food. Therefore, there is no reason why you should not succeed. Of the two, I should prefer the puppy biscuits, and prepare them by pouring over just enough boiling water to cover the quantity required for immediate use. Allow it to stand until biscuit is softened, then drain, and stir into a crumbly mass, and serve. To avoid making a sudden change on the fourth day, give a small quantity of this food from the first in addition to the egg-food. Twice a day would suffice for giving fresh food to birds in outside aviary—morning and towards evening.

ROLLER TOURS (F.M.L.).—It is quite impossible in this column to enter into a detailed description of the separate tours which would help you to identify them. If you could look up a few months' back numbers you would find most, or all, of them described in articles on the Roller—the particular dates I have not at the moment available. Most, or all, of the English names for tour indicate the principal note or sound forming that tour, and similarly German names if translated into English suggest the nature of the tour. In some cases the resemblance is rather fanciful. The schockel, for instance, has been likened to the sound of a rapidly running sewing machine, and the glucke to the clucking of a broody hen. You would find it far the most satisfactory method to get a practical lesson or two, say, by attending a singing contest, or a show where there are classes for singing Rollers, and ask a Roller fancier or judge to explain the different tours to you as the birds sing them.

CREST OR CRESTBRED (Wistaria).—My advice is to drop the idea altogether. You seem to have no object in view, neither is there likely to be any legitimate object for crossing either of these varieties with a Norwich Plainhead. The result would be crossbreds pure and simple, which would be of no real utility for breeding back to either variety, inasmuch as there exists heaps of much better material for any purpose to which they might be put. You would get both crested and plainheaded birds from the cross. If you are very desirous of breeding with a Crest or Crestbred bird, then go a little further, and get one of each, properly matched for breeding pure Crests and Crestbreds. 2 and 3 are replied to in above.

SHELLING SEED (Short One).—Sorry, but you were much too late to get this bird in condition in time for the Palace Show. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and one or two dandelion leaves, according to size. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana, and a pinch of seed mixture advised to "Norrie" in this issue. Instead of cuttlefish, stick a cube of hard, common salt in wires for bird to peck at. In the water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and six drops of syrup of rhubarb every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid.

BREEDING GOOD ROLLERS (Josef Kerschbanmer).—(1) If you mean good typical singing Rollers, you could not breed them right away from a Roller cock and Border Fancy hen. The young from these birds would be crossbreds, and although very good singers, you could not expect them to sing as well, even if trained, as pure Rollers. You want a pure bred Roller hen as a mate for the cock. (2) If you breed with a hen suffering from asthma, there will be no risk of the cock contracting the disease from her, but all the young, both cocks and hens, from them will inherit a predisposition to the disease. You might continue the treatment on which she is now improving for a few weeks, but do not attempt breeding with her.

A SEED MIXTURE (Norrie).—As a mixture for occasional use as a tit-bit, the following is a very good one. Two parts each, by measure, hemp, niger, and black rape; one part each millet, teazle, and broken groats; a half-part each of gold of pleasure, maw, sesame and linseed; and a slight sprinkling of crushed oats and mustard. Except in the moulting season, a half-part thistle would make a good substitute for the linseed, and may be added at all times. Canary and summer rape form the chief diet.

VARIED (L. A. D.).—No, I do not advise keeping a cock Cutthroat in an aviary with breeding Canaries. They are often a very disturbing element, and only tolerable in a large aviary with plenty of elbow room and cover. If in good health and vigour, four cock Canaries and two cock Goldfinches will be quite sufficient for 18 hens. Put up at least two dozen nesting sites, and do not place one or two materially higher than all the rest, or there will be no end of squabbling for their possession.

CANARIES NOT SINGING (A. K.).—See that they are not troubled with insect pests. Keep them in a comfortable but not very warm place, and see they are quite free from cold draughts and fumes from burning lights in the evenings. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. In addition, give every second day half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure sprinkled over it, and twice a week on the alternate days give half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, black rape and teazle. Give a leaf of dandelion daily. In the water give 20 drops of whisky, as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash every second day for one week.

STARTED MOULTING AGAIN (X. Y. Z.).—Keep the bird in a moderate temperature and treat as follows. It is quite likely it will be in good condition for breeding this season by the time it is advisable to begin mating up. In addition to usual seed diet, give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight. On the alternating days give a morsel of banana and a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet and teazle. In the water add six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day until feathers cease dropping. If bowels become constipated, give a little succulent green food daily.

CONSTIPATION, AND NO SONG (H.B.).—Add to the drinking water of the Yorkshire cock ten drops of syrup of buckthorn daily until the droppings assume a normal condition. Also give a little succulent green food daily for a time. If nothing else is available, offer a crisp small "knot" of Brussels sprouts from the culinary department.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

If there is no doubt about the sex of the Roller, treat it as advised in this issue to "A. K." You might also give a little of the paste advised to "F. E." last week. This should bring it into song. But really any healthy self-respecting cock Roller ought to be in rollicking song by now.

UNWASHED BIRD LOSING TOES (J. A. O.).—You ought to have given some particulars and described the appearance of the toes. Do you mean the toes, which are the portion having scaly covered skin, bone, joints, etc., or the claws, which are simply the horny toe-nails, so to speak, at the end of each toe? In the case you refer to, the claws, and not the toes, were the parts involved. You had better write again and give full particulars about your bird's feet. Meantime, bathe them for a few minutes daily in a solution of wych hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of lukewarm water. Dry gently, and anoint them with Lanocyllin. Keep cage floor and perches scrupulously clean.

AVIARY (Old Reader).—The aviary of which you send sketch appears to be a very nicely arranged and got up structure. If it is in a moderately sheltered position, there is no reason why you should not breed Canaries quite successfully in it. If the wooden portion at the end with door is fully enclosed, it would be as well to bore three half-inch holes in the centre board at the highest angle of the roof to let off heated and impure air. If you make a projecting wire flight in front, you will also need to make a gutter to the lower slope of roof across the front to prevent rain dripping into flight. But I would advise you to use aviary as it stands this year, and gain a little experience before adding the flight. Two cocks and six hens will be ample to start with. Put up ten or a dozen nesting sites.

BREEDING FOR PLEASURE (R. M.).—If you attach any importance to quality of song, you cannot do better than adhere to the Roller, but if you would like a little more stylish and better coloured type of bird, either Border Fancy, little, if any, larger, and not much richer in colour, or Yorkshires, or Norwich Plainheads, decidedly larger and much richer coloured, would serve your purpose equally well. All these three sing very well, but an inferior type of song to that of the Roller. One cock and two hens will be ample to stock the aviary for starting. Put in four nesting sites of similar design, and do not place one decidedly higher than the others. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," from our manager, and digest contents before starting. It may help you to retrieve past failures.

SEVEN IN BRIEF (Progressive).—Not a bad starting point for progression, but unfortunately most of your questions are too vague to admit of a very definite reply. To proceed: (1) The best breed of Canary to breed must naturally depend upon individual taste and fancy. The most profitable breed depends upon the success one meets in breeding them. The commonest breed may show a better balance sheet than the most valuable one, but is not certain of doing so. Whilst one person will succeed well with a highly developed, valuable breed, another will fail with common birds. To strike the happy medium I would suggest fairly good Yorkshires or Cinnamons. (2) In either of the breeds named 30s. to 40s. should secure a nice pair. See advertisement columns for prices asked by breeders. (3) Birds bred in 1912 will be quite old enough to breed during this coming season. Or you may mate a 1912 bird with a 1910 or 1911 one. (4) Have never tried to ascertain how many young it is possible to get from a pair in a season. Exceptionally prolific hens will have as many as five broods in a season, and as a normal clutch consists of four or five eggs, perhaps we may put the "possibility" at twenty per hen. This is the way to kill the goose, etc., not a sound system of profit making, eh? Wise fanciers are satisfied with two, or at most three, broods a year. Allowing for casualties, losses, etc., the average product would be nearer six per hen, which is really not bad. (5) I cannot say what price you should give for a second-hand aviary. It depends upon the size, material, structure, condition, etc., of which I know nothing. Ascertain price of new ones from dealers' lists; this might help you to form an idea for yourself. (6) Fir tree oil is an excellent remedy for red mite, but I do not go so far as to say it is the best. Others may be quite as good. (7) The moss and cow-hair bags sold at a penny each are excellent for making nests. For the actual process, consult "Canary Breeding for Beginners."

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BARE PATCH AND NO SONG (B. Clift).—There cannot be much wrong with the bird if it is as lively as you say, and the bare place would have nothing to do with its failure to sing. The bareness should have been attended to when moulting. It is doubtful if it can be remedied now before next moult. Feed for two or three weeks as advised to "A. K." in this issue, but slightly dust sponge cake with flour of sulphur twice a week, and on these days add as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepennypiece to the water. Well mix twenty drops of glacial acetic acid in a teaspoonful of glycerine, keep in small phial, and slightly moisten bare skin with it twice a week for a month.

A LOST RUDDER (T. W. B. H.).—How or when did the bird lose its tail? If the quills were shed normally, whether from force or otherwise, a new tail should be plainly visible within three weeks, and the feathers be fully matured in six weeks from time of losing the old ones. Feed the bird for a month as advised to "A. K.," in this issue, and also give it a little of the paste advised to "F. E." last week. It will be useless mating the bird until it is in song and good condition. There is plenty of time to get it into condition. You would do well to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and read up details before the mating season arrives.

LIVER. (A. M. J.).—It would have been better to describe how the birds are affected. The probability is that your room is too chilly for them until more acclimatised. Keep them moderately warm for a few weeks, until temperature outside is more settled. Give staple diet of plain canary. Every second day give a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with maw and gold of pleasure seed in equal parts, and on alternate days a piece of banana and a small teaspoonful of scalded rape. Twice a week give a pinch of mixed seed as advised to "Norrie," and a leaf of dandelion or watercress daily. In the water give six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and dandelion juice, and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week. Afterwards give six drops of tincture of gentian and four each of tincture of calumba and dandelion juice every second day for a week. Then repeat the two weeks in same order. Give the forward birds a diet of plain canary and a liberal supply of green food, but no dandelion, and add a little sulphate of soda to the water for a day or two. Don't prick the skin of bird that is puffed out unless you are quite certain there is air beneath. Try two weeks' treatment as advised in first part of this reply instead.

BAD VENTILATION (A. E. M., Puzzled).—The fault of the "sweating" of your bird room undoubtedly lies in the ventilation, which is ineffective for some reason or other. I am not clear how the ventilator from the front and up the back wall is supposed to work; neither do I see any necessity whatever for the latter. The louvre on top should have been at the highest part of roof and not half way down slope, and I should have preferred placing the slots in the ends, instead of back and front, where one set seems higher than the other. However, as it may be very difficult to alter this, try the following alterations, and then let me know how it works. Cut off the ventilator up back wall entirely. Then place a grid ventilator in the centre of the room floor, of course, cutting out a space from carpet or lino, if any is on floor, so that grid remains uncovered, and make a clear course from this grid to the inlet in front underneath widow. I see no reason why this should not work well and provide quite sufficient ventilation to prevent "sweating." Try it, anyway, for a month, and let me hear result. You will, of course, keep vanes in grid open more or less as necessity demands. Will keep sketch by me.

SWELLINGS ON NECK AND RED MITES (Wilkie, Glasgow).—It depends upon the nature and position of the swellings whether they are serious. You should have described them fully. Examine them closely, and if they appear to be sacs of air, pierce each one with a clean needle and gently expel it. Give a crystal of sulphate of soda in water for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week to tone it up. You might have seen red mite destroyers given in article in Birthday Number. Fir tree oil is excellent; so is essence of quassia; Izal, Jeyes', or carbolic fluid are most effective for touching ends of perches, joints, etc., so is paraffin or turpentine with or without a little camphor dissolved in it, but these are more malodorous. A solution of camphor in methylated spirit is A1 but is apt to destroy varnish.

A MOPY NORWICH (S. T. Munday).—Keep the bird caged alone whilst under treatment. Keep in comfortable place, free from draughts, and heated impure air, but not overheated. For one week limit the diet to plain canary only, and a liberal supply of green food, dandelion or watercress, and add to drinking water six drops each of syrup of rhubarb and dandelion juice, and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day. After this give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and a pinch of the seed mixture advised to "Norrie" twice a week on the alternating days. Continue the staple of plain canary, and give a little green food daily. In the water add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day in the second week.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.,

WHAT BIRD? (D.P.H.).—I shall have to trespass on your patience for another week, as I have been unable to get up to London for skin comparisons with your description, but hope to do so in a few days, and will duly give result in this column.

TO GO WITH BUDGERIGARS, ETC. (R.M.).—The small foreign Finches are not safe with Budgerigars, sooner or later they get maimed or killed by the Budgies' mischievous play, and I cannot advise their inclusion, for you will readily see, that when the young of four pairs begin to leave the nest the aviary will be pretty well swamped with them. Why not put in one pair of Cockatiels or Rosella Parrakeets so as to vary the colour? You could put in a cock Red-crested Cardinal, and a pair of Java Sparrows, as these birds are well able to look after themselves. In addition to the seed, the Cardinal would require ripe fruit (also very wholesome for the others), and two or three mealworms per diem.

CHEAP SEEDEATERS (A.H.).—You leave me at a little disadvantage, as you do not say how or where you intend to keep them. Neither are the most freely imported species the brightest, and among these, such as Firefinches and Cordon Bleus are very delicate when first imported, and I do not recommend you, as a beginner, to include them in your series. The following look well as a series (I have put the most showy first, but even these with the least colour are very pretty, and look very contrasty among the others; their value ranges from 2/- to 4s. 6d. pair): Avadavats, Orange-cheeked, Golden-breasted, and Common Waxbills, Bengalese, Spice Finch, Black-headed, White-head, Three-coloured, and Bronze Mannikins, Silverbills, Green Singing Finch, and Cutthroats. You ought to include the Zebra Finch, but their present value is 7/6 per pair. Weavers can be bought out of colour for about 2/6 to 3/6 a pair, and the cocks become gorgeous creatures during the breeding season, when clad in nuptial plumage.

BLUE-WING LOVEBIRD (X. Rays).—Passerine Parrakeet is the proper name for the Blue-winged Lovebird (Psittacula passerina) Canary, millet spray millet, oats, greenfood, grit, cuttlebone, and water will meet the full requirements of this species. They need a large husk or enclosed box, with a hole in one side for entrance, for a nest receptacle, into which they will carry exhausted millet sprays, twigs, leaves, or any similar rubbish that is accessible and form their nest therewith. No, they are not rare, but there are intervals during which they come to hand very sparingly. The hen is all green, and that is also the principal colouration of the male, but he has rich ultramarine-blue on his wings and rump. If in good condition and in every way perfect, there is no reason why they should not catch the judge's eye; unless they were up against a lot of very rare species.

ESTABLISHING PEKIN ROBINS (T.).—Several attempts have been made on large estates to establish the species in this country, but the birds seem ultimately to disappear, though in several instances they have bred and reared young near to where they were liberated. A friend had a pair which proved troublesome in his aviary, and turned them loose (Sussex); he saw no more of them, but a year later a pair of young birds were captured within a mile, evidently the progeny of the pair he liberated, and they are still in captivity and doing well. You cannot check the movements of birds; even resident species move from one locality to another for various economic reasons. Personally, I do not think the Pekins disappear either from want of food or the rigours of English weather, but rather that they move about from one district to another, and are either re-caught or shot off! I consider them to be as hardy as the Redbreast.

BLACK-HEADED NUN (M.L.F.S.).—You should isolate this bird; that is, cage it separately, till it is in decent feather again. The trouble is very near akin to eczema in the human, and you must seek to purify its blood by keeping the bowels moving quite freely and giving the bird a tonic. Half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water is a cooling and safe laxative; give this as often as is required to keep the bowels moving very freely; at the same time there must be no appearance of diarrhoea. On the days you are not giving the magnesia, put the same quantity of bynophosphates in the water. Anoint the bare areas with a little Zambuk or clean vaseline, but you must only use a little, not sufficient to run amongst and grease the plumage. Give only white millet, canary seed, spray, millet, such green food as it will take, grit, and cuttlebone; encourage it to take a bath.

TIT-BITS FOR BUDGERIGARS (A Young Reader).—You will have to judge this for yourself; in the summer, seeding grass has a great attraction, and also a piece of a millet spray would prove a great attraction, but the tastes of individuals vary considerably. You should soon be able to ascertain the particular fancies of your birds. I have never sought to tame Budgies—that is, to make them finger-tame cage pets, when I used to keep a crowd of these birds in the aviary; they would fly around when I went in with the refilled food vessels and perch all round the seed saucers, and the other birds would dispose themselves about my head and arms. I should let them have a fly round the room occasionally as lack of wing exercise is detrimental to their health, and they are quite as likely to come to hand when free in the room, or more so, than when in the cage.

GREY PARROT (H. Woolvern).—Spray the bird about twice weekly with quassia solution (use the solution tepid, and choose a genial day for the purpose; it is better to postpone the operation during severe weather. So long as the voidings are not watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the water. Treat the bird as above for a month, and then report progress. The vegetables you name are quite in order providing you give them without gravy or other fats. The tastes of individuals vary considerably: supply as much fruit as it will eat. Give the following seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet, one pint each hemp and oats, half a pint each paddy rice, dāri, and sunflower seeds; add a few chillies and a gill of Parrot grit, and well mix the whole together. There is no charge for replies in this column unless a reply per post is required (see rules).

PARADISE WHYDAHS, ETC. (Tobacco).— (1) cock Paradise Whydah is slightly larger, the colours are a little brighter than those of the hen, and the markings are more distinct, and the light eye streak of the male is quite a much more distinct buff than that of the hen. See notes in Birthday issue under "Seven Foreign Beauties." (2) Some Cordon Bleus are bred annually in English aviaries, but Lavender Finches very rarely so. (3) I have never found Cockatiels to harm the smallest Waxbills, but the Budgerigars in their mischievous play often maim and sometimes kill small finch-like birds. Saffron Finches often prove very pugnacious in a mixed aviary, and Weavers are often troublesome by their obstreperous demeanour during the breeding season, but as a rule no harm is done unless the aviary is overcrowded.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

TWO MALE BIRDS (G. B. S.).—It would be a false step—in fact a serious mistake—to put in the cock Mealy Redpoll, as you suggest, leave well alone; this means, let the hen Bullie and cock Greenie have the whole of the partitioned-off space to themselves. I hope you will have better fortune this year should another Hybrid result.

A MATING (Cutler).—It is quite likely that you might get young from the Roller cock and hen Greenfinch. They would not be likely to be of any particular value, however, except as songsters, unless, of course, a good light Mule turned up. Very nice Hybrids can be bred from the hen Greenie, and either a cock Goldfinch or cock Siskin. Get any of the "Nutshell" booklets which deal with these birds; they will tell you all about the feeding.

A SCARED GOLDFINCH (H. Barnett).—It is the cage that is to blame. Open wire cages, of the "waggon" type, are not suitable for Goldies, and especially birds that want to be got steady. The correct type of cage is that known as the Finch stock cage. It is illustrated in the "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch; and this, too, will give you full information about feeding the bird and getting it into breeding condition. Don't hang the bird in or too near the window, but select a well-lighted spot on the wall adjacent to the window.

LINNET LOOSE IN FEATHER (D. Taylor).—The bird should be very lightly sprayed every morning with water, into which a few drops of Scrubb's cloudy ammonia have been mixed (5 or 6, not more, to a breakfast cupful). Make absolutely certain that parasites (red mite or grey lice) are not troubling the bird. Give a course of Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking water—a small teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls. Give this fresh daily for a week, then on alternate days (plain water in between) over a period of a fortnight. This treatment will soon remedy matters.

LINNET AILING (E.B.).—Give this bird, for three days, in two tablespoonfuls of water, four drops of syrup of buckthorn and 12 drops of taraxacum (dandelion juice). You can obtain a small supply of these from any chemist. Follow with a course of the citrate of iron and quinine crystals, but keep this up for at least a week. Drop the linseed and hemp for the time being, and add teazle to the stock mixture. Do not give niger, either, but add gold of pleasure, maw and plantain to the other seeds (the "tit-bits").

A BLACK BULLFINCH (M.V.S.).—It most certainly is not natural for a Bullfinch to moult out black, but cases of this nature are not at all uncommon. The cause is more or less obscure, but it is due to some chemical change in the colour pigments supplied by the blood. It is said that feeding too liberally on hemp-seed conduces to this state of affairs; i.e., that if you were to moult a Bullie entirely on hemp you would be likely to have him come with black plumage, but I have known birds that had no hemp, or only a few grains once or twice a week, to come out more or less melanistic; therefore other influences operate as well as hemp.

THE CASE OF A GOLDFINCH (J. Smith).—Get some Kerol ointment from a chemist and with this gently anoint the place twice daily (morning and evening) with a tiny smear, applying it on the tip of a finger, and rubbing only the way in which the feathers should lie. Do this for four days, and then await results. The ointment can be warmed to make it "work" more easily and freely. I am frequently answering questions of this nature. All the information on the feeding that you can possibly want you will find in the "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch (post free 2½d.). It is given at greater length than I can possibly do in this column; note reply given A. Townley this week.

GOLDFINCHES AND BREEDING CONDITION (A. Townley).—All steady Goldfinches, and particularly house-moulted birds, ought to be singing well now. Still, the Goldie is naturally a late breeder, May generally being the month he selects to "keep house" in. House-moulted birds come into breeding condition earlier than those in field plumage. Feed your birds on the following lines, this is the seed mixture I am using at present for my own Goldies: Teazle four parts, Canary three parts, linseed one part, summer rape half part. I give some good sound hemp seed frequently, and vary this with sunflower and safflower. Crack lightly by passing them through a seed-crushing machine. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three ounces, cornflower, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, and gold of pleasure, one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds I have found by long experience help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads are essential also, to bring them along into breeding condition. When they are in full, vigorous song, and drooping and spreading their tails and wings as they "sway" to and fro on the perch in the manner so peculiar to this species, then Goldfinches can be looked upon as "fit" for pairing up, especially so if they have a clear beak (free from any dark mark at the tip of the upper mandible).

BREEDING MEALWORMS (Mr. Hennie).—You may not have seen it, but nevertheless I have frequently given the method of breeding mealworms. Get a biscuit tin from a confectioner (about 2lb. size). It should not be too high, but should have as much "floor space" as possible. Bore with a bradawl two rows of holes right round the sides at the top, within an inch or an inch and a half of the lid. Cut three pieces of coarse sacking so that they will, when folded once over, drop flat into the tin, leaving about three-quarters of an inch space between each edge and the sides of the tin. Dry these thoroughly before the fire. Get a supply (pennyworth or so) of bran and barley meal. Put a layer on the bottom of the tin, about an inch thick. Put a piece of folded sacking on this. Then put another layer of bran; then another piece of sacking—and so on, arranging to fill the tin not more than three-parts full, and to have a piece of sacking at the top. Then turn a pint of mealworms (or as many as you feel disposed to invest in) into the tin. Put in a handful of fresh meal occasionally, under the top layer of sacking. It takes about twelve months to get into full breeding swing, i.e., for the mealworms to turn into beetles, beetles to lay eggs in the folds of sacking, eggs to hatch, and young mealworms to mature. In the summer time it is often possible to buy a quantity of beetles from advertisers along with the worms, and one would save time by so doing. Many put beer-soaked rags (bung rags), dead birds, dog biscuits, bones, etc., in their mealworm boxes; but, with the exception of the first-named, I never do so myself. Disturb the breeding box as little as possible, and always keep it in a fairly warm, dry place, such as a cupboard at the side of fireplace. The latter is the secret of success. In the winter change the contents into a new tin (when this becomes necessary), sifting the "dust" at the bottom of the old one and throwing it away.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post: it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A. Hawke.—Pneumonia, arising as the result of a chill.

A. P.—Congestion of the liver with inflammation of the bowels, due to irritant poisons; probably the result of decomposition of some portion of the food.

W. E. Giles.—The symptoms you describe are indicative of pain, due to irritation of the bowels. In these cases there is often marked increase in appetite, which is sometimes abnormal. Beyond a few patches of inflammation of the intestines, the bird was quite healthy, and I have no hesitation in stating that the bird was quite healthy when you received it.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

Rugby.—The grit is good, but should be mixed with sand for use on cage floors. The canary seed seems to be an excellent sample, well-ripened, clean, and "fat," though not particularly large.

Long Tom.—The dead bird is an Orange-breasted Waxbill.

R. Tattersall.—We regret to say that we cannot possibly reprint the matter you mention, but we can send you the back number containing it for three-halfpence in stamps.

H. J. Matthews.—We shall hope to find a corner for the photos in a week or so's time. Many thanks for sending them.

W. H. Phipps.—Thanks for photo, which we will utilise in due course.

G. S. Parfrey.—We have illustrated this hopper before.

Whaler.—The keeping of Goldfish is dealt with in the "Nutshell" booklet on the Aquarium (post free 2½d., from our manager).

J. O. Oates.—Look in Mr. St. John's query columns for a reply to your question.

E. J. D.—We thank you for your courteous letter and will draw our artist's attention to the point you raise.

A. O., J. Newman, Miss Junior, G. S. Closs, E. T. and Others.—Thanks for the newspaper cuttings, for which we will find a corner if space permits.

K. Older.—Case heard 30th March, 1911, in the Divisional Court, before the Lord Chief Justice and Justices Ridley and Bray. An appeal by the R.S.P.C.A. against the decision given in re the Society v. Bennet. Judges held that birds were not recently caught, and Mr. Justice Bray said that he should be very slow to find that any bird which had been taken for 14 days was "recently taken." Original case reported in "C.B.," October 19th, 1910, and the appeal April 8th, 1911. The Sheffield case was reported in "C.B.," October 28th, 1911 (heard October 23rd).

Breeding the Napoleon Weaver in Captivity.

Sir,—I must apologise for the error in my article, and I thank Miss G. H. Anderson for correcting me. I can quite understand her surprise, as quite recently I had to correspond with her on this matter. The article recording the successful breeding of Pyromelana afra, only appeared in December, 1912, issue of "Bird Notes," of which I am the honorary editor; further it also fell to my lot quite recently to forward Lady Poltimore the F.B.C. Breeding Medal for her success in breeding this species. I cannot understand how I overlooked so recent an occurrence, but, the article in question was written against time, and during a period of great pressure.

Prize Money at Liverpool (Anfield, Everton) Show.

Sir,—In reference to a letter appearing in last week's issue of Cage Birds, referring to prize money at the Anfield, Everton and Dist. Society's show, we would like to state that prize money has been paid to all exhibitors that won at our show, and we would advise any exhibitor who claims any further indulgence to write to the secretary, and his or her case will receive every attention. We look upon the letter signed by Mr. Davenport as being totally uncalled for, and it can only have one object, namely, to nullify the efforts of a society which is destined to become one of the most influential in the country. We should like to state that the prize money due to Mr. Davenport was only 1s. 6d., and that your readers are aware of the cause of any delay in paying out. We append below a letter from your correspondent, Mr. Davenport, and we are pleased to say he has joined the Society.

R. B. Wright, Hon. Sec.
M. E. Wilson, Chairman.

(Copy of Letter)

Sir,—I am very sorry I wrote to your paper, Cage Birds, in reference to the prize money due to me and Mr. Jones. I am now perfectly satisfied that Mr. R. B. Wright has done all it was possible to do in regard to the paying out of same, and I humbly withdraw my letter and all imputations against him or the Anfield, Everton and Dist. C.B. Society.

W. Davenport.

Witness: M. E. Wilson, Chairman.

Short Entries at Scottish Shows.

Are "Clique" Judges to Blame?

Sir,—Allow me to thank "Plainhead" for the compliment he pays me in the first part of his letter. My hands are clean. By command of our Editor, I will be as brief and to the point as possible (1) Yes, I believe there are clique judges, especially in the Border Fancy, and they have been very prominent this last two years. Three years ago "Plainhead" was of the same opinion, as he told me himself. (2) Why does "Plainhead" get behind our Scottish judges and try to belittle me? I did not say that our judges were all "cliquers." Please read my letter over again and refresh your memory a bit. I may state I am glad there are plenty of honest and able judges in Scotland, and a good few in our own district and in Fifeshire. We can count the "clique" on one hand. (3) "Plainhead" puts out all his wrath on poor Logan, and only touches upon the other correspondents, who, by the way, have been harder on him than I have been. "Plainhead" says the Fife judges have given a good account of themselves, for their experience. I grant him there is some truth in that statement, but allow me to add that some of their experience is very meagre. He asks me if a judge should not show under another judge. Most certainly, yes, but I do object to judges visiting and revisiting one another's bird-room and then judging at the various shows. I quite admit that a judge cannot, and never will, please every one, but they can, if they like, be honest. I am not the author of a lot of things "Plainhead" asks me about. I refer him to his other correspondents. They can answer for themselves. (4) I will be frank with you, "Plainhead." I am the fancier who named the medal winners. I was right with three. Just come along to 23, High Street, and I will tell you the shows they were gained at. Your 1s. 6d. offer is no use to you now, I am afraid, if show committees do what one of the correspondents suggested last week. "Plainhead" must be very dense indeed if he cannot understand me. To refresh your memory, a week or two back a prominent judge (an older one than you) drew my attention to the latest one. Read over the Border criticism. I am sure Borders do not have feathers hanging down their legs. I believe you did win a 2nd in a class of live with a Plainhead lately, but really I did not know you had started Plainheads. In conclusion, Mr. Editor, for bluff and bluster I never read anything like it; "Plainhead" is a great shower of birds, but as for him being one of our oldest exhibitors, that must be taken with a pinch of salt. As a secretary, I think his first entry on the show bench I took. If he proves otherwise I will certainly apologise. As for putting up judges, that must be in his own district, as we in Dysart fight to get clear of them. My ideas of Scottish judges are good. "Plainhead's" wails about cowards are all tommy-rot. Keep to the point. James Logan.

Sir,—I have read all the letters on the above subject, and I thought when "Lover of Justice" set the ball a-rolling the Fancy were going to get some information; but, no. I think "Plainhead" has more time to write than he has to go to the station. The Fancy don't want to know about his troubles, everyone has enough of his own. As Mr. Logan is the only gentleman who has the courage to put his name to what he writes, I would ask him what he suggests to put a stop to clique judging. I shall give my ideas later on.

Wm. M. Hastings.

Several letters on this subject unavoidably held over until next week.

The Keeping and Breeding of Goldfinches.

Sir,—In answer to "Goldfinch Fancier" and his troubles with his Goldfinches going thin and dying. It would be to his advantage to try the following way of feeding whenever he notices them going thin, teazle and maw seed soaked in cold water for twenty-four hours, partly dried before giving to them. Also a few drops of Parrish's Chemical Food added to the drinking-water (glass drinker), seed mixture—hemp, teazle, maw, inga, linseed, an occasional pinch of lettuce seed, along with such wild seeds as thistle, hardheads, etc., but as for canary seed, I think it useless to give it at all to Goldfinches, as in my experience I have never had a Goldfinch that would take it. I also find the best and handiest cages are the box type, 15 inches long, 6 inches deep, sliding front, Scotch make. If "A Goldfinch Fancier" tries the feeding as above, I have no doubt he will save his birds. W. J. N. S.

British Birds in Captivity.

Some Information and Some Questions

Sir,—I should be very much obliged if any of your readers could assist me with a little information on the following points:—(1) In a standard work there is a statement that in the case of the male Wheatear "In the spring the change from the brown to the grey and black is effected by the wearing off of the brown tips and edges of all the feathers that were previously so coloured." I have a male Wheatear which is now moulting the feathers of the crown and the sides of the head—that is to say, the old feathers are falling and are being replaced by new feathers in the quill. What I want to ascertain is, which is the rule and which the exception? (2) Can anyone give me a definite instance of Chaffinches having nested and fully reared their young in either a cage or aviary? I have only come across one such statement, and that was very vague, and did not definitely claim that the young had been fully reared. I have more than once had broods of young hatched, but they have not been reared. (3) Lastly, does anyone know of a similar instance in the case of the Bramblefinch? I have never got further than eggs with this species, but Miss Welch, of Paignton, wrote me last summer (under date 17th August): "I have some Bramblefinches which have built in my aviary, and there are some young ones a few days old. What food would you give? The hen always seems to be looking for something, and she will eat anything in the way of mealworms, wasp-grubs and insects—she will come and take mealworms out of my hand." On the 21st August I received the following postcard: "You will be sorry to hear that the young Bramblefinches have departed. Things seemed to be going well for a bit; then she was always off the nest, looking for insects, as I thought; then she refused to sit on the nest at night, so I knew what was going to happen." I may add that Miss Welch's bird-room is below the level of the garden, and is therefore somewhat cold, and not very well lighted. The birds come up through a very small window on the level of the garden and have a peep at the sun in an out-door flight, which is not much larger than a fair-sized cage—the fact that Miss Welch's birds have always looked remarkably well and happy whenever I have had the pleasure of seeing them, and that so shy a breeder as the Bramblefinch should have nested under such conditions shows us that it does not do to have any cut and dried hard and fast ideas as to what is the best sort of aviary for keeping or breeding birds. Personally, I am very doubtful if it is any advantage to have heat in a bird-room, even for foreigners. I have recently fitted a hot-water radiator in my own bird-room, and have so far derived no advantage from it, except that my Nightingales came into full song in the middle of January—two months earlier than usual. Not even the harsh screams and cork-drawing effects, which a male Great Grey Shrike introduces into his song, can silence them. By the way, do any of your readers know of a hen Grey Shrike anywhere? I have advertised in vain.

Borrowed Birds at Darlington.

Sir,—I noticed a few weeks ago some letters concerning borrowed birds at Darlington show, and Mr. Carter wrote to ask the contributor to send him the name and address of the defaulter. Because he has not, by what Mr. Carter says last week, he is trying to make readers believe it is false. But I don't think it necessary to do so, as you have officials at the show, and they should have an idea of what breed of bird a member keeps, and if he asks at the meeting he will get to know if the member be a good fancier or a good sportsman. This is my first letter on the subject, and I would not have taken the trouble, but I would like to let them know there is someone else who knows about the affair, and I hope to see some more letters from other readers who know about it. My advice to Mr. Carter is to keep his eyes open and he will soon find out, and not say because he has not received any letter it must be false. I would like to see you find out the member, but I won't send his name.

Birds Lost or Stolen in Transit.

Sir,—Referring to the letter under this heading in your last issue it has often occurred to me to suggest through your paper a very simple expedient for detecting the tampering with show cases, and which is similar in idea to that of fastening the cases by means of leaden seals. The suggestion is for exhibitors, when sending their birds to a show, or when sending birds for sale, to seal up the box by simply sticking over the lid or opening of the box when packed one or two of the gummed "Live Bird" labels, familiar to all. This method certainly will not prevent birds being stolen or tampered with, but if the boxes on arrival are found to have the labels broken, it would do something towards locating where the tampering has been done, and it has the merit of simplicity and being much cheaper than using leaden seals. Exhibitors could use their own labels, they can be bought cheaply enough from your paper, or the show officials could lay in a stock and supply one or two along with class tickets to their exhibitors. When birds are returned from the show the stewards should seal up all the cases in a similar manner. If this were done, sealing up cages would seem unnecessary. Not one in 50 or 60 thousand birds exhibited are stolen from the cages at shows. Geo. W. F. Lythgoe.

CAN ALL BIRD SHOWS BE MADE TO PAY?

A Reply to the Article by Mr. Blincoe (Rochdale).

Sir,—It gives me very great pleasure to reply to Mr. Blincoe on the above subject. Knowing Mr. Blincoe personally and being an official of the Rochdale O.S. for six years, during my sojourn in Rochdale (of which society he is Secretary) I am naturally interested in his remarks. My answer is yes, in most cases; there may be odd instances where they will not prove a success, but in most instances I think the ventures will prove the opposite if my suggestions are carried out. To bring a show to a successful issue four things must be borne in mind (1) The selection of good officials; (2) good classification to meet the wants of the present day exhibitor; (3) consideration of exhibitors, and their exhibits; (4) to have the confidence and support of the nobility and public of the district. I will deal with these four items separately. The selection of competent and enthusiastic officials is really the foundation stone of success, so the greatest care should be taken in the selection of fanciers for their various duties. One fancier might make a good member of committee, when as a secretary he would be an absolute failure; the great thing is to have the right man in the right place. I am afraid at a good many society meetings Mr. Brown gets up and proposes Mr. Smith for a certain position merely because they are friends, without considering whether he is at all suitable, someone else seconds it, it is put to the meeting and carried, and in a good many cases they are hampered for 12 months with a useless official. Now for the second item, a good classification, without which there cannot be good entries. By this I do not mean 90 or 100 classes, but classes that are wanted by the exhibitor, and for that reason will naturally fill. I, like Mr. B., agree that there are far too many half-prizemoney classes at various shows. When I was in Rochdale I was always fighting against providing so many classes for the Lancashire Canary; these far too often for my liking read:—"Half prize-money only." But I was always unsuccessful with my protests. I was told that the Club was formed for the Lancashire fanciers. I pointed out that 20 or 30 years ago, when the Lancashire had its "creamy days," and they were bred in Rochdale and district almost like the Yorkshire is in Bradford to-day, this policy was correct. But times have changed. For that reason it would pay Rochdale, Oldham, and other societies in the district to alter the classification. The section that is coming to the front to-day is the British, and this is certainly worthy of consideration by all societies. I admit British exhibitors have not patronised Rochdale as they might. Consider the classification, however, and you have the problem solved. Take six classes off the Lancashire's and put them on to the British; you will then have the support of the British exhibitor. We will now take item No. 3. Consideration of exhibitors and their exhibits. There are far too many societies up and down the country that will promise anything to get entries, but when the entries are received all these promises are forgotten. Instead of birds arriving home perhaps on the Saturday evening as promised, they land during the Sunday, and even Monday morning. I personally have spent half the day in Rochdale station, and then not got my birds till the Monday. "All birds will be fed as requested;" another promise often made but very seldom carried out. This is a serious matter, especially in the Softbill and Foreign sections. I have in my mind now one of the largest shows in the country, where this promise was made. A certain owner arrived on the Saturday afternoon and found his exhibits (very valuable specimens) all but dead, they not having had any attention, and the food sent with instructions for feeding, was untouched. This show is naturally black-listed so far as the fancier I refer to is concerned. No doubt other exhibitors have had the same experience. I admit it is possible with a big entry to miss a bird or so, but if you make it one man's duty, a man who is interested in that particular variety, and hold him responsible, not many birds will miss being fed as instructed. I might say there are hundreds of exhibitors in various parts of the country who have been so disgusted with treatment received from societies that they have sold out their stock or made up their minds not to exhibit again. Now let us take my last suggestion. Confidence and support of the nobility and public. To commence you must have a figure-head for your society (one of the best known gentry in your district). Get him interested in your hobby, not only have his name as your president, but have his support at all your public functions, by that means you will find others in his sphere of life follow suit. Then come to your vice-presidents. Get as many as possible, but give them to understand you will look for their support when your All England Shows come round, and I am sure you will not apply in vain. They all bring grist to the mill. Get them also interested in your society and its doings. Remember they never come alone; people of that class always bring friends with them, and it is your officials' duty to add those names to the V.P.'s for the next year. We now come to the general public. They require as much looking up as the gentry, but, of course, in a different way. Get your members interested in ticket selling. Offer them a special for the one selling most tickets. It will cause competition and make them very keen. At our Sheffield All England Show, in November, 1912, the 6d. tickets sold totalled £21 14s. 6d. This shows what your members can do. Of course, in addition there was cash taken at door. I think, Mr. Editor, if these suggestions were brought forward before committees they would no doubt in a good many cases be adopted, and in some cases improved upon. I must admit that I do not agree with Mr. B.'s suggestion as to judging by points cards, and don't think it would work. If my suggestions prove of benefit to any society I am sure I shall be delighted that Mr. Blincoe opened up this subject.

Proposed New Society for Glasgow.

Sir,—I have been approached by a large number of fanciers in the North Western district of Glasgow, with the view of starting a new cage bird club. A meeting will be held in the Blythswood Halls, 236, Great Western Road, on Feb. 13, at 8 p.m. All fanciers in the surrounding districts are cordially invited to attend.

Late Entries at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—For upwards of twenty years I have patronised the above show with several entries, and on every occasion I have sent my entry form on the Monday following the closing date. Hitherto the authorities have not made any complaint whatever, but this week I have met with the unfortunate experience of having my entries returned, the reason being "too late." I am extremely surprised at this, bearing in mind the fact that the conditions of entries, as per schedule, have remained the same for several years past. If any other exhibitor has sent entries on the same date, I should be glad of the information as to whether they were accepted or returned.

String for Net Making.

Sir,—Seeing G. Gibson wishes to know how to arm nets, I will try to explain same as simply as possible. First run your line through the end meshes to height required, then attach second line to this at intervals of about a foot, allowing same number of meshes to the foot, then when both ends are finished run your top and bottom lines in in the same manner; but do not tie second line until you have squared your net properly. Two clothes posts in the garden are very handy for squaring purposes. Attach your top line to post and stretch net to full length and tie other end of line to other post; then lift your bottom line and attach in the same manner. Be sure and allow plenty of netting, so as not to cause any draw on the top line (it is always best to have a little bagging to your nets). When you have competed the squaring you can attach your second line and your net will be ready for rope. This will be passed through the loops made by the double line; the double line at the bottom is for pegging to the ground. I hope I have made this clear to G. Gibson.

Scotch Fancies at the Ulster O.A. (Belfast) Show.

Sir,—Your reporter in prefacing his remarks on the above show made use of this quotation: "Then again, in specials, the Scotch Fancy section claims the largest, although there is always a loss on the classes." I and others who take an interest in the variety referred to, think this is not correct, or certainly not borne out by the facts in the recent catalogues, and in all fairness to the breed it should be refuted. Your reporter mentions the fact that the entries were 15 short of last year's show, but he failed to mention the fact that the Scotch Fancy were 22 up on the previous year's show, otherwise he would have had to record a falling off of 37 entries. Then again your reporter finds fault with the allocating of "specials." I find the Norwich section had 25 specials allocated to 23 classes, and the Scotch Fancy 15 to 12 classes. Of these two were presented by a Club Show that is run by Scotch Fancy men, and all the others with one exception by Scotch Fancy admirers, and I believe allocated as desired by the donors. I find further that so far from the Scotch Fancy being run at a loss to the Show committee, the difference between the entry fees and prize-money shows a small credit balance. On going over the catalogue I find the committee had 2s. from the Scotch Fancies, 8s. 6d. from the Norwich (with 23 classes), 4s. from Mules, and sixpence from the British Bird section, while they lost 8s. 6d. on Yorkshire. I think most readers of your valuable and interesting journal will agree that your reporter is not friendly, nor even fair, to the "Bird of Circle," and if at his mercy it would certainly come in for a small share of the loaves and fishes. While touching on this subject, permit me to say that it was Scotch Fancy men who pioneered and ran the shows in Ireland for many years, and at the show of 1912 every Scotch Fancy exhibitor, with one exception, was a member of the Association.

I also take the liberty of saying, that while the Scotch Fancy had 22 up, the Norwich had only two, the entries in 1911 being 172, and in 1912, 174; whereas the Scotch Fancy were in 1911, 64, and in 1912, 86. I am taking my figures from the published catalogues.

A Cycle Club for Liverpool Fanciers.

Sir,—An enthusiastic send-off was given to above at the Marlborough Cafe, Dale Street, on Jan. 03. Letters of regret for non-attendance were read from Mr. E. Battersby (Liverpool representative of the N.C.U.), V. H. Deacon, E. Lawson and F. Handley. Rules were drawn up; first run to commence at Easter. It was thought advisable to leave appointment of officers over until next meeting, which will be held at above cafe on Feb. 19th. This does not clash with any bird meeting. Business over, we had a very good wind-up in a social. The chairman, pro tem, Mr. Daniels, stood coffees, and some fine songs were sung by Messrs. Stewart, O'Connor and Brady, Draper, Jones, Malone, Southworth, and Howcroft. We are looking forward to some pleasant spins this spring to study our pets in their wild state. Intending members please send their names; subs. only 1s. 6d. per annum.

Can Bronchial Affections be Cured?

Sir,—In reply to your correspondents, re bronchial affections in cage birds I have found the following most useful in affecting a cure:—Get from your chemist a pennyworth each of glycerine, paregoric (poison), oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, add one pint of boiling water and three or four tablespoonfuls of honey. When cold it is ready for use. Dose half a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water till cured. This is equally good for anyone troubled with the above complaint, dose a teaspoonful three or four times a day, or oftener if required. Another excellent remedy is syrup of coltsfoot, white horehound, and black horehound, any herbalist should be able to supply this; otherwise, in season pull a handful of leaves of each, boil in a quart of water, strain, and add honey till it is similar to syrup. Dose, a teaspoonful in drinking water till cured; this also is exceedingly good for all troubled with asthma. The syrup boiled in milk relieves consumptives who have a distressing cough. Garlic or onions are also very useful in some cases, boil two bulbs of either in a teaspoonful of vinegar and half a pint of water for ten minutes and add a little honey. When cold place the bulbs between wires of cage for the birds to peck at. Should they refuse this I give them the syrup to drink, if one of these does not affect a cure try the other. I find what cures one wont cure another. I intend to write an article on the medicinal properties of wild seeds and berries most beneficial to cage birds soon.

A Scottish Roller Fancier Leaving for Canada.

Sir,—The members of the Scottish Roller C.C. are losing an enthusiastic member who has done a lot of hard work in spreading the Fancy throughout Scotland. The member referred to is Mr. John Thompson, of Stevenston, N.B. I have just received a letter stating that he sails for Canada on the 26th April, and that he must dispose of his entire stock of valuable Rollers, cages, outdoor houses, etc., particulars of which he intends to advertise in the columns of Cage Birds. The Fancy is losing a valuable friend, as he was foremost in helping to make the club a success. Mr. Thompson obtained nearly all the principal prizes at the Scottish National show, held in Edinburgh.

A Forrest, Hon. Sec.

The Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—I regret that, owing to a miscalculation of the Saturdays in November, I gave the wrong dates of the club show of the Belfast Norwich, Crest and Yorkshire Canary Club. The proper dates should be Friday and Saturday, November 14 and 15 (not 21 and 22, as previously given). Thus we do not clash with Lurgan nor any other fixture.

James E. Adams, President.

Sir,—In reference to "Wide Awake's" letter, I should like to say that Holywood is not sleeping. But they are very much disgusted with many so-called fanciers and exhibitors, especially of the "Wide Awake" type. We do not cry, nor have we cried, about clashing, and, as I stated in my letter to Cage Birds last year, it is immaterial to Holywood when show dates are fixed. We fixed ours two years ago, and we hold it on principle. That is what cannot be said for a good many, and if we change our date it will be to suit ourselves, not them. In reference to not supporting other shows, I should like to say that the members did support, as far as they were able, for, owing to unforeseen circumstances such as family bereavements and sickness, the members concerned had no inclination to show birds. I may say that they only showed at Holywood as a matter of necessity and obligation to their society. Now I will candidly admit that we are not as wide awake as some people, for if we were we should not allow all and sundry to compete for our specials without any charge whatsoever, and give free admittance for exhibitors to the show at any time. Further, there was neither time, trouble, nor money spared to do all that was possible for every exhibitor. He says, "You can bet your life you won't find a Holywood bird in open or novice competition." Well, a sportsman or gentleman would not have said it. For proof, the previous year our members' birds were shown at Dublin, Banbridge, Belfast, Newtownards and Bangor, and all members were novices. It is busybodies of "Wide Awake's" type that not only tend to ruin the Fancy, but cause an endless amount of friction and ill feeling amongst fanciers at large and the best of friends. Now in reference to "Looker On's" letter, I should like to say that the Holywood Society sincerely regret that Mr. Morgan's birds did not arrive home on the Saturday instead of the Monday. I can vouch that they were sent from Belfast Station on the understanding that they would arrive that night safely. How they were detained on the journey, of course, we cannot explain, and Holywood was in no way to blame. I trust that Mr. Morgan and everyone concerned will please accept this intimation as correct. I should have answered before, only I was away from home, and this was the first intimation that I received that anything was wrong, for certainly Mr. Morgan never complained to us in any way.

The Secretaryship of Clapham Cage Bird Association.

Sir,—On Monday evening last, at a well-attended meeting of the Clapham and District C.B.A., at headquarters, it was the unanimous wish of those present that I should fill the vacant position as Hon. Sec. to the Association, but, owing to other ties, I regret I am unable to accept this office. However, I have promised to see to the work of the Pair and Finch show, Feb. 22. I feel confident of a good show in at least 30 classes. Amongst the special prize donors are Miss Hall, Messrs. Vale, Maxwell, Yeoman, Campbell, Askew, Silverthorne, Snook, Whitt, Hose, Emms, Wildbore, Healey, Whittome. We also have two gold medals, two silver, and two gold centre, for competition. Judge, J. Robson. The show room will be the Clock House Hotel, Clapham Park Road (private entrance).

ABERDEEN O.S.

The officials appointed for 1913 are: Pres., Mr. J. Hector; vice-pres., Mr. J. Balfour; sec. and treas., Mr. J. Bryson; auditors, Messrs. W. Allan and W. Allison. The 58th annual show is to be held on the 12th and 13th Dec. in the Music Hall. Mr. John McLay (Kirkintilloch) and Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh) have been appointed to judge.—J. Bryson, Sec.

WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

Annual meeting, held at Oddfellows' Hall, Morley Street, Jan. 21st. Balance-sheet showed a loss of £5 on the year's working, but society has £25 in band. The following business was transacted, viz., date of annual show, Oct. 14th and 15th; judges, Mr. Robson, Norwich, Crest, and Crestbreds; Mr. Battye, remaining classes. Decided to have a discussion on "Show Matters, with Suggestions for Improving Annual Show," at next meeting, Feb. 18th.—Thos. Pope, hon sec.

HUDDERSFIELD O.S.

Mr. Moss gave a very good lecture on Feb. 3rd, which was very much appreciated by the few members present—hardly a good enough attendance for the occasion. The question time came, and was keenly enjoyed by all. Mr. Gledhill got up to ask a question, and gave nearly as good a lecture as Mr. Moss. A few interesting remarks were made regarding pedigree inbreeding, double buffing, and double yellowing. Mr. Moss said that when he was going down in size he double buffed. Last season he had, he thought, bred the best buff pink-eyed cock living from a double-buffed marked buff hen. Mr. Gledhill said he knew a man who double-buffed, and talk about bird 7 inches long—he had them 7½ at least; but they had feathers like clocking hens. As regards double-yellowing, Mr. Moss said it was all right for Norwich, as it was good for colour. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Moss, who replied and said be only wished there had been a full meeting. Absent members missed something.—A. Lawford.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, Feb. 1, Mr. H. J. Mennard in the chair. The auditors, Messrs. F. Farrar and E. Middleton, remarked on the able manner in which the society's accounts bad been kept, and after balance sheet had been read by chairman, which showed a cash balance in hand of £15 0d. 4d., same was passed as highly satisfactory. Forming of syllabus was the next item. It was decided we hold a pair show at headquarters, March 1, judges: Messrs. C. E. Hall and J. Owen; entrance fee, 3d. per cage, all returned. In addition, 2s. special will be given for most points in each class: Champ. Yorks., champ. Nor., Mule or Hyb., A.O.V. Can., nov. Yorks., and nov. Nor.. It is hoped members will show their appreciation by a good entry. In addition to the various lectures, a judging competition will be held. Dates of shows are: June 7th, F.F. show, at headquarters; July 5th, young birds, St. George's; Oct. 10th and 11th, annual open at Salone Lecture Hall; Nov. 1st, cup show, St. George's; Dec. 26th, cup show, St. George's; the latter four shows count for section gold medals and members' specials. Messrs. E. Norton, W. Hornby, D. McMillan, J. Smith, and J. Sykes, promised valuable specials, which, along with those already received, will comprise a very nice list. We offer a hearty invitation to Leeds and District fanciers to come and join us; entrance fee is 1/-; subscriptions, 6d. per month. Mr. Ramsden was unanimously elected a member. Many capital ideas were suggested by members present, which will if responded to by all the members, bring further success to the society. List of officials for 1913 are: Pres., Councillor N. G. Morrison; committee chairman, Mr. H. J. Mennard; vice-chair, Mr. T. Baldwinson; Messrs. C. E. Hall, J. Owen, W. Johnson, W. Bristow, F. Farrar, J. Sykes, W. H. Norton, A. G. Rhodes, J. Chambers, E. Hattersley, H. Chew, and E. Middleton; hon. treasurer, Mr. E. Norton; assist. hon. sec., Mr. J. P. Moir; hon. sec., W. A. Wilson. Full details for shows, etc., will be published in syllabus, and same will be posted to each member in due course.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Feb. 1, in Church Hall, Hamsterley, Mr. G. Barkas in the chair. Seeing that Hartlepool C.B.S. is altering its show date, we still intend keeping our old date, Oct. 25, instead of Nov. 15. Secretaries please note this. It was also passed to hold a first feather show on July 12.—E. Jameson, Sec.

GRIMSBY O.S.

King, H. Oliver, H. Harding, G. Wood, J. Siddle, A. Cartwright, W. Watson, D. Sadler, H. Beaumont, sen. Programme for the year drawn up and judges appointed for table shows. WAKEFIELD O.S.

Annual general meeting held Jan. 18, the attendance being fairly good, and a large amount of business got through. After preliminary items were disposed of, the balance-sheet for the year was dealt with and passed. It was very gratifying to find there was a small balance in hand after paying out all prize-money to the members scoring most points at members' shows, six prizes being set aside for this purpose. The election of officers followed, when the following were found to be duly elected by vote of all present: Chairman, H. Daniels, re-elected; secretary, J. Isherwood, re-elected; all members to form committee. A tie having taken place between Messrs. C. Parks and J. Isherwood for members' cup, each having scored 49 points at the three shows, it was arranged that each hold it six months, but not to count as one of the three wins for winning cup outright. As this is the first year for the present cup, new members joining will be able to start level with old members. Intending members will be welcome, and it will be advisable to join as early as possible.—J. Isherwood.

Heggie, 86 points; runner-up, George MacRobbie, 58 points; special for most points (all entries) was won by donor, Mr. Heggie, with 189 points, but was handed over by him to runner-up, Mr. Geo. LEIGH C.B.S.

Annual dinner and presentation of prizes held Jan. 25, at the headquarters, Railway Hotel, when about 32 sat down to a good dinner, catered for by our president's wife, Mrs. Twentyman. After dinner, the room was got ready for the prize distribution, and our entertainment. Mr. Taylor (vice-pres.) took the chair, and everything went on very nicely. During his remarks he said he hoped the society would keep on prospering with the same friendly spirit amongst the members that had always been shown since he joined the society, and he hoped every member would have a good breeding season so that we could have some good shows and keen competition in the struggle for the cup. He then handed over the prizes, and said there were one or two prizes he had set out to win, but he had just got beaten, but he would try and give them a good run next time. The prizes and winners were as follows:—Cup and locket, W. Hulme, 33 points; runner-up shield, H. Taylor, 31; medal best Crest 1912, J. Lomas; medal most first prizes 1912, H. We concluded a very pleasant evening by singing "Auld Lang Syne."—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec.

INVERNESS O.A.

33rd annual general meeting held in the Crown Mission Hall, Jan. 28th, A. Smith, Esq., "Lochiel Arms" (President) took the chair over a good attendance. Annual report and financial statement for 1912 was submitted, which showed the Association to be on a very sound financial basis. On the motion of Mr. Edw. Todd, seconded by Mr. Robert Duncan, the balance-sheet was unanimously adopted as read. Mr. A. Smith intimated that owing to business pressure he would be unable to stand for re-election as President, and thanked the members of the committee for the loyal support given to him during his term of office. On the motion of Mr. John McNaughton, seconded by Mr. Harcombe, Mr. E. Chisholm was unanimously elected President, Mr. E. Todd vice; T. Sutherland, sec.; Mr. W. Innes, treas.; Messrs. J. Connachie and J. McNaughton were unanimously re-elected auditors. The following were added to the Management Committee: H. Darke, G. Turner, W. Simpson, and F. Fraser. Several minor matters of business were discussed and disposed of. A special vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring President, who suitably replied, and vacated the chair in favour of Mr. E. Chisholm, who, on taking the chair, thanked the members for the high honour they had conferred on him, and said that he would do all in his power for the interests of the Association. Several important matters were remitted to the committee, with full powers. Next committee meeting, February 26th. Votes of thanks closed one of the best meetings held by the Association.—Robert Duncan (Reporter).

ALNWICK C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held in the Temperance Hotel, Jan. 30. The chair, owing to the unavoidable absence of J. W. Allan, Esq., president (who is at present suffering from a rather serious illness), was occupied by Mr. W. Straughan. The balance sheet, presented by H. P. Staig, treas., was found to be very satisfactory, the balance being far in excess of what some thought it would be. Upon being put to the meeting it was adopted. A resolution to remove the restricting 10-mile radius was, after considerable discussion, defeated. The membership subscription was reduced to 2s. 6d., and a resolution to accept apprentice and junior members at an annual fee of 1s. was passed, as it was thought by doing so it would give young fanciers (and there are several in the district) a chance to join, and become useful members of the Fancy as they grow older. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Pres., J. W. Allan; chairman, W. Straughan; vice-chairman, W. Miller; com., T. Wake, T. Dixon, B. Pope, J. Robinson, J. Rogerson, J. Davidson, M. Swan; Mr. H. P. Staig, treas., was again elected, as also Robt Forster, sec. A series of table shows for breeding pairs, British pairs, and nest feather birds was arranged for; also judging and hand-washing exhibitions and competitions, which will go far to make a very busy and interesting season. A wish was also expressed that fanciers within the district covered by the society should put themselves in communication with the sec., who will (if desired) call upon them with a view to their membership.—R. Forster, Sec., 43, Bondgate Without.

MIDLAND COUNTIES YORKS. C.C.

Meeting held at headquarters, the Crown Hotel, Birmingham, January 30th, before a fair attendance chair being occupied by Mr. Wells, supported by Secretaries Beck and Andrews. The Chairman read several letters from members, which, besides including ideas for the furtherance of the club, also included new and additional rules. These will be dealt with at the proper meeting about February 20th, the general meeting. Proposed by Messrs. Beck and Andrews, seconded by the Chairman, that the position of Secretary be given to J. Sheppard: agreed—the retiring Secretaries regretting that heavy business pressure, especially just at the show season, prevented them from giving the necessary time. Mr. Sheppard thanked the members present for the honour placed upon him, and expressed the hope that the members would give him their support in the coming season that had been given to the retiring worthy and popular Secretaries in the past. The purchasing of the novice cup and silver medals was left in the Chairman's hands. It is hoped that subscriptions which are owing for the past year will be sent before the general meeting, and also that the attendance will be a record one. One new member was nominated. It is to be hoped that we shall have 20 names at the February meeting, as the fancy for the popular Yorkshire is booming in the Midlands.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

General meeting held Jan 22. Mr. Crawhall presided. Mr. E. E. Pyman, of West Hartlepool, and Mr. Edwards, of Newcastle, were elected members. An objection was heard against the winner of one of the Club's specials at Gateshead show, and after carefully considering the whole facts, the members decided to withhold this special and to expel the disputed winner from the society. This is the first charge of any description that has been brought before the members, and, as our Chairman remarked, we hope it will be the last. Annual meeting fixed for Feb. 12. The various competitions for the Club's specials were finished at Sunderland show. Our chairman, Mr. Crawhall, is to be congratulated on winning the championship, an achievement that takes some doing in such keen competition as has been the case at the whole of the patronage shows this season. The novice trophy has been won by Mr. Bostock, of Maryport. This section has again been very well supported, the entries averaging 16 per class at shows holding our patronage. Annual tea and concert held at the Blue Bell Hotel, Feb. 1, and proved a great success. About 60 persons sat down to a very substantial meat tea provided by the landlord, these including a few visitors, among whom we noticed Messrs. Ogden Bros. and their wives, from Dudley Hill. The following artistes contributed to a delightful programme of music and singing: Messrs. J. Edwards (comedian), J. Tilley (light comedian), G Ipkin (pianist), Mr. Lund (Baritone), and E. Mason, who seems to improve at each concert. The chair was efficiently occupied by Mr. W. B. Atkinson. A vote of thanks to the host and hostess was proposed by Mr. A. Brown and seconded by Mr. G. Elsegood, and carried with enthusiasm. The health of the visitors was proposed by Mr. R. Garnett, and seconded by Mr. H. Sutcliffe, to which Mr. G. Ogden responded. GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting held Jan. 23, at Oldham Hall, Liverpool, Mr. F. Handley in the chair. Attention was drawn to the fact that the classification in Palace schedule was wrong, and it was decided to communicate with the secretary pointing out that there were two classes for hens. Sec. tendered his resignation owing to pressure of business, and nominations for the vacancy will be received at the next meeting. Members are requested to forward outstanding ticket money in connection with the annual show without further delay. There are also a few subscriptions still unpaid. These should be paid forthwith, as the books should be closed within the next week. It was decided to hold the annual dinner and distribution of cups, medals, and cash specials early in March, and arrangements were left in the hands of Messrs. Handley, Metcalfe, and Green. Due notice will be given of the date, and it is hoped that all members will turn up and bring their friends. As usual, ladies are specially invited. The event is eagerly looked forward to, and we hope to make it a big success. Shall be pleased to see any fancier; all are welcome. Tickets may be had from any member of the G.C.A. committee, or by applying to the sec. Next meeting Feb. 27.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec.

ROSSENDALE C.B.S.

Annual singing contest held in the large clubroom at the Commercial Hotel, Stacksteads, Jan. 11, and proved a success. Considering that it was the first show of the society, the entry, 73 in 6 classes, must be considered a good one, and some of the best Rollers in the country were on view. Mr. W. Massy, of Bolton, judged, and gave every satisfaction. The hall was next to the Railway Station, and could not therefore, have been more accessible. The birds had every attention paid to their comfort, and at the conclusion the last bird was dispatched from Stacksteads Station by the 8 p.m. train. Monthly meeting held in the Co-operative Hall, Feb. 1, also the annual breeding pairs show. The following were elected members:—J. Thomson, D. Hunter, Townhill, and W. Beaton, the latter being the first to take advantage of the extended radius (12 miles). A few reports were given in, and reference was made to the extended illness of Mr. Alex. Howie, who is now lying in the Edinburgh Eye Infirmary, but who, we are glad to know, went through a very satisfactory operation on Thursday last. At the next monthly meeting, Feb. 22nd, a novel judging competition will be held, when the president, Mr. J. Rankine, has kindly consented to act as referee. At the pairs show a record entry was made, 50 pairs being put down. Mr. Wm. Hogg, Oakley, Scotch Fancy specialist, and popular all-round judge, made the awards, and his decisions were well received.

WEST STANLEY F. & F.S

Members' Show, held February 1 and 2, the cage bird section being staged in the large hall, a splendid place for a show, it being well lighted, roomy, and quite free from draughts. As a first venture it was a great success; entries came up well, some 130 birds being staged to perfection. In the Canary section we saw some noted winners; in the British birds there were some strong classes, and the foreign class drew a lot of attention. The whole show was under the chairmanship of Mr. G. Lane, assisted by a grand body of fanciers in J. Emmerson, M. Hall, J. Boyle, W. Elliott, and W. Gowland. The secretarial duties were ably carried out by Messrs. Peart and Robinson, of whom the society ought to feel very proud, as they had everything in splendid order, and got through their work in grand style, without the least mistake. Mr. T. Dixon, Bedlington, judged, and his awards were well received.

HULL C.B.S.

First members' show of the year held Feb. 3, of pairs matched for breeding. For quality the show was a decided success, some grand pairs being staged, but the number of entries was somewhat disappointing, especially so in the champion, three only being two exhibitors and four entries in four classes, while one class had no entries. Mr. R. Barwick judged Norwich, and Mr. Geo. Harland Yorkshires and O.A.V. Canary, their awards leaving no room for complaint.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S,

Annual pair show held Feb. 1, and although not so large as usual, was, nevertheless, a very interesting show, and some typical pairs were staged, notably Mr. J. Madagan's buff cock and yellow hen Borders, first in their class, and special for best pair in the show. Hybrid classes drew the largest entry, and some splendid pairs were shown. Mr. Pounsett's Siskin cock and Norwich hen, which secured premier honours, created a good deal of interest. Several members intend trying their luck with the Chaffinch-Greenfinch cross, and we hope their endeavours will be successful. The foreign class showed a distinct advance upon any previous one, and contained a nice assortment, ranging in size from a pair of Golden-cheeked Waxbills to Cockatiels. Mrs. Maconechy, Mr. Pounsett, and Mr. Madagan were the winners in Crests, Norwich, and Borders respectively.

LEICESTER (Hand-in-Hand) C.B.S

Combined charity show held Feb. 1, at the Vaughan Working Men's College, Great Central-street. The whole of the proceeds will be handed over to the Children's Hospital Fund, and it is hoped that a good sum will be realised for this deserving charity. This is the first occasion on which the societies have combined for the purpose of charity, but it is confidently expected that after such an auspicious start this exhibition will become an annual event. The exhibition was confined to fanciers of Leicester and Leicestershire. There were over 300 entries, and a special feature of the show was the large entry of splendid Norwich Canaries, several of which had carried off championship prizes at shows throughout the kingdom during the season. The judges were Mr. E. Fox (Long Eaton) Canaries, and Mr. W. Judd (Leicester), British and Foreign.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which me must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expirration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

ONE EXAMPLE

Badger Hall, Shropshire, by Wolverhampton: "I should like to tell you that the Tonic you sent for my Canary last spring has been entirely successful in restoring his health and youth. He never sang for 9 months, lost all feathers on his head, and sat hunched up on his perch, caring for nothing; now he sings all day, and his plumage is splendid. —Yours faithfully, A. Capel Cure."

MANY PEOPLE

are prejudiced against purchasing birds from a dealer, and no doubt not without cause. May I ask those persons who have been unfortunate in their previous transactions to give me a trial? As I send everything I sell on approval at my own risk, either on receipt of cash or CAGE BIRDS deposit system, persons dealing with me cannot possibly be out of pocket, as unless birds give every satisfaction they only have to be returned and back comes the whole of your money. Under these conditions you cannot lose one penny. I do not claim to sell you first prize winners at every show along the line for a few coppers each, but I do guarantee that the descriptions of birds given in this advert. are absolutely correct in every particular. I have a splendid lot of Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in pink of health and condition, at 2/6 each, three 6/-; specially picked larger birds for muling, and warranted now in song, 3/- and 4/- each, three 7/6, six 14/-. (Please note, real cock Goldfinches cannot be sold at less than above prices, and I challenge denial.) Hen Goldfinches, 1/- and 1/6 each, three 2/6. Handsome lot of cock Brown Linnets, every one guaranteed rose red-breasted, 9d. each, three 1/9, six 3/-, twelve 5/-; specially selected larger cocks, for muling or contest singing, and warranted now in song, 1/- and 1/6 each, three 2/6, six 4/-. Please note: These are exactly same sort of Linnets as the scores of dozens I sell weekly to the dealers and contest singers of Leeds, Sheffield, Hull, Durham, and all parts of the Counties of Yorkshire, Lancashire, Durham, etc., etc., and I have sold more contest winners in one season than all others together. Cock Greenfinches 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; cock Chaffinches, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; cock Twites, 9d. each, three 2/-; grand lot of cock Skylarks, in perfect condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially picked steady cocks, in song, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/6 each. These Larks must not be confused with the French flight birds sold so cheaply. Mine are all guaranteed netted in County of Worcester, and are much more steady and come into song more quickly than the French birds. Exhibitors please note: Following birds are all fit to win immediately in field-moulted classes, and only specially good birds that will repay the purchasers for moulting them out are sold at these prices. Goldfinches, 5/- and 7/6 each; Siskins 5/- and 7/6 each; Linnets, Greenfinches, and Chaffinches 2/6 each. I need not specify show points of each species. Sufficient for me to say I know what is required for show bench, and send nothing but what is really worth showing, and I have sold more winners than any man alive, and not done half the boasting, either. Few exceptionally good house-moulted cock Linnets for muling, all finger-tame, full song, and guaranteed bred Mules last season, 5/- each. Travelling cages, to hold 3 birds, 3d. extra in all cases. For full list of net traps, trap cages, birdlime, and all other catching appliances, send stamp. (479)

"LIVE BIRD" LABELS.

"CAGE BIRDS." 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

From the Harz Mountains of Germany.

At the prices quoted below. Have on approval, and test the bona-fides of this statement. Never excelled at prices, if ever equalled, which I believe they have not. A good singing cock for 6/-. Don't be "gulled" by purchasing mongrels sold as Hartz Rollers at lower prices. They have never seen Germany, and to sell as such is an impertinent lie. Specially selected. Why, one of my Norwich or Yorkshire songsters are worth half-a-dozen of these insignificant birds with really no breed in them. Hartz cocks, 6/6, and 7/6. Hens, 2/-; Genuine Seiferts, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Pairs, 10/6, 15/6, 21/-, 25/- upwards. Hens 3/6. Pairs, 7/6, 8/6. Cages, 3d. extra. A few exceptional birds, 30/- and 40/- each. An exceptional lot of good hens, and now is the time to purchase them. All kinds of cages for same. Pairs, ditto, for breeding, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-. If you desire to know all about those interesting little birds, you should send for "Profitable Canary Breeding as Practised in Germany," by Albert Retch. This is, in my opinion, the best and most reliable little work ever published on Hartz Mountain Rollers, and can only be purchased from me (copyright), price, paper cover, 9d.; cloth gilt, 1/3.

See my advertisement on page 126.

PUBLIC NOTICE!

The enormous demand for Leipzig Rollers, has caused many imitators. I wish it to be particularly understood that I am the sole importer of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and no other person can sell these birds unless he first purchases from me. All my Roller cocks are stamped on wing "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and unless the bird has this stamp it is not a genuine Weber's Leipzig Roller. The superiority of the Leipzig Roller over that of ordinary Rollers is that its song does not consist of one or two long drawn out railway whistle rolls and a full stop. The Leipzig Roller's song is made up of following notes: Hollow, bell and bass rolls, sweet silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft roulades, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, gong and flute notes, etc., etc., and is guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever. Every bird is thoroughly trained to sing in day and all artificial lights, and none are sent out unless in perfect health and song, and every one warranted thoroughly acclimatised. Price 7/6 and 8/6 each. Real bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell roll, and have an exceedingly soft and mellow tone, 10/6 and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed of exactly same strain, 2/6 each, 4/6 couple. For those who prefer a loud, noisy songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks (untrained German songsters). These are guaranteed in full loud and vigorous song day and gaslight, and are often sold as Rollers by unscrupulous dealers. My price 5/6 each, two 10/6, three 15/-, seven 31/6. Hartz hens, 2/- each, 3/6 couple, or 18/- dozen. Ordinary singing box cages, 1/6 each. Special Roller cabinet cages, with folding doors, 2/6 each. Please note following few letters, which are entirely unsolicited: "180, Newton Street, Macclesfield. Jan. 28. Sir,—Bandmaster to hand. I am delighted with him. He sang immediately he was unpacked. I have thanked Mr. Wakefield for recommending you to me, and I must thank you for sending so good a bird. Yours, J. Rathbone." "36, Snape Hill Road, Darfield. Jan. 27. Sir,—Roller arrived safe and is a perfect treat to hear. Many thanks for sending same in so short a time. Yours, C. Bailey." "4, West Hetton Row, Coxhoe. Jan. 24th. Sir,—Received Bandmaster safe, and can say he has given every satisfaction. Started singing as soon as put in another cage. Thanks for straight dealing. Yours, J. Brothwood." "Raftyard, Howdon-on-Tyne. Jan. 22. Sir,—Please send following birds. The Roller I purchased from you two years ago is as good as ever. Yours, A. Bell." "15, Beechwood Road, Dublin. Jan. 23rd. Sir,—I have much pleasure in telling you that the Leipzig Roller you so promptly and carefully sent me on Tuesday is a wonderful singer. He began to sing last evening by electric light, and all day to-day. He has exquisite double rolls and trills. You do not say too much of these Rollers. They far surpass any bird in singing I have heard. Yours, M. Byrne." "North Street, Newtownards, Ireland. Jan. 21st. Sir,—Thanks for Roller. He is singing like a good one, and is well worth the money. I have had a lot of fanciers to see him, and they say he is a well-made one, besides being a good singer. Yours, J. Fleming." "7, Yardley Road, Small Heath. Sir,—Roller I had from you for my friend on 19th is a gem, and we are all very pleased with it. I shall want another for myself very shortly. Yours, T. Gould." "Regent Street, Newtownards, Ireland. Jan. 20th. Sir,—Please send another Roller same as last. He was a good one, the best in this town. I have heard some that came from —— and ——, but they were not in it with the bird you sent me. Yours, W. Wallace." "8, Lincolnfield View, Newtown, Leeds. Jan. 13th. Sir,—Received bird (Bandmaster) safely and in good condition. You have sent exactly the bird I wanted. He is singing lovely. I took it to a contest and there were 26 birds sung, and mine got third prize, and I took it to another and got third again. Yours, W. Binns." Please note, every bird is sent on full week's trial, either on receipt of cash or deposit system of "Cage Birds," and I take sole risk during the whole time. All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages free of extra charge, and unless bird gives every satisfaction you have only to return it and back comes the whole of your money.

Decided to hold a Linnet singing contest on evening of show, Feb. 26. Mr. C. Pritchard generously offered a copper kettle for competition, providing that there were twelve birds competing. Mr. F. C. Parker, Mr. J. Swindley, and Mr. T. Gardner were elected to judge at pair show, and Mr. C. Pritchard as timekeeper for Linnet contest. Messrs. Grundy and Hall were elected as new members. Anyone wishing to become members can have full particulars from hon. sec. Next meeting will be held Feb. 26, after the pair show.—R. N. G. Simpson, 35, Clare Avenue, Hoole, Chester.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

All meeting records were broken on Feb. 4, at the monthly meeting at headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, the chairman, Mr. T. Dawn, presiding. Table show of matched pairs of Canaries: Class 1, A.V., Champion; Class 2, A.V. Novice. These two drew nearly 40 exhibits, and some exceptionally good birds were staged. Prize money, 5s., 2s. 6d., and 1s. 6d., and no entry fee. We were very pleased to see so many birds staged. It proves the members appreciate the officials' efforts. The attendance was a record, the one cry being, what a successful and enthusiastic meeting. Mr. Spencer placed the cards to the satisfaction of everyone present, after which he entertained his audience by remarks as to the respective good points in the various birds. Annual dinner takes place Thursday, Feb. 13. Another record, as the number of tickets sold already exceeds last year's. Nine new members were elected. A vote of thanks to judge and chairman closed the finest meeting ever held by the society.—J. A. T. Woodall.

NEW CROSS AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Feb. 6, Mr. G. Hill in the chair. Good number of members and friends present; business got through with great dispatch. For British table show to be held March 6, a very good schedule was drawn up, which we hope will meet with a good response. Decided to keep subscription list for points cups open a little longer, and we are pleased to be able to state that members are subscribing very liberally. New members: Messrs. Childers (New Cross), Rosendale (Catford), and Simants (Hither Green). Mr. Hazel having finished judging the pair show, we adjourned to the show room, where we had 91 pairs staged. The judge, in replying to a vote of thanks, said he was very pleased to see such a nice lot of birds, and wished us all a successful season. Points in cup competition: Champion, Pope 48, Burton Bros. 38, Gillard 36; Novice, Ronson 27, Dean 25, Kay 21; Border, Kay 21, Martin 17, Culham, 7. Specials won will be presented at British show, March 6, so members are requested to turn up in force.—Burton Bros., Hon. Secs.

MANCHESTER AND NORTHERN COUNTIES O.S.

General meeting Feb. 3rd, at headquarters, when Mr. J. Raynes presided over a large attendance of members. The secretary announced that Mr. Cutmore, of Liverpool, had promised to give us a lecture on pedigree breeding and heredity (with illustrations), on Monday, March 17th, when we hope to have a good attendance. I am sure this will prove very interesting to all keepers of birds. Friends are cordially invited. Mr. Fairhurst announced that he would rather we get someone else to judge the British Table Show on March 3rd, he judging it last year. Mr. A. G. Smith consented. The social committee then gave a report. It was agreed that the social be on March 1st at the Clarion Cafe, Market-street, tea on the table at 6.30 p.m. The committee have got a good programme together (not many speeches), and it now rests with the members to make it a great success by coming themselves, and bringing their wives and friends. I might mention that during the evening Mr. W. A. Bladon will be presented with an illuminated address and testimonial. A table show of Yorks. and Nor. was held, Mr. Atkinson judging Yorks., and Mr. Beswick Nor. Awards:—YORKS. CK.: 1, 3, Brown; 2, Jones. HEN: 1, 3, Brown; 2, Jones. PAIRS: 1, 2, Brown; 3, Jones. We hope the members will give these gentlemen plenty to do.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

The Latest Fashion: the White Canaries

HOW I BRED MY FIRST SPECIMENS.

By W. KIESEL (Pentonville).

An article written to accompany Mr. Norman's colored plate given with this issue.

I HAVE pleasure in penning this brief account of how I became interested in Canary breeding, and managed to produce White Canaries, to accompany the very nice coloured plate executed by your artist, Mr. H. Norman, of which you have been good enough to send me an advance copy. An acquaintance of mine (a London fancier, now deceased) persuaded me to start, and in 1906 he gave me at different times several copies of your journal, CAGE BIRDS. He was a breeder in a small way, and in the spring of 1907 I purchased from him a pair of Yorkshires—both were yellows. They were clear birds, though he told me their parents were cinnamon marked. I mated this pair in the month of June. Result, 4 eggs and 4 young birds; all four, too, turned out to be cocks, which was a surprise to me, and I notified the occurrence in your columns. They were ordinary in colour, but very pale, the buffs very pale indeed.

Sensation No. 1 Appears.

The finest of the four I mated next year to another hen obtained from this acquaintance of mine—a hen which he said was one of his "best type." In July, 1908, she laid 3 eggs and hatched 3 young, but 2 died on the day they were born, owing to the hen knocking them out of the nest. The survivor was the White Canary exhibited by me at the Jubilee Palace show (1909) and which attracted so much notice at the time.

I did not breed with him in 1909, as I thought him too young, but in 1910 he sired six white Canaries, and I also bred another four from his father, who, I may mention, is still alive and in good form. The hens used were sisters of the original hen (i.e., the mother of the bird shown at the Palace in 1909).

Perhaps the most surprising result was that of last season (1912). From the old cock bird—the original father, that is—I bred 7 white young, 3 out of 3 eggs in the first nest, and 4 out of 4 eggs in the second nest. He was mated with an ordinary yellow hen, but of course, from the white strain.

The Black Canary a Possibility.

I had a surprise also in 1911, when I bred a bird which was almost black—it had only a few white feathers. Unfortunately I lost it just before it was ready to come out of the nest. This bird came from a different pair—not the couple referred to above. In 1912 I also bred a similar Canary—this time three-quarters black, one quarter white—from the same pair. To my chagrin I lost this one also at about the age of ten days.

I notice that, generally speaking, my marked birds have the markings grey, some approaching to brownish or cinnamon, but a good percentage of the young are pure white. As time goes on I shall hope to report further developments to your readers.

My methods of management are on quite the usual lines. I rear the young on egg and biscuit, giving greenfood (watercress and chickweed) after they are three days old. I believe in canary seed of the best quality as the staple diet, and vary this with summer rape, maw, linseed, and a little hemp, according to season. My breeding cages are of the usual type, and I may say that I think a great point is to keep the birds very clean.

LONDON C.B.A. DINNER.

A Successful and Enjoyable Function.

London fanciers look forward to two enjoyable events to bring each show season to a close, one the Crystal Palace show, and the other the annual dinner of the London Cage Bird Association, which this year took place at the Sheraton Rooms at the Popular Cafe, Piccadilly, on Monday, Feb. 10. A large gathering of members of the Association and friends from other societies, and quite a bevy of ladies were present. We noticed members of all the prominent London societies at the festive board. The genial President of the Society, Mr. R. L. Crisp, was in the chair, and among those around the tables we noticed Mr. F. Knight and the Misses Knight, Miss L. F. Hillien, Mr. and Mrs. Thynne, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Trower, Mr. and Mrs. Firth, Mrs. E. Litchfield, Miss J. Cooper, Miss M. Cooper, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Savage, Mr. and Mrs. F. Boxall, Mr. and Mrs. H. Neal, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Penton, Mr. and Mrs. Marley, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Robson, Mrs. Allwright, Mr. J. M. Allwright, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Green, Miss Jefferys, Mr. and Mrs. Englefield, Mr. and Mrs. Warley, Miss Wignell, Messrs. Crabb, Heath, Carl, Maxwell, Sandy, Askew, Pretty, Barnett, Maher, Sayer, Mugford, W. H. Mugford, Petbick, T. C. Pickard, C. Pickard, B. Doble, A. Forbes, A. K. Forbes, R. C. Pickard, M. Pickard, S. Hopkins, Morris, Dew, Silver, Piercy, Easterling, Payne, Billings, Yeoman, Gapp, Leatley, Slade, Broad, and Hopkins. After grace by the Chairman, the party enjoyed a capital menu, which, after a short interval, was followed by the toast "The King and Royal Family"; a start was then made with a capital programme of songs and other interesting items. The toast of the "L.C.B.A." was suitably proposed by Mr. Crisp, who after expressing the deep regret of all the members of the Association at the death of their Chairman (Mr. Tinniswood Miller), said that if the late autumn show had not stood out in point of numbers, it certainly stood unsurpassed in the quality of the birds exhibited. They had not a large balance, but they always managed to pull through, and they had had their ups and downs. They did all they could in the interest of the Fancy, and he coupled Mr. Mugford's name with the toast. In the course of his reply the latter gentleman said the work of the year had been a great success, but the members did not support the pair show as he thought they ought. The Horticultural Hall had been retained for the next annual show, but something of a sensation with reference to that show was afloat and might be heard more of shortly. He thought they gave too liberal a classification, but if they reduced the classification in one direction it would be increased in another.

The cups and challenge bowl won during the season were presented to the lucky winners, Mr. Bread taking the Crest Cup, Mr. Ayres the cup for unflighted Yorks. Cup for best amateur Yorks., presented by Mr. Boxall, was won by Mr. Frank Smith; Mr. Knight secured the cup for the best Yorks. of any age. Silver cup for most points in amateur novice Norwich fell to Mr. T. Hart. Challenge Bowl fell to Mr. Howe, Wellingborough, while Mr. Marley won the British Bird Bowl for most points. The toast, "The Fancy" was proposed by Mr. Carl. Mr. Robson, in replying, commented on the growth of the Fancy, and contrasted the present-day facilities of fanciers to those in existence when he first came to London. He told of how he interviewed Mr. Heath for the first time in the Throne Room of his sanctuary when the latter had just started the first London Society. There were many present-day problems to tackle in the interest of exhibitors, in particular, we want facilities from the big railway companies. Mr. Robson concluded by thanking Mr. Carl for his remarks, and the toast was drunk with enthusiasm.

Mr. Boxall made the speech of the evening in replying to the toast, "The Ladies and Visitors," in the course of which he was profuse in his praise of the fair sex who, he said, helped them very much in many ways, especially in the breeding season, the latter remark putting his hearers into convulsions of laughter, and he joined the names of Mr. Silver, Mr. Crabb and Mr. Heath, who all suitably responded. Mr. Silver said several lady fanciers had been most successful in Hybrid breeding. Votes of thanks to the President and to the Dinner Committee (Messrs. Knight, Trower, Sheppard and Wallington) brought an enjoyable evening to a close shortly before midnight, all joining hands in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

COLINTON AND CURRIE PARISHES O.S.

Monthly meeting held in the Drill Hall, Juniper Green, Feb. 8, President Mr. Bigbee in the chair. A letter from Dr. S. C. Fowler was read, saying he would like to become a subscriber to the prize fund at the next show. Dr. Fowler proposed to give a prize for the best cock or hen in the show, but he would leave it to the committee what the prize should consist of and where it should go. There was also a letter from Mr. Steel, of Dalkeith, kindly consenting to give a lecture at our next meeting, March 8, on "Britishers: Their Selection and Management," and it was left in the hands of the sec. to make arrangements for the lecture. Mr. J. Ferguson, Curriemuirend, and Mr. R. Davidson, Currie, were elected members. At the close of the meeting Mr. Hamilton kindly gave a washing exhibition, after which Mr. Hamilton was asked to answer some questions, which he willingly agreed to do either on the washing or the general feeding of the Border Fancy. Quite a number of questions were asked and answered, as only a fancier of the experience of Mr. Hamilton could answer them, and on the motion of Mr. Begbie, chairman, a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Hamilton for his kindness in coming to give such an interesting evening. The rest of the evening was spent in song and story, and it was agreed on all hands this was the most interesting meeting yet held in connection with our society.—James Napier, sec.

NANTWICH.

Annual show, held in connection with the Poultry Society, in the Flour Sale-room. The room is well lighted and free from draughts, but our section did not have the room it ought to have had. The exhibits were far too high to be looked at and criticised. It was a very raw morning, and a lot of the exhibits were very soft. One of the rules was to the effect that all birds must be watered after judging, we think it would be wise to give a little water when staged. Some birds wanted it. Certainly birds are sure not to get a bath before judging, but it is well worth the risk of bathing to have them face a judge in good condition, not soft, which puts them quite out of the running. The Goldies, especially those from a distance, looked very much down. We heard that the judge had these watered, and went on with his other classes to give them a chance. The classification was only small, but the support received 86 exhibits in seven classes, seems to deserve additional classes next year. Norwich and York. were a fair lot. Mutes were really great, some toppers being on view. Goldies and Linnets should have separate classes next year; it will pay. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, Liverpool, judged, and his placings were well received. Messrs. F. Wilson and W. Bowker had charge of our section, and looked after the interests of the birds in a very efficient manner.

INTERNATIONAL ROLLER CANARY EXHIBITION.

The British Roller Canary Society held their 1st International Exhibition on Feb. 7th and 8th, at the St. Marylebone Church Institute, Paddington Street, W. The officials were very fortunate in being able to secure a hall which is so admirably suited in every respect for the purpose. The singing of the exhibits was carried out to perfection. They were arranged in tiers of three, around the sides, and across the lower end of the room, another row being placed down the centre. The tables were just the desired height, which enabled the bottom row of birds to be easily inspected. Such an assemblage of splendid special prizes has never before been competed for at a Roller Canary exhibition. They comprised silver, silver and gilt, and bronze medals, silver and silver plated cups, framed pictures, 7 and 14lbs. packages of the best German rape seed, cloth lengths, basses of fish, silver-plated preserve dishes, a magnificent marzipan cake, valued at £1 1., silk handkerchiefs, and money specials. A detailed list of the fortunate winners of these specials is not yet to hand. Herr H. Frisch, a prominent judge, of Coln, Germany, was specially engaged to adjudicate on classes No. 1, 2, and 3. No. 1 class was the international champion team class, open to English and German exhibitors, a team to consist of four birds, 17 teams competed. It was very regrettable that only one team from abroad put in an appearance. Class No. 2, the International champion single bird class, numbered 48 birds, all belonging to English fanciers. Class No. 3, novice team class (a team to consist of four birds), seven teams competed in this. Individual birds of these teams were eligible to compete in the other novice classes for single birds. Other classes were for champion young birds, 63 entries; novice young birds, 56 entries; champion class, 20 entries; amateur class, 20 entries; novice class (birds of any age wearing the B.R.C. ring), 46 entries; selling class, 19 entries. Mr. Lester judged class 4; Mr. Jacquemin classes 5, 6, and 7; Mr. Fisher, classes 8 and 9.

A German Judge's Kindness.

Herr H. Frisch very kindly brought a couple of Koller singers over with him, to give English fanciers an opportunity of hearing this rare tour. Owing to our being some distance away from the birds, we were unable to hear the intermingling sounds of the hollow roll, bass, and Glucke tours, which comprise the Koller tour; it sounded to us like a peculiar Glucke tour. This gentleman spoke strongly on what he termed the flat Glucke; it is delivered in a clattering, choppy manner, and we were advised not to breed with a bird singing a tour like this, because the youngsters would probably bring out a chop. A few fanciers were confused in this flat Glucke, and the Bell Glucke; there should not be any doubt in distinguishing one from the other, as the distinct beat of the bell can be plainly heard, together with the Glucke. Another tour which Herr Frisch described as a Schnatter, sounded to us like a water roll; a fancier standing on our left hand voiced his thoughts and remarked: "Well, I call that a water roll." But probably those fanciers who were close to the birds would be able to distinguish something in the tours that was undiscernable to us from our position at the back.

It will come as a surprise to many of the novice exhibitors to learn that the German judge valued some of their birds at 5s. each. This class of bird must indeed have been very faulty, and poor in the song tours. We know that birds are often exhibited for the purpose of having expert advice on the different tours and their value, and where points are given too lavishly it has a tendency to cause the uninitiated to have an erroneous idea concerning the song of their birds. The two Koller singers had some very good tours, but were faulty, yet they will not cross the North Sea again, having found new owners on this side. The 5th prize team, belonging to Herr Gottfr. Viethen, in class 1, have also found new owners. Abbreviations used are the same as in the Palace report of the Rollers.

The Points Scored.

INTERNATIONAL TEAM CLASS (68) Judge, Herr H. Frisch: 1, R. Kremner, 105 points; 2, T. Turner, 93; 3, F. J. Randall, 92; 4, W. Harrison, 85; 5, Herr Gottfr. Viethen, 84; vhc, M. Neugebauer, 84; hc, A. OLD RADFORD AND DIS. C.B.S.

Table show held at headquarters, the White Horse Hotel, of all British. The show did not come up to expectations, but the quality was up to the standard. The Bramblefinch was a grand specimen, well up on legs, very steady and nicely marked; the Goldfinch running the winner very close might have won but for being spoilt in the wash; the third, a very nice Linnet, colour and lacings being very good; fourth, another Linnet, very unsteady, but will make a winner later on. Mr. J. Wood judged. 1, C. Bratt, Bramble; 2, C. Smith, Goldfinch; 3, J. Berrington, Linnet; 4, A. Spencer, Linnet. It was decided to call a general meeting at the earliest date convenient to all the members. Mr. W. T. Tomlin, proprietor, has promised us several prizes and the use of the club room free of charge, so we consider ourselves very fortunate. —A. Spencer, 368, Denman-st., Radford, Notts.

It contains, among other items, list of officers and members, a full report of the 1912 general meeting, the conditions under which the support of the club is given to shows, suggested classifications, particulars of the challenge trophies, and other specials, the rules of the club and the balance-sheets for 1910 and 1911. The handbook should be useful to anyone interested in the Crested Canary, and those who would like to possess a copy should write to Mr. Tyson, at 169, Sloane St., London, S.W.

The L. and P.O.S. members' pair and British Bird and Mule and Hybrid show will be held at the "Raglan Hotel," St. Martins-le-Grand on Thursday, Feb. 20th, at 8 p.m. The Committee warmly invite bird lovers to pay them a visit; admission free. Novices specially invited to come and see this show of matched pairs, and also to ask any questions regarding their own birds, which will be gladly answered by any of the committee, and also by those two well-known judges, Messrs. Heath and Fulljames, who are judging—Mr. Heath the Canaries and Mr. H. J. Fulljames the remainder. The Society are presenting several silver and bronze medals, also money specials.—(Advt.)

"Phosto," the phosphatic food for Canaries and all other cage-birds, although only established in the middle of last season, achieved remarkable success. Thoroughly tested by prominent breeders at critical periods, its effects have given every satisfaction, as is evidenced by the numbers of unsolicited testimonials that have reached the manufacturers. First used somewhat as an experiment, "Phosto" has come to be regarded as invaluable for bringing birds into breeding condition, for feeding young birds, and for moulting and colour-feeding. A sample packet may be had, post free, for 3d. stamps, from The "Phosto" Co., Emsworth, Hants.

Entries at Bathgate.

We have extended the date of entries closing until Thursday, Feb. 20, writes Mr. A. Nichol, sec. Bathgate show. We hope fanciers will give us a real good entry.

The Fancy in Sheffield.

There have been several letters recently in which allusion to the Sheffield Cage Bird Society has been made, writes Mr. A. Hobson, the secretary. We hope fanciers will have observed that the opinions expressed in those letters are those of individual fanciers, and not of the society as a whole. Any letters from the Society, as such, will bear an official signature, and not a non-de-plume.

The Twite's Ways.

In a wild state the Twite is more of a ground bird than either the Linnet or Redpoll. It also nests near the ground, and builds with roots, lining the nest with hair.

A High-priced Hen.

Having sold my yellow hen that was 1st and spl., also diploma for best bird in Norwich section, to Mr. Mr. R. D. Parlett, of Sheffield, for £7 10s., I wish him every success this breeding season, writes Mr. John Moore (Felling-on-Tyne).

Show Report Corrections.

In the report of West Stanley F. and F.S. show the names of winners in Yorks. hen should read: 1, 2, 4, and vhc, R. Goodchild. The Border hen class was not included in the report. The awards were 1, 2, and 4 Peart and Purvis, 3 Forsdick and Curry, vhc Jewitt.

A Fancier Abroad.

Should this meet the eye of any American fanciers, writes Mr. J. W. Crookes, 813, Mulberry St., Toledo, U.S.A., I should be pleased if they would let me have their address with a view to correspondence. I am a breeder and exhibitor of Crest and Crestbreds of 20 years standing, formerly of Sheffield, England.

Protective Winter Plumage.

The winter plumage of most birds is far less bright than in Spring. This is fortunate for those species that frequent the commons and downs, where the roving Hawk has an uninterrupted view of these vast open spaces. We fear the handsome Stonechat would soon decrease in numbers did he wear his spring dress in winter. He only dons it in the early summer, when Dame Nature is dressed in her brightest, and so he is less conspicuous among his surroundings.

WHERE ADVERTISING PAYS.

CAGE BIRDS will sell your surplus stock at once.

Advertise, and see for yourself.

Through my last advertisement I had ten enquiries for bird-houses alone.—B. Hollins (Hull).

We had splendid results from our last advertisement re yellow Norwich hens having received replies from all parts. Kindly thank all who have bought hens. We hope they will have a successful breeding season.—Lovegrove and Lovegrove (Henley).

Have had a splendid sale this season through "Cage Birds;" sold over 90 birds. I wish good old Cage Birds every success.—J. Mawhood (Colne).

Please thank all enquirers after my birds advertised in "Cage Birds" last week. I cannot possibly answer them all.—J. Logan (Dysart).

In response to a small advt. in "Cage Birds," I have had a dozen replies already, and expect there will be a lot more coming. You might mention this in your paper, as I cannot reply to all.—Chas. Mackwell (Keighley).

I have sold out my surplus stock, and could have sold as many again if I had bred more, writes Mr. F. S. Matthes (Rotherhithe). The best of my strain that I could spare fetched the highest prices I have yet obtained for stock birds, and have had enquiries all over Great Britain through the medium of your valuable paper, "CAGE BIRDS."

Kindly thank all those who made enquiries re my advert. of Goldfinch and Mule. I received so many cards and letters it was impossible for me to answer them all. I have made a satisfactory exchange, which shows, as an advertisement medium, "CAGE BIRDS" cannot be beaten.—E. Shore (Seaton Delaval).

Wild-Bird Life.

A Shy Woodland Bird.

At the first peep of day, when the faintest streak of light appears in the east, the wild birds' song commences. The feathered minstrels sing before they feed; it is still dark when the first Thrush opens, generally from the old walnut tree across the green, near to the writer's house; then a carolling Lark takes wing, and we can hear him warbling in the air above us long before it is possible to detect him. During the last few days another minstrel has added his voice to the chorus, this is a fine Blackbird, one of last season's brood, as is evident by the rusty brown colour on his wings; his song at present is somewhat hurried and high-pitched in tone, but possibly when his older companions commence their more deliberate utterance may influence his melody. So forward are the wild birds that unless they receive a severe check they will rush into nesting much earlier than usual. In the sheltered woodlands the spring flowers are fairly plentiful, the modest violet has been in bud all the winter, and primroses shine like yellow stars upon the sunny banks. In the evergreens symptoms of early nesting are not difficult to locate, foundations of many homes have already been laid, but they may come to nothing, as we have a very uncertain month or two to negotiate before the regular nesting time arrives.

THE WOODCOCK.

While wandering through the woodland a large bird was disturbed. It was a Woodcock. With quick, heavy flight he threaded his way between the tree stems and branches, although they grew thickly in his route. Very cleverly he steered his course, threading his way through the network of fine branches without touching them. The Woodcock is a plump bird, consequently his flight is somewhat laboured; he carries his long bill and head bent downward, not pointing straight ahead, as most birds do. He has large prominent eyes, which denote his nocturnal habits. During the day he is particularly shy and skulking, remaining closely hidden until flushed. As the sun sets and the shadows deepen under the trees and bushes he leaves his snug retreat, and flies slowly to his feeding ground, which may be some distance away. The writer has sometimes met one at dusk, moving across the low hills, on his way to the damp marsh land.

A Palace Show Sensation !

ATTEMPT TO "GET AT" ONE OF THE JUDGES.

A very foolish action on the part of a certain fancier created a painful sensation amongst those who were made acquainted with the mean and dishonest manner in which he had sought to influence a judge to favour a bird belonging to a friend. Mr. J. Hodder, who was making his debut as a judge, and officiating over the Novice Norwich Plainhead classes, received a letter (see copy below) asking him to award first prize to a bird whose cage number was stated, and hinting at an order for birds that would be likely to follow if he consented to do so. Mr. Hodder's reply was prompt and effective. He handed the letter over to Mr. J. W. Ramsden, and had the bird in question removed from the class—it was not judged at all.

Mr. Ramsden's intentions were to take the most drastic proceedings that lay in his power against the writer of the letter. On interviewing him on the Saturday, however, he was found to be a young fancier, who, judging by his explanation and obviously sincere contrition, had failed to appreciate the despicable side attaching to his action—an action, be it said, which seemed to be quite outside the knowledge of the actual owner of the bird. To Mr. Hodder he tendered a full apology, and expressed his deep regret that he should have placed him (Mr. H.) in such a false and unpleasant position. In view of these circumstances, Mr. Ramsden, after giving the young man in question some good, sound, fatherly advice, decided that though the letter must, as a warning, be published, he would spare the delinquent the shame of seeing his name in print, and of thus being exposed to the ignominy of his fellow fanciers. The distress of the young fellow was pitiful to witness; he learned a bitter lesson that will last a life-time.

Copy of Letter to the Judge.

Dear Mr. Hodder,—Just a line to inform you that I and Mr. ——— will be at the Palace on Saturday; we intend coming up for three days if we can get a suitable excursion. I am not showing myself, but Mr. ——— has ——— and a buff Norwich cock, all in novice classes. He is keen on winning a 1st, so that he can have a gold medal instead of the cash, so if you can give him a little help I shall be glad, as he is a genuine young fancier. His buff cock is No. ——, and a real good specimen. He does not know that I am writing you, so if he does win he will be in good form for a good yellow hen. Before next season he will be out of the novice section, so I hope you will give him a "leg up." He is building great hopes for the breeding season, and all he wants now, he says, is a good clear yellow hen, and also a marked yellow hen, so no more until we meet. Kind regards.—Yours faithfully, —————.

Copy of Letter of Apology.

Feb. 8, 1913.

Mr. Hodder.

Dear Sir,—I am very sorry that I wrote you such a letter, and I beg to apologise for doing such a thing. I assure you I wrote the letter without the knowledge of the exhibitor, and I hope you will forgive me for my indiscretion.—Yours faithfully, —————.

Through a Bird-room Window ❀ MY PORT LINCOLN PARRAKEETS.

This article on that charming Australian bird, the Port Lincoln, is No. 34 of the new series of personal birdy experiences related by that eminent aviculturist, the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

NINE hundred and ninety nine people out of a thousand don't care two pins for other people's aviaries, though out of politeness they all pretend to. The thousandth will find his way to them and derive much happiness from going round them alone. I generally act on this principle; but there are times when I lose my head, and overcome with pride, issue special invitations. I felt when I got my first Port Lincoln that I had arrived at such an occasion. Accordingly, I sent a letter post haste to a friend in Leeds, who shares all my avian joys and sorrows—especially the sorrows— to come at the earliest possible date to see something really worth seeing.

But "I am running on so," as Mrs. Nickleby used to say, and I must hark back a bit. Some years ago I went to a certain dealer and said if he happened to get hold of some extra fine Australian Parrakeets, he was to let me hear at once. It is hard to say after how many days, or in what manner, bread cast upon the waters may be returned to you. Sometimes it arrives at the most inopportune moment, when every place you have is full up—and more.

It was so in the present instance. One morning I received a word from my friend, the dealer, informing me that a specially fine consignment of Australian birds had just arrived; and that among them was a splendid pair of Port Lincolns. The message ended with the laconic sentence: "Wire if you want them." Of course I wanted them; the fact that I was full up was of altogether secondary import; something that, as the late Dr. Barry, Archbishop of Sydney, was fond of saying, Solvitur ambulanda, which rendered into English means, "might pan out as you go along." A lot of things, by the way, have to do this in the avicultural world.

"THE TWILIGHT-LOVING SOLITARY OWL."

This photograph of the Barn Owl was taken by Mr. O. Bagley, who has a fancy for these birds as pets. An article dealing with their feeding and management, and pointing out their attractiveness, is printed on this page.

They were sent off, the next thing was to find a place for the birds, which would certainly arrive punctually at nine o'clock the next morning. I spent a strenuous day in catching birds, inventing and contriving; and by a lot of hard work I managed to get a small aviary cleared for action, about two hours before the train was due at Micklefield. I had never kept Port Lincolns before, but I looked up my books and found they were reputed peaceable, so as I really hardly knew where to turn for room I determined to let them share a compartment with a pair of Red Rosellas.

Preliminary to a Funeral.

About nine o'clock a porter arrived sure enough with a box of birds for Mr. Farrar; the usual well-known formula, and the moment I returned from school at 9.40 I proceeded to unpack them. They were in an ordinary soap box, with holes at the edges, from which there protruded two particularly cruel-looking whitish beaks. I did not at all like the look of them, so I carried the box out to the aviary, and there prized off the lid. At once, two lovely Port Lincolns emerged, in the most beautiful condition; there wasn't a feather wrong anywhere. They were fit to go straight to a show. For a few minutes I stood and gazed in rapture at their wonderful beauty, as they sidled about the branching, polishing their beaks and giving their well-known note. It was just as well I did so.

The Rosella cock evidently took the remarks as personal, and he too came sidling along in the manner so well known to all who have watched Parrakeets, as if he had nowhere to go in particular. The apparent nowhere, however, led him into the immediate vicinity of the cock Rosella, and after a few preliminary remarks of an evidently insulting nature they settled down to as pretty a fight as you could wish to see, the two hens meanwhile looking on and saying, no doubt, to themselves, that the spoils would be to the victor.

The way in which these two birds went to work reminded me of an Australian horsedealer, who, speaking of the fighting qualities of certain fox terriers, said, "They fly at each other's throat, and then they hold on quite quietly, just like a prayer meeting." Well, all I know is that had I not been there, a funeral would have resulted. I rushed away, got my catching net, and after a few seconds succeeded in catching the Port Lincoln and his lady, and I transferred them to a big box wired in front, where I kept them till I could provide more suitable quarters for them. Anyone who has not seen how one Parrakeet can literally scalp another, would not credit how much can be done in a little space of time. The indignant cock Rosella was quite a long time settling down after what he no doubt considered "a gentle little scrap."

Always Secure the First Grip.

In one way it was a good thing that I had the Port Lincolns in a box, as I could examine them to far better advantage than when flying about in an aviary. Of late years Port Lincolns have been very scarce in the bird market, so that I may perhaps as well give a brief description of them. They are considerably larger than a Rosella, and may be set forth as a beautiful arrangement in green and yellow; the green is what is known as Lincoln green, what I suppose Robin Hood used to wear. The marking is very much after the style of the Rosella; the head is black, the beak horn colour, the body colour alone Lincoln green, the underparts primrose yellow. The cock can be easily distinguished from the hen by his flatter and more cruel-looking head. The hen's skull is roundish and altogether finer; the cock is considerably the bigger bird; he is better in his black, and the green on the chest where the line comes in runs a little bit to a point between his legs.

I should not advise any lady or timid person to try to handle Port Lincolns, as their beaks are like a pair of shears, and they know how to use them in the most business-like manner. As I have told my readers before, the way to catch Parrakeets is to grip them by the back of the neck; but it is a game that requires nerve and quickness, as if you don't get a hold the Parrakeet does, and then there's a nasty mess with bleeding, and much unreportable language.

Visions of Glittering Gauds.

I made the Port Lincolns a nice little outdoor aviary, and fitted it up with what Mr. Mantilini would have called two "demmed snug" nest boxes, and I hoped all sorts of things in the way of medals; but alas one morning I found the hen, that I had seen only the evening before in perfect health, lying dead on the floor without a feather ruffled. I could not think at first what had caused her death. Then like a flash the possible truth dawned upon me—she had died of poison. Too late, I remembered putting some poisoned bread down for mice. I remembered seeing the hen playing with something on the floor, but it never struck me at the time. Now I know that she had found one of these bits of bread, had eaten some, and so died. I made a solemn vow on the spot, never, never, never to lay poison again; but alas, it was too late to bring back my lost beauty. I was very thankful that the cock had not gone as well. How he escaped has always been to me a mystery.

Now I had to begin the almost hopeless task of looking for another hen. I saw several Port Lincolns advertised from time to time, but they were always cocks. At last one day, while on a visit to Hull, I hit on a fine hen, and brought her home. The conduct of my cock Port Lincoln was not such as I can commend. The moment I introduced the new arrival he sidled up to her along a branch, with a sort of "Come live with me and be my love" expression on his face that was quite nice in one recently bereaved. It quite reminded me of a story I once read of a widower, who having lost his wife, inscribed on her tombstone, "The light of my life has gone out," and excused himself to her successor by adding, "But I have struck another."

ONE OF SCOTLAND'S BEST.

This fine yellow Yorkshire cock was first at Paisley New Year Show, for Mr. T. Johnson, of Cathcart.

One often reads in books that all you have to do is to put a pair of Parrakeets and a box in close proximity, or, easier still, remove a brick from the wall and put a log in front, and the easily contented birds will go to nest at once. I wonder how the eggs keep together, by the way, on a brick, and mustn't it be a little cold, especially as Parrakeets like breeding early, when frosts are about? Such tales now remind me of the Oxford undergraduate, who wrote in his exam., in reply to a question about the life of our Lord: "These facts are not recorded in the Gospels, and there is no allusion to them in any of the Fathers, but they are fully detailed by Dr. Farrar!"

The Necessary Equipment.

I knew that to succeed in breeding these birds I should require a lot of patience and a considerable amount of luck. However, I set to work with a good courage, and I did all that I could by providing them with a separate compartment and two excellent nest boxes of my own contrivance. These are nice and deep, with a hole near the top; a lid to open—to prevent one from bursting—a very hard wood perch across the inside just below the entrance hole, to act as a staircase; a nicely scooped out hollow in the bottom, to keep the eggs from rolling about, and the hole with a small handful of rotten wood in it.

The inside perch is most important. I will tell you why. If you don't have one, the young Parrakeets when they grow up will not see how to get out of the nest, and will stay in until the parent birds will tire of feeding them, and will leave them to starve. This has happened to me, so I know to my cost what I am talking about. Port Lincolns will give no anxiety on the score of food, as they only seem to care for best canary and an occasional bit of hemp. They want plenty of green food, flowering grass for choice, or, in lieu of this, groundsel. One thing they must have, however, when nesting or going to nest, and that is a good supply of mealworms. These they eat in the most scientific manner, holding them up in one claw. It must be painful for the mealworm, as they begin at the tail and eat steadily upwards, so that the last fragment is very much alive at the finish. In Australia all these Parrakeets eat a lot of the big white fat grubs they find in the rotten logs they frequent. I believe neglect of this food often prevents success. I know from experience that all the Platycerci love mealworms.

Hopes that were Blighted.

I had the greatest hopes of bringing off a brood—the birds were feeding each other, spending a lot of time in the log and generally behaving in a commendable manner, when I was suddenly laid up for eight weeks in bed, and never saw the aviaries. During that time things had to go as best they could; and I fear the presence of a stranger feeder put the Port Lincolns off. At any rate, when I got down again they were marking time, but the season was passing away, and when I began to find stray feathers on the floor, I knew that my hopes for that year were over.

It was at this time that there came about the great sale and bargains at Micklefield; and among the birds that had to go were the Port Lincolns. They went to the balmy Isle of Wight, but although they went to a good fancier, I never heard that they bred; so that the medal for breeding them is yet to be won. May-be I shall win it yet, if only I live a few more years, and, still more important, if a few Port Lincolns come over from Australia. And now the story, like the Eastern Counties Railway, must come to an end at last.

The Barn Owl in Captivity.

By OLIVER BAGLEY (Birmingham).

TO the majority of people, Owls seem to be stupid, uninteresting birds, but when one has kept them for a time, he will think differently. Of the common British Owls, I consider Barn Owls the most suitable to keep in captivity, as with their delicately-marked plumage they are really beautiful birds. These Owls can generally be purchased for a few shillings, and, if obtained when young, will soon become very tame. Another good quality about them is that they do not hoot incesesantly all night, as the Tawny Owl often does. A friend of mine had to part with a pet Tawny owing to its noise disturbing the neighbours. The soft hiss of the Barn Owl should cause annoyance to no one.

Some Essentials to Success.

To keep him in good condition a big roomy cage, or better still, an aviary, is essential. One portion of this should be darkened, for the Owl to sleep in during daytime, and dry sand be profusely sprinkled on the floor. A plentiful supply of clean water is also greatly appreciated by the bird. Two or three natural branches should be obtained for perches.

The last, and most important item is the food. In the wild state, the Barn Owl feeds on rats, mice, and occasionally small birds, eating them entire and afterwards casting up the fur or feathers in the form of pellets. This serves the purpose of cleaning out the crop, and it is, therefore, necessary to supply the bird with its natural food occasionally. If this is not done, the Owl contracts disease, and soon dies. For the general food either cow's or sheep's lights may be given, also kitchen refuse such as fowls' or rabbits' heads, etc. My Barn Owl will also eat small fresh-water fish with apparent relish. If kept in a suitable place, and properly fed, the bird will live for years, and I hope this article may be the means of others paying more attention to this interesting, but at present somewhat neglected bird.

THE CAT AND THE AVICULTURIST.

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

The names in the following narrative have been altered, for obvious reasons, and some of the happenings have been exaggerated, but in the main and in almost all its details, it is a simple record of fact to which nothing has been added.

Peter Mysteriously Disappears.

A few days after the above events the Town Crier (one of our most cherished local institutions) stopped outside my gate, and, having solemnly rung his bell three times, in stentorian tones made the following announcement: "Lost, a black cat, answering to the name of Peter. Anyone returning the same, alive or dead, to the Misses Robinson, Cliff House, will receive a reward of ten shillings." Now ten shillings is quite a large sum of money in Salton, and a large number of cat-owners in the neighbourhood, on hearing this announcement, determined to have a try for that ten bob. Thus it came about that by 10 a.m. on the following day cats began to arrive at Cliff House in a steady stream. Nearly all the black cats in the district arrived on approval, for their owners argued that, if the particular cat they offered did not answer to the name of Peter, it probably could soon be taught to do so; and other cat fanciers thoughtfully provided themselves with a choice selection of cats of other descriptions, for they argued that if the old ladies did not succeed in recovering their own cat, very likely they might elect to purchase another of a different colour for a change.

The cats arrived in bags, in hampers, in boxes, in sacks; the carrier's cart brought a large consignment; others were tucked under their owners' arms. There were black cats, black and white cats, brown and white cats, tabby cats, and yellow cats; tom cats and female cats; big cats and small cats; cats with long tails, cats with half a tail, and Manx cats with no tail at all. By 11 a.m. the cat population of Salton had increased by nearly 50 per cent., and still they came. Salton, which is an extremely sympathetic little place, was anxious to know what was going on, and soon there was a large crowd outside Cliff House.

All Sorts, All Sizes, but not Peter!

You may imagine the fluttering with which the Misses Robinson opened the first few baskets, but, unfortunately, though the cats did their very best to please, and "miaowed" in the most ingratiating manner, none would answer to the name, and, what is more, Peter's owners declared with conviction that not one of them was the veritable and beloved lost one. When the would-be vendors alleged that they were, at all events, just as good, if not better, the maiden ladies replied indignantly that they were certainly not nearly as big, as handsome, or as affectionate, as the one and only Peter. This led to some friction and ill-feeling, for the vendors felt that it was an ungenerous and ungrateful thing to say of their cats, after they had brought the fatter so far simply to oblige. One vendor, annoyed by having offered his cat as low as two shillings, without effecting a sale, threw it down on the doormat, declaring that "they could have the dratted thing for nothing." This particular cat, being a little upset by the crowd (which was becoming demonstrative, not to say hilarious), bolted into the front parlour, hotly pursued by the Misses Robinson. Several other vendors, rising to the humour of the occasion, then released their cats—and shut the front door.

An Amazonian Onslaught.

There ensued a most sporting event. Armed with mops and brooms the maiden ladies made vigorous attempts to dislodge the intruders, but the latter, not liking the prospect of facing the crowd outside, made an equally vigorous resistance. As the chase grew fast and furious, and progressed from room to room with varying fortune, it was watched with intense interest by the crowd, who cheered either side impartially. At last the Misses Robinson triumphed, and, having locked the front door, and shut all the lower windows (to prevent the injection of further felines), announced from an upper window that they refused to inspect any more "pussies," and, in fact, that they were not purchasers of cats on any terms—an announcement which was received with groans and cries of "Shame."

The vendors, seeing that there was no prospect of doing business, decided that it was not worth the trouble of carrying the cats home again, more especially those who had brought a small, but choice, selection of dead cats (some of recent date, but others decidedly "gamey"), so they deposited the whole lot in the front garden, and went off to have a drink. There was a general rush for safety: some cats scrambled up trees, others fled down the High Street, pursued by the leisured youth of Salton, and others took refuge in adjoining houses. Naturally, the indigenous cats properly belonging to these tenements resented such a liberty, and fell on the intruders with tooth and nail, and you could hardly walk down the street without tumbling over a struggling mass of cats. In fact, there were cats everywhere.

The Sanitary Inspector Pays a Visit.

Shortly after these historic events my neighbours alleged that there was a curious odour wafted from my premises, and, being, as I have said, of an inquiring turn of mind, they sent the Sanitary Inspector round to investigate. Our inspector is a thorough good sort; he shook my hand, and said that he felt sure that it was imagination on their part—still, he thought he had better have a look round, as a matter of form. They say that there is a skeleton in every cupboard, and aviculturists who keep insectivorous birds generally have one, or, at all events, some sort of a carcase, from which trickle what are vulgarly called gentles, but which in polite society we call larvae. In my own case the "cupboard" (which we call the "fowl-house," because it sounds better) is situated, for obvious reasons, at the very end of the garden, and at this particular time there were no less than four large Cormorants in it from which the gent—I mean larvae, were trickling most prosperously.

When I thought of those Cormorants my heart sank, for a Cormorant is a bird which it is most unwise to stand to leeward side of, even when it is alive, and when it has been hanging for a week you could cut the aroma which proceeds from it with a knife. However, of course, we did not mention these details to the Inspector, and we started off most amicably. We walked up and down the garden sniffing vigorously, but the Cormorants were on their very best behaviour that morning, and everything seemed quite all right. Every now and then, however, a faint whiff of Cormorant would be wafted down from the upper air, and then we would stop and sniff hard; then it would vanish again, and we would try another place. Not being accustomed to sniffing, I became quite exhausted at the end of an hour, but the Inspector was as keen as ever, and said he would send for one of his men and a plan of the drains. I left the "sniffing" party at this point, but, when I returned home later in the day, the cook told me that the Inspector had left a message for me to say that "he had found where the smell came from"—and she further said that he was laughing heartily.

The Misses Robinson Also Call.

Apparently the Inspector never gave me away, for, a few days later, I received a visit from the Misses Robinson. They had heard the (unjustifiable) rumour about the alleged smell, and, putting two and two together, had evidently come to the conclusion that they could find Peter. They sent in a message to say that they thought that "Peter might have been accidentally shut up somewhere, and that they would be very grateful if they might look round." I said that I should be delighted if they would do so, and that the gardener should go round with them. The rest of this story I had from James, and I tell it to you exactly as he told it to me.

It seems that they first walked round the meadow, calling at intervals to the missing Peter; but Peter never answered. Then they walked up and down the garden paths, and round the conservatory, and looked into the billiard-room, still calling softly, "Peter," "Peter." But Peter never even gave the faintest "miaow." Then they tried the stable, and even looked in the aviary—but Peter was not there. At last they came to the "fowl-house," and, when they smelled that curious smell, one Miss R. looked at the other, and their looks said as plainly as words, "Now we know where Peter is!"

They rushed to the "fowl-house," dragged open the door, almost fell in, so to speak, and—came face to face with those Cormorants. Then did those two maiden ladies, with screams and shrieks, and skirts fluttering in the breeze, race down the garden path, and scuttle out of the front gate; and from that time forward we saw them no more.

What Became of Peter?

Very likely you will want to know what really did become of Peter. Honestly, I cannot tell you. There are some things it is wiser not to know! But there is a rose tree in my garden which has looked very prosperous for the past few years, and sometimes, when the breath of spring gently caresses it, it seems to nod at me, and to try to say something. I am such a duffer that I do not understand the language of flowers; but if, when summer comes again, and the heather blooms once more on Dartmoor, you should care to pay me a visit, reader, you might ask it what became of Peter. Or, again, you might ask James!

Welcome Aliens.

A correspondent to the "Manchester Courier" writes that the well-known aviculturist, Mr. St. Quintin, obtained several Continental Bearded Tits, which he acclimatised in his aviary during the winter months. In the spring they were liberated at Hornsea Mere, where there is abundance of food and cover and ideal nesting situations. To the delight of the experimentors the birds took kindly to their new surroundings and nested successfully. A charming species has thus been added to the list of Yorkshire breeding birds, and one which neither game preserver nor agriculturalist can ever regard as being injurious.

A Bird that Knew His Home.

A writer in the "Scotsman," tells the following story of a hybrid, which recently died at fifteen years of age. In the cage "Rantin" was a noisy singer, but apart from this he was a most engaging bird. It was usual for him to have his morning bath in a saucer on the parlour floor. For this purpose we had to open his door and allow him full freedom. Once out, he immediately started operations and then sat on the top of my armchair until his feathers dried, when he returned to his perch. The sequel of such liberties often resulted in "Rantin" getting out at a door or window, and being found among the garden trees. We had, however, only to hold up his cage, and he at once came down and entered. Sometimes we lost him for days together, only again to hear his well-known song up in the fir trees, and as we would then reply to his notes, he would come down, and even settle on any of our shoulders. But one day he lost his way, and seeing a woman baking at an open window he entered, and helped himself to the oatmeal crumbs. The woman closed the window, and caught "Rantin," putting him into a cage. Here he remained for weeks, until by sheer accident we learned of his capture. This woman was very loath to part with her prisoner, but she told the writer the bird had not uttered a note nor attempted to sing during the days of his captivity. Yet on being put into his old cage at home he started immediately to sing. This life he lived for fifteen years.

TITMICE AS PETS.

A Warning Against the Cannibal Great Tit.

By A. F. BELL (Berkhampsted).

When I had first built my little out-door aviary I did not know what best to keep, so first of all I tried Tits. I procured two Blue Tits and one Great Tit. I had planted some grass in the aviary, as well as placed earth over the floor, and had hung up a cocoanut husk on the wall at the back. All went well for a time and the Blue Tits, which were a pair, slept together in the husk, while the Great Tit slept on a perch.

At length one day I saw one of the Blue Tits looking rather wretched and ill. It moped on the ground and took no notice of the food. When I was looking on that same afternoon I saw the Great Tit creep up to where the little thing was sitting, and with a quick flop leap on to its back, and with a few sledge hammer blows put an end to its life. Then he deliberately pecked open the head, picked out the brains and swallowed them. This gruesome meal he seemed to relish immensely, and the lust of blood seized him, for he rushed at the healthy tit, hoping to do murder for the second time that day. But he had no chance, for the other Blue Tit was nearly as strong as himself. The Great Tit went down to the ground again and then died, seemingly in frightful agonies from the effects of his meal.

The other Tit lived on until I introduced another Great Tit, but this time the murder was done on the first day. And again the Great Tit died ten minutes after it had eaten the brains.

The Method that Succeeds.

The best way of keeping Tits is in a three foot indoor flight, as they cannot stand the cold, with a lot of budding and leafy branches in summer. Of course, in winter this will be impossible. Every day a dish of a good insectile food should be given, with a little vegetable ingredient mixed in; also some chopped mealworms, and any live insects available. An apple should be suspended through the top bars of the cage; clinging on to and pecking at the swinging apple give the birds pleasure, also it is good for them, and they are very fond of it.

The Tits must have cocoanut husks, suspended from the top, to sleep in. It is best to have dry earth on the cage bottom, as the Tits, when the earth is put in fresh, will find tiny eggs and larvae, etc., which, being natural, will help to keep the birds in good health. A great treat for the Tits is a piece of fat which should be given occasionally. Another thing of which they are very fond is ants' eggs, and these should be supplied at frequent intervals. In winter, berries and a little seed can be given, and will fill the place of the leafy branches a little.

Blue Tits, Coal Tits, Marsh Tits, and Long-tailed Tits can be kept together, and will agree quite well. Great Tits should on no account be kept with the others. The birds become very tame indeed, and a finger tame Tit makes a most delightful pet, as may be imagined. The Bearded Tit (though not really a Tit at all) is a very interesting bird, but I find not easy to keep alive, owing to its greed, for it quickly gets too fat if left to eat as much as it likes. It ought not to be given too many mealworms, etc., as they fatten it up too much. This bird is very beautiful, being light chestnut in colour, with two black streaks under the beak in the male (these are missing in the female) hence the name Bearded Tit.

Some Problems of Mule and Hybrid Breeding Unravelled.

A DEEPLY INTERESTING AND INFORMATIVE ARTICLE BY JAS. STEEL (Dalkeith):

THE amateur who takes up Hybrid breeding as a hobby will find that the books dealing with that branch of aviculture give him an insight into the best methods of procedure, to gain which by experience were a very serious task. Yet few cults present such a field for the experimenter. An idea as to this may be had by comparing the few species between which crosses have been obtained with the numerous species between which, it were reasonable to say, the production of new varieties of Hybrids were only a question of time and trying. The subject presents us with many problems, as any lecturer who invites questions on Hybrids is made painfully aware, and a study of such questions has often left me in doubt as to whether I had been the victim of a plot to "floor" me, or whether the querists had hunted through all the books ever published to find what was omitted in them!

What It is All About.

I have been asked to select a few of these said questions, and to give the solutions which a study of my own birds, and, in a greater degree, of those of many others, has enabled me to arrive at. I take this opportunity of thanking the many fanciers who by allowing me that privilege, and giving me the benefits of their experiences, have enabled me to assist others in doubt, and trust that omissions will be pardoned, on the grounds that the evidence does not justify mention of some of the weird happenings of which I have heard. Some of the questions are of a "range-finding" nature, the reason for such being better seen by reading the second, or even third. Such are very liable to prove troublesome to a lecturer. The first, which relates to Canary Hybrids, is a sample.

Query: Do you agree that it is only possible by breeding with birds which excel in the qualities of size and colour to produce a Hybrid excelling in those qualities?—Answer: This is a question unsafe to answer by a direct yes or nay, inasmuch as while deprecating any attempt to produce excellent Hybrids from mediocre parents, the fact that the parents excelled in size and colour carries no grounds for the assumption that the offspring must also be excellent in these features; possibly not one out of many may have these qualities in combination.

How do you account for Mr. X. getting superior Mules to mine, as both of his parent birds were obviously inferior to those mine were bred from?—Possibly his Canary, though inferior, was bred from a superior type, and transmitted her inherited qualities to her offspring, while with your hen it is possible that she owed her superiority to a remote generation, and transmitted her inferior qualities.

When Ancestors Obtrude.

That is the conclusion we came to, but an exchange of Finches proved we were wrong, as his hen with my superior Finch threw worse Mules than his first ones, and repeated attempts the following season showed that his Goldfinch bred better Mules than mine. An idea of the disparity may be had from the fact that mine was a repeated winner, while his was hardly worth exhibiting. Can you offer any other explanation?—As I have already stated, a bird may throw offspring either inferior or superior to itself. So well recognised is this that many breeders attach more value to pedigree than external appearance. Now, though we have no alternative, and must choose our Goldfinches by their face value (no joke intended), that they have a pedigree (inferior or superior), and that such has an effect on the Hybrid offspring is quite within the bounds of reason. Indeed, your case greatly strengthens the belief that this is so.

What Goldfinch do you prefer for Hybrid breeding?—The Siberian.

In choosing such, would you select the largest and best coloured?—I might not, as a Goldfinch only attains the full development of these features with age, and, considering that the foreigner is not so reliable a breeder (or survivor) as the British, a trait that would be intensified by a long period of liberty, I would, given a choice, prefer a youngster which showed signs of promise of developing, even though such choice entailed a slight, and perhaps only temporary, sacrifice of size and colour.

The Virtues of the Uncommon.

Do you attach any extra value to the cheveral, pea-throat, or "three-by-six" Goldfinch for Mule breeding?—No; in fact, I consider the first two marks as blemishes, and liable to be reproduced to the detriment of an otherwise excellent dark Mule. I have never seen a hen possessing either of these features.

Do you consider these features to be indicative of an albinistic tendency?—The best judges recognise, and wrong class, the first and second named as being "rare-feathered" or albinistic birds.

Would these not be likely, for that reason, to throw light Mules?—Such would be assumed by the majority, and probably accounts for the enhanced price asked for these varieties, but in practice I myself have failed to find any advantage from such a slight departure, an experience which I find is shared with many other breeders. Even pied Finches have proved disappointing in that respect.

What is the shortest interval at which you have known Finches to breed after capture?—I have known a Goldfinch to breed two months after taking, a Greenfinch at three weeks, and verified the breeding of Linnet Mules fourteen days after the Linnet was caught. But these were exceptions. That many refuse to breed, however long caged, is well known.

Is steadiness essential?—Desirable, but not essential. I have bred many Mules from very intractable Finches. I advise putting such up in the most secluded part of the birdroom.

The Presence of the Cock Canary.

Do you consider the presence of a vigorous cock Canary in a birdroom to have a detrimental effect on muling hens?—I think much depends on the temperament of the hens, as, while I have seen some which gave every indication of dislike for the Finch when they heard the song of the Canary, I have also seen copulation effected by the Finch while the hen was evincing her willingness to accept the advances of the serenading Canary, purposely placed in close proximity to her cage.

As you have in CAGE BIRDS advised the removal of the unsuitable Canary, I presume you don't approve of the "Canary in proximity" method?—I was then dealing with voice-pairing between unsuitable Canaries, while the hen was mated to another, and suitable, mate, and my reason for advising removal was that such might be detrimental to fertility, on the grounds that the antagonism displayed by the suitable cock, especially when he observed her responding to the outsider, might engender a dislike for each other. With the Finch jealousy is not so manifest, and as the song of a vigorous cock has a powerful effect in creating desire in the hen, I should have no hesitation in adopting this proximity method, especially with backward hens.

Do you think any benefit is derived by allowing Hybrid pairs to remain together during the winter?—Yes; as they will thereby get accustomed to each other's presence, and even become attached, a state which adds greatly to the chances of obtaining Hybrids. But with Canary Hybrids

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

Author of "Aviaries and Aviary Life," etc.

(See Mr. Goodchild's drawing on page 135.)

THE birds figured on our plate are not necessarily the most noticeable, but are interesting representatives of the many beautiful species staged by various exhibitors; moreover, many of the first prize winners have been already figured earlier in the season in our pages, and those now presented to my readers are all beautiful, interesting, or rare, and form a varied selection. I have not seen the finished plate, but the sketches of the individual birds I saw during the course of the show were eloquent of Mr. Goodchild's skill, and I am convinced will result in a picture worthy of the reputation of the popular journal of the Cage-bird Fancy.

The Red-Breasted Marsh-Bird.

This beautiful South American species (Leistes guianensis) was introduced to English aviculture by my esteemed friend, Mr. E. W. Harper, and a pair, privately imported by him, found their way into my aviary in 1907, where the male in his striking and handsome plumage was a conspicuous and interesting object for many months, and the hen, more soberly clad, but handsome for a still longer period. In the aviary they took a little insectile mixture, seed somewhat freely, were very keen after mealworms and other live food, and also took some fruit and green food. They did not appear to approve of perching to any extent, spending most of their time either on the ground or on a broad wooden shelf, and when alarmed crouched with their breast pressed to the ground, hiding the brilliant red of their underparts.

This bird was well staged and was certainly one of the steadiest I had seen under the conditions of cage life. Its demeanour showed how greatly it appreciated the liberal supply of dry moss with which the cage bottom was covered. It crouched in it almost like an incubating bird, taking but little notice of the gaze of the visiting public. Birds which spend so much time upon the ground should have their claws kept properly trimmed. This specimen lost much of its graceful free movement on the cage bottom owing to the length of its claws preventing it getting a proper grip for its feet.

A sketchy description is: Velvety brownish-black above, with an eye streak extending to the nape, bend of wings, and the body below from the throat to middle of abdomen glowing scarlet; bill black; feet deep brown. The female is brown striated with black above; below, pale brown washed with scarlet on the breast and middle of abdomen.

The Chilian Siskin.

This bird is either Chrysomitris atrata or C. uropygialis, I think the former, but have not been able as yet to compare my notes with type specimens. Though mostly clad in black, it is a handsome species, its silky black robe losing its sombreness by the clear yellow flights and ventral region. It is a typical Siskin in form and demeanour, a really smart looking bird. The Zoo. received a few last summer, but I believe Mr. Ezra's bird to be the only one in private hands. All the Siskins make charming cage-birds, and soon settle down to the conditions of cage-life. Their treatment is so well known that I need not occupy precious space by giving it here.

The Red-Collared Whydah.

This (Penthetria ardens) is a bird of another region, and is found in S., S.W., and S.E. Africa. While it has been known to aviculture for many years, it has never been common, and at the present time is almost rare. It is a beautiful and graceful species, but the tail feathers are stiffer and shorter than those of the comparatively common Giant Whydah (Chera procne). The fully mature bird in nuptial plumage is deep black, with a broad collar of vermilion across the throat. In younger specimens this collar is orange; as it was in Mr. Chadwick's handsome specimen.

This, and all species of Whydahs should have access to canary, white millet, spray millet, green food, an occasional mealworm or other insect, especially when moulting, or changing from winter to summer plumage. They require a roomy cage or their beautiful caudal appendages soon become frayed. They make handsome objects in a large aviary, and their deportment is full of interest and excites the admiration of all who witness it, but if introduced to the aviary when in full breeding plumage they cause a panic at first. Thus Whydahs should be put into the aviary before they don their summer "finery." A word of warning: They should be closely watched at first, after the assumption of the nuptial garment, as some individuals, previously amiable, at this period become aggressive, if not murderous.

Aubry's Parrot.

The Pococephali are an interesting group of Parrots of medium size, of which the best known representative is the beautiful Senegal. The Revd. Raynor is to be congratulated on his interesting series of which he staged three, viz., the Senegal, Meyer's and Aubry's (Pococephalus aubryanus) and he also possesses the Large-billed. Another uncommon, but fairly well-known representative of this genus is Jardine's Parrot, which Aubry's Parrot very closely resembles—an Aubry's in fully mature plumage might well be termed an exaggerated Jardine's. The general body pattern and colour of the plumage is similar in the two species, but the red patches in the fore crown and wing butts are larger and brighter in Aubry's than in Jardine's.

Probably the following table of distinctions noted by the Revd. Raynor at the Zoo. between their specimens of the two species, will be of general interest: "(1) Jardine's is much larger and darker. (2) In Aubry's the forehead and shoulder patches are scarlet; in Jardine's they are orange, paling to gold. (3) In Aubry's the upper and lower tail coverts are yellowish green and tinged with orange in the adult; in Jardine's they are a pure hard emerald green. (4) In Jardine's the wing is much darker, almost black, and the cheeks are tinged with grey." (Bird Notes, vol. III., N.S.).

Very few at the Palace recognised the bird for the rarity it is, some being ready to almost give a flat contradiction when told it was not a Jardine's, so they had to be smilingly told to "Wait and see" till it appeared again, if the fates' permit, in adult plumage. The individualism and chumminess of Parrots generally make them universally popular, and their power of imitating human speech increases their attractiveness; rarity only gives still greater zest to their possession, and I congratulate the Revd. Raynor on his interesting series.

The Vinaceous Firefinch.

The Firefinches are all charming birds, and the species are both numerous and beautiful, but alas! they are all very fragile on arrival, and are among the most difficult of birds to acclimatise, more especially so when they arrive during the inclement months of the year. They require careful nursing, till fully established; they must not be subjected to draught, a vitiated atmosphere, or a changeable temperature. A warmish even temperature, in some light, well ventilated room will best meet their requirements, and they should be kept not more than two in a cage during the trying period following importation. A little tepid milk, into which two or three drops of whisky or brandy have been stirred, is a good reviver during this critical period. Wholesome food and hygienic conditions will save those not infected beyond recovery. In the summer time blight and small plant insects and their larvæ of all kinds will make the task lighter; canary seed (not giant seed), white millet, Indian millet, spray millet, and green food, grit very cautiously at first, will meet their simple needs.

Of all this charming group there is no more chastely beautiful a species than the exquisite Vinaceous Firefinch (Lagonosticta vinacea), and I fear no contradiction from any who know the species or have been privileged to see it, not only at the Palace, but at the principal London shows during the season, and I have never seen a better pair for colour or condition than Mr. Ezra's lovely exhibit. I have omitted a description, as it is impossible to briefly describe the various soft lines of their plumage, which are various browns, purple-black, and various shades of rosy-carmine, the underparts thickly spotted with white in both sexes, but the hen is much browner, and lacks the purple-black face areas of the male.

Japanese Hawfinch (Eophona Personata.)

Hawfinches are handsome and well-known birds, and all bear a more or less strong resemblance to each other, and this species is as attractive as any of the group. Miss Smyth's pair, exhibited in excellent form, were exceedingly handsome and well marked. Mr. W. E. Teschemaker bred the common Hawfinch (C. vulgaris) in 1911, and he tells us the young were reared on gentles and tender green peas.

As regards their diet in captivity, they should have some live food, mealworms or other insects, regularly, while their seed mixture can consist of canary seed, hemp, buckwheat and sunflower seed liberally; greenfood, hawberries, green peas, apple, etc., may all be given, so there should be no difficulty in keeping up a varied menu. Given a roomy cage and good, wholesome food, this species should prove most interesting pets, and well repay the care and attention lavished upon them.

I fear this article has already outstripped the space intended for it, and I can only hope it will prove of general interest and some practical utility.

WHERE CANARY BREEDING IS CARRIED ON UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

An interesting account of the troubles and trials of an enthusiast in far-away Baluchistan.

By LANCE-SERGT. B. W. THALER (Quetta).

If I were asked the question as to what hobby I had found the most fascinating during my existence, I should at once reply "Bird-keeping." During the short span of life which has, so far, been allotted to me, I have taken up many hobbies, but I can honestly say that not one of them has brought me half the pleasure birds have done. I was always fond of birds. As a boy, a "Twopenny Greenie" afforded me as much pleasure as perhaps the rarest specimen of the feathered tribe could have done. So fond of my Greenfinch was I, that very often the "Strap" has had to be requisitioned before I could be got off to school.

In after years I became a roamer, and so hobbies of all kinds were necessarily abandoned, as one has not much time to devote to them, whilst travelling about this little world of ours. When my roaming days were practically over, the old longing for a hobby, to fill up my spare time, came back. Towards the middle of the year 1911, I came into possession of a cock Canary and a Goldfinch, and these two birds afforded me a great amount of pleasure. It was rare treat, one to which I had not been accustomed for years, to sit and listen to these two making the room ring with their music.

The Lass for a Fancier.

Soon afterwards I entered "Double Harness," and the wife promptly claimed her share of my stock; to wit, the Canary. However, I am very glad that she is a bird-lover. It was with her that the idea of my breeding birds originated. My initial attempt was at breeding Mules. This was anything but a successful venture, and for a very good reason. I tried to mate a cock Canary with a hen Goldfinch. The "Better Half" told me at the start, that I was wrong, but being a man, I knew better. As a matter of fact, her father had bred Canaries and Mules before I was born, and therefore I am entitled to double censure for disregarding her advice. Should these lines ever be read by anyone who is contemplating taking up the hobby of bird-keeping I would advise him or her not to be afraid of being told anything. "We are never too old to learn" is a saying which is very true indeed when birds form the subject of our inquiries. The lesson has not been lost on me.

I then wrote home to my father-in-law, who, as I have previously mentioned, bred Canaries, etc., before I was born, and asked his advice. Needless to say, I received it. Here let me digress again and advise some probable starter to go to a fancier who knows, and ask his advice as to the best course to pursue. I feel certain that by doing this a great many disappointments and perhaps disastrous failures will be avoided. Of course, by the time that I received my answer from the "Old Country," the breeding season was in full swing, and I had really very few hopes of doing any good at all. At any rate I did manage to get hold of a nice hen Canary which just suited the cock bird which we had.

Trouble in the Food, etc. Departments.

Now came the struggle. British Baluchistan, to my way of thinking, is not an ideal spot for Canary breeding. Fanciers at home who can obtain utensils, seeds, egg-food and green-stuff with very little trouble, have much to be thankful for. Here, on the N.W. Frontier of India, things are very different indeed. I'm afraid that you would laugh at my home-made breeding cages, constructed from Sunlight soap cases and other boxes. My patent removable cage fronts are made from strips of the same boxes and rusty iron wire painted with aluminium paint to make them look smarter and keep the birds clean. For nesting material, I am reduced to cotton-wool, dog's hair, or perhaps, if I'm lucky, a little hay. For egg-drawers I commandeer a couple of egg-cups. For drinking vessels I use Crosse and Blackwell's potted meat pots (the glass ones).

Canary seed is obtained in tins, each containing about 4lbs., at the price of one rupee four annas per tin (1s. 8d. English). Green food is often at a premium. As for egg-food; well, the eggs during the hottest months are very very poor. In fact, during last season a pair of my birds reared two youngsters entirely on canary seed and a little lettuce. From this I think that I may safely say that here in Baluchistan we breed under difficulties, but it can also be understood that our birds are thought a great deal of.

How Difficulties may be overcome.

Perhaps the foregoing remarks may help someone to remember that it does not do to be easily discouraged when trying to breed Canaries. Difficulties can be overcome, and one of my greatest helps during last season and up to the present time, has been Cage Birds, which is mailed to me every week by my father-in-law. I feel certain that I should have made a great hash of things but for this useful paper. I look forward eagerly to its coming every Monday evening. Cage Birds Annual, too, has proved its worth over and over again. When the one for 1913 is ready, along will go my modest sixpence as fast as possible. To all beginners in the Fancy, too, I would recommend "Canary Breeding for Beginners," by Claude St. John. Follow the instructions given in the book as closely as possible, and very few failures will result. Of this fact I feel certain, and speak from experience.

I put up my first pair of Canaries in June last. Three eggs were laid and two chicks hatched out. Of these, one was a cock. He turned out to be a little beauty, and was sold at a good price. This success led me to invest in another pair of birds of a different breed. In doing this I made a mistake. The birds were all right, but I was not. I have read somewhere that it is better to stick to one breed of bird rather than take up two or three varieties at once. For the beginner, this is excellent advice. To my mind, each breed of bird is a study in itself, and requires to be mastered before going on with another. I was not successful in rearing any youngsters from this pair. I hope for better luck next season.

By the time that my first youngsters were three weeks old, the hen showed signs of wanting to nest again. I accordingly gave the cock bird the fledglings to look after for a few days until they were able to shift for themselves somewhat. During this period, the male was allowed access to the hen bird for about an hour every other day, and by the time that the youngsters were about five weeks' old the hen had laid her first egg of another clutch of three. From this second and last nest two chicks were hatched. Both of these turned out to be cocks. These two youngsters, as I have mentioned previously, were reared entirely on plain canary seed and a little greenstuff.

In stating this fact, I do not wish it to be understood that I am advocating the "no-egg theory." My sole reason for eschewing egg was because good eggs were not to be obtained at this time. Even good hemp seed was not procurable. The two youngsters, however, are not so large as their brother and sister of the previous nest, and I blame the want of egg. In all other respects the birds are all right. After this nest, I decided to finish breeding for the season, as I was afraid of the bird having a bad time during the moult.

Draughts cause "soft" moult.

"The Birds' Annual" (as Mr. St. John calls the moult) did not put in an appearance until about the beginning of October. This, I am told, is rather late for this part of the world. I might say that it is rather risky, because the winter here is generally severe, and the cold begins to make itself felt by about the end of October. Winter in Baluchistan has been likened to that of Canada, so that it can be imagined how disastrous a late moult can be if one neglects the least precaution during this period.

However, all my stock moulted successfully, with the exception of one pair. These two birds grew their new plumage and finished their moult at about the same time as the remainder. The cock began singing again, and I was congratulating myself on having got the birds nice and comfortable for the winter. Imagine my surprise about a week later to find both birds throwing out feathers as fast as possible. At first I suspected red-mite, but on closely examining the cages I could find no signs of any. To make doubly sure, I made two new cages and allowed the birds to finish in them what appeared to be a second moult.

Again they seemed to finish off all right and again broke out into another moult. This time I began to get seriously alarmed and was afraid the strain would prove too much for them. By quite an accident I discovered the cause of all this trouble. On going into the room one evening, I placed the candle which I was carrying on top of one of these cages. All at once the candle was almost blown out. I then discovered that a fairly strong cold draught was blowing downwards from one of the roof ventilators. Needless to say, I very soon altered the position of the cages. This alteration and also by paying strict attention to the birds' diet, soon remedied matters, and both birds are now as well as ever, the cock singing lustily.

I think that from the foregoing I can safely say that, taking everything into consideration, I have had a fairly successful breeding season. True it is that difficulties have arisen, but having got over them I can afford to laugh at them now. To those who have taken up the cult of bird breeding and have dropped it because they were not so successful as they would have liked to have been, I would say "Try again." By throwing up the sponge you are missing the pleasures of one of the most fascinating hobbies known. I conclude in the hope that my remarks may be the means of drawing into the ranks of bird-breeders even one more hesitating bird admirer. If such proves to be the case I shall not have written in vain.

I advise a period of separation, as the Finch is generally later than the Canary in coming into condition, and to allow these to remain together would probably only result in unfertile eggs. Of course, a nest of Canaries might be obtained during the interval, and thus ensure the maintenance of a possibly valuable Canary stock. I refer to Finch-Canary Hybrids.

Can anything be done to bring the Finches into breeding condition?—While recognising that suitable weather conditions are par excellence the conditioner, I advise an increase in the supply of such wild seeds as may be procured at the dealers, in addition to rape, seedlings, and the tender leaves of dandelions. These latter may easily be propagated from seed and old roots, respectively. Keeping them in a moist, moderately warm, and semi-dark situation, forces them very quickly. All have an appreciative effect. If the backward condition is unduly prolonged, the seeding heads of the dandelion may be procurable, and these constitute, in my opinion, the most stimulating form of food.

In Defence of the Dandelion.

Have you found any evil effects follow the use of "Whiteheads," as I have read that a too generous supply has often fatal effects?—While counselling moderation in the supply of all seeds and salads till the birds have become accustomed to their use, I have quite failed to find any evil effects follow the use of dandelion heads if these precautions are taken. I have supplied various Finches with them ad. lib. in order to ascertain whether the lavish use had any evil effect, and my Finches seemed to thrive the better by their use. I should be surprised if they had an evil effect, as I know they constitute almost the [illegible] food supply of nestling Greenfinches (first round). On the other hand I have met with Hybrid breeders who were very ignorant of their value.

Do you favour a fat state of body in breeding Finches?—No, a fat or plethoric state is detrimental to reproduction, and as such a state generally becomes intensified by the lethargy (laziness) which follows, a curtailment of the supply of any seeds having an oily nature, such as hemp, sunflower, inga, flax, etc., is advisable. This is one of the reasons why space is a desirable asset in Hybrid breeding, the exercise indulged in keeping the birds in that desirable condition known as "hard and fit."

Do you approve of running the Finch with more than one hen?—This depends entirely on the Finch, and the variety of Hybrid tried for. If Finch-Canary Hybrids, the Goldie very readily accepts a plurality of hens, and as his egg breaking tendencies often call for his isolation during the incubatory period, such time may as well be utilised in getting another nest from him. The Siskin I have found, is often very spiteful towards hen number two, a remark which applies also to the Greenfinch. The Linnet seems to resent the separation, and is very prone to sulk and be of little use as a "bigamist." Of course, there are exceptions. With Hybrids between Finches, I deprecate any attempted polygamy.

Do you consider an extreme disparity in size between Hybrid pairs unfavourable to reproduction?—Yes, if extreme; but not entirely on the grounds of copulative difficulty, which is the reason generally advanced by breeders in discountenancing such mating. That an inequality in size is not a deterrent from a copulative point of view, is proved by the fact that copulation has been effective between species in which this disparity was great, i.e., between a Lesser Redpoll, and a large Russian Bullfinch. The principle objection I have to an extreme disparity in size is the overawing effect on the smaller species, as likely to increase that uncertainty which is always present in Hybridising, to the degree of improbability. In breeding the smaller Finch-Canary Hybrids, the use of those medium sized hens we at times get from large stock is advisable.

Do you favour the system of running one sex of each species together in one large aviary as likely to produce Hybrids?—While recognising that some grand Hybrids have been produced by so doing, yet a study of quite a few such aviaries convinces me that this is not the best system, the quarrelling and interferences with each other's domestic arrangements upsetting many desirable alliances, broken eggs being the rule. As a preliminary system I favour it as the best of all possible methods, as any pair which show preference for each other may be transferred to a separate cage or aviary, such mutual preference being the most propitious sign in a Hybrid pair.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SEED SAMPLES (H. R.).—The sample sent is a nice, well-matured one of summer rape, and is quite suitable as a food for Rollers, or any other Canaries, in combination, of course, with canary and other seeds usually advised for general use.

STRINGY DROPPINGS (Edgar Berry).—The bird is a little constipated. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days. Also give a little green food, preferably a crisp young leaf of dandelion, daily for a time. If no green food is available, break open a grape, and fix it, fleshy side uppermost, on the end of a perch for bird to peck at now and again. Look into your dietary to see if this is of a too constipating character, and alter it if necessary. You say nothing at all about this matter, so I cannot be more definite. You would find a proper dietary given in the Nutshell Booklet on "The Canary," No. 5.

LICE AND SAWDUST (Tom).—(1) If you are expert at the job, or can enlist the services of a fancier friend who is good at hand-washing, this is about the best and quickest method of removing grey lice. Wash the bird in the usual way, as if preparing for a show, and to each pint of the water used in the first two basins, add a teaspoonful of Creolin and mix it by stirring. Rinse afterwards in a third basin of plain water. Whilst bird is drying, thoroughly overhaul cage, and wash it out with Creolin solution of above-named strength. If you cannot wash, or get the bird washed, catch it and dust it freely with Keatings, using a small bellows or puff-ball to work powder well into the plumage, especially around base of neck, tail, and under wings. Then roll up bird in a small handkerchief, leaving only the beak free for easy respiration, and place it inside an old cage with the door closed to guard against accidents. Let it lie for 10 or 15 minutes, and meanwhile attend to its own cage as above. Then unwrap bird, and allow it to preen its plumage a little before returning it to its cage. Give daily for a few days a bath, in which a few drops of essence of quassia has been mixed. (2) A rather coarse cut pitchpine sawdust is best for cages on account of its odour, but at a pinch any clean sawdust will do.

CROUCHES ON PERCH (John Fallon).—You should have given some particulars of your treatment, and have said whether the bird shows any other symptoms of ill-health, such as panting or wheezing. It may be nothing worse than an over-fat condition. Try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if not better, then write again and give more details. First examine claws to see if they are overgrown. If so, trim them back to a proper length; also, if toes are loaded with hardened dirt-clots, soak them well in warm water to soften dirt, gently wash them clean, dry them, and anoint with zinc ointment. Give a diet of plain canary only as staple, with a large spray of watercress or other green food daily, and three times a week a pinch of a mixture of equal parts rape, niger, and teazle. Limit diet to this for a fortnight. In the drinking water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn every second day for a week, and in the next week give six drops of tincture of gentian, and three of tincture of steel every second day.

OUT OF CONDITION (A. C.).—See that the bird is free from cold draughts. Do not hang him high up near the ceiling, nor near or over burning lights in the evenings. In addition to the usual seed diet, give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana or leaf of dandelion, and add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny piece, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash. A mealworm a day if available will also prove beneficial. Kill worm by crushing the head, and fasten it on to end of perch by a pin thrust through tail-end and into the perch.

RECORDS (A. Baker, jun.).—(1) As far as I am aware, the highest price realised for a Canary is £75. This is the sum said to be paid for the famous clear body dark Crest, "King of Champions," when it left its last owners in this country to cross the "herring pond." That was quite a good many years ago, and "his majesty" has probably been gathered to his father long ere this time. (2) The highest price ever put on a Canary is probably the £1,000 which not infrequently figures in show catalogues as the selling price of certain exhibits. Of course no one expects to get that price, as it is merely a prohibitive price placed upon a bird the owner does not wish to sell to prevent it being claimed whilst at a show.

WHAT BREED? (Novice).—Your two very small hens, about half the size of Norwich, are in all probability either Rollers or Border Fancy. The former of these breeds is of a more nondescript character than the Borders, being chubby and trim-built, and slim and lank, with all the stages between. The colour is very pale and washed-out, and the markings as nondescript as the shape. The Borders are rather more aristocratic in appearance, slightly better in colour, finer in plumage, and of a much more uniform type in shape and markings. The two breeds are about equal in size.

SORE FEET (J. A. O.).—Follow the treatment given last week for a fortnight, Bathe the feet once daily in the first week, and every second day in the second week. Keep cage floor strewn with clean pine sawdust during this time, and provide grit in a small shallow tin. Keep perches quite clean. You might also add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the drinking water on two consecutive days at the beginning of each week. If feet are not well in this time, write again, and I will advise you further.

WHEEZY AND SNUFFLY (W. P.).—You must first of all take care that the birds are not exposed to cold draughts and damp. Keep them in a comfortable and nicely ventilated place, subject to these conditions, and do not expose them to the fumes from burning lights in the evenings. The temperature of your room is quite suitable if it is equable. Then in addition to the usual seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry well mixed in it every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together.

DISASTER (F. H. E.).—It is not to be wondered at that the hen died on nest. You mated them a good deal too soon, and I don't think the hen was at all ready for mating. The result was slow and abnormal egg-production, and egg-binding, though the weather would help to account for the latter. The cause of death was undoubtedly egg-binding. Had you kept the hen unmated until the end of March you would probably have met with more encouragement. I would certainly advise you to move the birds to the sunny room, with no fire and no draughts. But do not do this until we have a spell of nice mild weather prevailing, and do not mate any more birds until the end of March, or beginning of April. Meantime get "Canary Breeding for Beginners" from our manager, 7d. post free, and study its contents. It should help you to avoid such disappointment. Sorry I cannot recommend any particular dealer. The one you name I always found fair dealing, and ready to rectify any error. See advert. columns in which there is no lack of variety just now.

A NON-BREEDER (H. W.).—If the bird in question is really a cock I should be rather disinclined to rely upon him for breeding. Had you not said that he mated-up all right last season, by which I take it you mean he copulated freely with the hens, I should have had serious doubts of his sex, notwithstanding that he resembles the sketch of the head of a male in "Canary Breeding for Beginners." There is another method of distinguishing the sex by shape of vent, given in the book; on page 31, I think. This should apply fully to a bird the age of yours. Treat it for a fortnight as advised to "A.K." last week, and if it shows no more signs of coming on song my advice is to replace it with a healthy, vigorous 1912 bred cock in good song for this season's breeding. You might also try mating this supposed cock with a lusty young cock in full song.

MOULTING (D. J. W. H.).—If the weather keeps nice and mild, as it is at time of writing this, remove the two birds to the room over the kitchen, and see that they are quite free from cold draughts. Should it happen that winter reigns supreme when this appears, then leave birds in kitchen, and wait for the next mild spell, but keep them well away from fire, light, and draughts. In either case treat as follows. In addition to staple seed diet, give half a teaspoonful each of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana, and half a teaspoonful of hemp, millet and teazle. Give a morsel of green food three or four times a week. In the drinking water give 20 drops of quinine and iron mixture two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards. If feathers have not ceased dropping by then, instead of the quinine mixture, give six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day until they do cease dropping. With luck the birds should be in good breeding condition by beginning of April, if not a little sooner, though the former will still be early enough to begin.

HEN, PERCHES, AND CAGES (Posthorn).—(1) There is no reason why you should not try this hen again in the coming season, either with the same cock or, if you prefer trying another, a healthy young 1912 bred one. Have you "Canary Breeding for Beginners"? If not, you would do well to get a copy, and digest it before the season arrives. Do not overstock hen with soft food, nor yet stint her too much the first three or four days after young are hatched, and begin to give a little fresh crisp green food twice daily from the third day. On the sixth day, if she shows signs of flagging, give a half-teaspoonful of soaked rape and a similar quantity of cracked hemp, and let hen have access to a bath. (2) A flattened oval shape is the most generally useful one for perches for any cage if of a proper size to accommodate the birds' grasp. In many breeding cages, however, the perches are nearly square, with the edges planed off at right angles. They are clumsy-looking, and in my opinion at least have no other advantage over a more decent-looking perch. (3) The correct type of show cage for Yorkshires is an open wire one, with arched top, 9in. long, 6¼in. wide, 14in. high to centre of arched top, dropping to 11in. at the eaves. You would find an illustration of one in Part XVI. of "Our Canaries." The difference between punched bar and wire wove cages in dealers' parlance is probably that a piece of punched bar is used instead of cross-wires and binding wire, to hold upright wires in position, and is of no importance in affecting the correctness of the cage. (4) Many fanciers, I believe, have reared young from the shell upon the food you name, but, personally, I have never attempted it. Still, the "possibility" seems amply proven.

A SEXTETTE (Norwich).—(1) I am not at all clear what kind of a "bad place," it is you refer to. Is it a swelling of, or under, the skin, and is it hard or soft, or is it merely a "raw," or sore, place on the skin without any swelling? It would have been helpful if you had described the appearance fully and enclosed a rough sketch, no matter how rough—to show its position. If it is simply a sore place anoint it daily with Lanocyllin, and see that insect pests are not the indirect cause of it. The occasional bleeding may be due to the bird pecking it. If there is a swelling, paint it sparingly with tincture of iodine once. It may in this case be a tumour, and possibly easily removable by operation. (2) If the bird is valuable your best plan is to ask a veterinary to examine it, and, if necessary, operate. (3) If the hen is otherwise active and healthy it should be quite possible to breed with her. Whether it would be wise to do so depends upon the real nature of this trouble. (4): I do not know any private person in your city who might perform the operation, if needed. See No. 2. (5) Cannot say. Not necessarily. (6) Carry out above suggestions, when I think there may be no necessity for putting the bird to the inconvenience of a long railway journey, which should always be avoided in the case of sick birds. If you still wish me to see the bird privately you will find my address, etc., in the forthcoming CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL.

TRANSFERRING TO SHED (Yorkshire).—(1) If the walls of the shed are of fairly substantial material, and the position tolerably sheltered, so that there will be a minimum of fluctuation of temperature, there is no reason why it should not answer admirably as a bird-room. (2) Take advantage of the first spell of mild settled weather—this is, of course, assuming the shed is quite ready for their reception—to transfer the birds from unheated indoor room to the shed. Then move the birds from the kitchen to the unheated room for a week or so, to gradually acclimatise them before removing them to the shed. (3) Yes, if they have been reared under normal conditions of temperature there is no reason why exhibition specimens should not thrive in the place as well as commoner birds. (4) It is impossible to suggest any plan of ventilation without having a sketch of the building, it does not matter about it being rather crude, showing existing doors, windows, and any other openings, measurements, etc.

EN DESHABILLE (A. M. W.).—It is always best in these cases of irritability to make quite certain whether insect pests are at the root of the mischief. Red mites are such unobtrusive workers that they often do considerable mischief before their presence is suspected. If you fail to discover any on close examination of cage and its surroundings, treat as follows for a month:—Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every third day give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, slightly dusted with flour of sulphur, and finally sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed. On the intervening days give one day a small teaspoonful of rape seed soaked until on the point of sprouting, and the next day a morsel of banana and a pinch of a mixture of equal parts niger, millet, linseed and teazle. Give a spray of green food three or four times a week, and allow bird to bathe as freely as it likes in mild weather. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea daily for three days. After this give six drops each of dandelion juice and glycerine, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepennypiece every second day for a fortnight. Stick a piece of lump sugar in the wires for a week or two to divert attention from the plumage.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A TRIO (J. E. W.).—(1) Treat this bird the same as advised to "A. M. W." in this issue, and to induce it to eat the bread and milk, omit the sprinkling of seed, and sprinkle it with soft sugar instead. Give a pinch of the seed separately. If she still refuses it try a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, with the sulphur and seed mixed in it. Also see that reply about insects. Washing perches will not keep red mites at bay. Examine cage all over, particularly in any joints or cracks. Keep bird fairly warm to hasten this moulting to a finish. If you catch the bird, grey lice, if present, are very quickly discovered. In a few moments you will find them scurrying here, there, and everywhere, about the hand holding the bird. To deal with them see another reply this week. I do not think this case needs the acid mixture you refer to. (2) I should not care about trying to rear young on this food. It is simple, certainly, and its suitability depends upon the quantity of "dripping" (fat) used in it. A much better food, which certainly will rear young excellently, is the biscuit and desiccated egg mixture advised to "M.G.C.," in this issue. If kept in air-tight tin or jar in a cool dry place this mixture will keep good a long time—certainly for six months. (3) Sorry, but I do not know anything at all about the cages or maker you name. To prevent disappointment deposit cash with our Editor and have them on approval.

LOOSE AND SHAGGY (F. W. B., Hastings).—See reply to "A. M. W." this week, and treat the bird the same for the first two weeks. If obtainable, give dandelion leaves as green food, and instead of sticking a lump of sugar in the wires, kill a mealworm by crushing the head, and fix it on end of perch with a pin each day. In the third week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day. Take heed also of hints in the reply referred to about insect pests. I am inclined to think this is the key to your bird's trouble. There is plenty of time for him to get into breeding condition ready for the coming season, but do not mate him until he is quite ready. (2) As this ailing condition does not suggest a very robust physical constitution I cannot advise you to mate the bird with his own daughter.

ANOTHER WHEEZER (Hawarden).—Continue feeding the bird and giving the sponge cake prepared as advised to "F. Clark." Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water daily until the droppings are quite free and semi-liquid. Then break open a grape and fix on end of perch, with the fleshy side uppermost. Give a leaf of crisp young dandelion daily if available. A mealworm daily would also prove beneficial. When the buckthorn is discontinued, add to the water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecac. wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week or fortnight as may seem necessary. I do not consider him at all a suitable bird for stock, and you should certainly discard him unless he quickly and completely throws off this wheezy tendency.

CURIOUS SEIZURES (Jim Crow).—The seizures to which the birds were subject were merely the result of extreme nervousness, betraying an unusually highly-strung nervous system. Such a condition is by no means uncommon, especially among closely inbred birds. The two birds from same brood suffering in the same way may have been only a coincidence, or it may possibly betray a weakly taint from the cause just suggested. An overfat condition would tend to aggravate the weakness and hasten such a culmination as that which has occurred. The culmination was clearly a paralytic seizure due to effusion in the cranium, induced by the prolongation of the cause of excessive fright. Nothing you could have done would have been of any avail.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

SEED SAMPLES (S. G.).—(1) Plantain of nice quality. (3) Charlock, good. (4) Sesame, ditto. No. 2 seems to have gone astray. I can't trace receiving it.

SEX OF REDPOLLS (A. Chicken).—If you obtain a bird with a red breast and red head you will have an undoubted cock; the hen does not possess the red breast. When the birds are house-moulted, the sex is frequently difficult to decide. If you get the "Nutshell" booklet on the Redpoll (post free 2½d.), you will find in it full details of feeding and management.

COLOUR OF SHOW CAGES (Amateur).—The wires and the inside woodwork should be enamelled the same colour and the woodwork black. Bullfinch, cock, emerald green; ditto, hen, light blue or green; Linnet, emerald green; Goldfinch, dark green; Hawfinch, emerald green; Yellowhammer, ditto; Chaffinch, ditto (some like a medium blue); Budgerigars, yellow, light blue, green, warm cream.

THE DARK BEAK (Derry).—No, the dark tip to the beak does not mean that a Goldfinch is a non-breeder. As a matter of fact all Goldfinches have this dark streak after the moult and through the winter. When they begin to come into breeding condition, however, the dark tip commences to disappear, and when the beak is quite clear a bird is said to be in "rank" breeding condition. If you have bought an "exhibition bird and muler" for 4s., you are to be congratulated. To assist the bird into breeding condition, feed as advised a querist in last week's issue.

FEEDING A JACKDAW (H.T.W.O.).—The Jackdaw should be fed on the same lines as the Magpie, Jay, etc. Provide a long box cage, with the perches placed to afford him a good, long jump. As regards the food, use a good quality dog meal (such as "Melox" or Spratt's), thoroughly softened with hot water, and mixed with such table scraps (meat, potatoes, greens, gravy, etc.) as are from time to time available. This is the staple, and should be varied with dead mice, Sparrows, acorns, cracked nuts, berries, fruit, eggs, etc., according to season and circumstance. The Jackdaw has a very accommodating appetite; some flesh food is essential.

THE USE OF SUNFLOWER SEED (Peter Pan).—I do not invariably give my Goldfinches a daily feed of sunflower seed; often only three or four times or so a week. Siberian Goldfinches I give it more liberally. About eighteen (not less) seeds form my average offering to one bird. My Bullies I give it to practically regularly, as they get no hemp seed (except the hens up for breeding). Whether the sunflower should be cracked depends on the individual bird. Some British Goldies won't crack it; others do so readily. The same remark applies to Bullies, though they, as a rule, are devoted to sunflower once they taste it. It is only necessary to roll a jam jar lightly over it. It need only be shelled (or shelled and broken) while one is trying to coax a bird to taste of it. Safflower is a kind of small sunflower, but very hard, and must always be cracked (except, perhaps, for Hawfinches); it is a very "feeding" seed, and I have used it for years with success.

TREATMENT OF LINNET-CANARY MULING COUPLE (A. T. Penny).—The stock seed mixture of your Linnet and Canary couple (if you are keeping the two birds together) should be Canary and teazle, one and a half pint each; summer rape, half a pint. Then make up three mixtures as follows:—(a) Hemp, two parts; niger, one part; linseed, half a part by measure; (b) maw, thistle, dandelion, charlock, sesame, gold of pleasure, and lettuce equal parts of each, likewise by measure; (c) a good wild seed mixture. A heaping teaspoonful of one of these three mixtures should be given the birds every day (in a separate vessel; not with the stock mixture), taking them in turn. This treatment will bring them into the best possible condition, providing the birds are in good health, and are being kept under proper conditions. Egg bread should not be given until your Linnet is very near breeding condition, which you can tell by his song and the colour of his beak, as it will only bring your hen to nest before the Linnet is fit. All the early, young, tender dandelion leaves you can find should be gathered, likewise shepherd's purse, chickweed, and groundsel tops, and a good feed be given the birds daily. If they don't breed under this treatment, they will never breed at all. If you are keeping the hen Canary apart from the Linnet, let her have plain Canary seed one day, and the above mixture the next. You need not give her the wild seeds, but she should have a little of the other two (a and b).

A QUARTETTE (No nom-de-plume).—(1) It is gold of pleasure. Good mixed with other seeds; note a reply given last week. (2) Feed this bird up as advised a querist last week, evidently you overlooked the answer in question. He will come into song in a few weeks' time if round in health. (3) They might be very good dark Mules, though if the hen is very finely drawn (slim) there is a danger of them taking after her in shape. On the other hand, light Mules may possibly come; this, of course, it is impossible to foretell. (4) I manage to get a few fairly constantly.

TWO BIRDS (Posthorn).—Personally I cannot say that I consider either Goldfinch or Bullfinch very "difficult" to keep. If your Goldie was not well on arrival, then you can hardly blame yourself for losing it. Have you read the "Nutshell" booklets on the Goldfinch and the Bullfinch? You would be certain to find them helpful; also Mr. Norman's book on "Hardbills." It is quite true that the cock Bullfinch is invariably a failure as a Mule breeder. Therefore if you attempt to utilise your bird in this way, look upon it as in the nature of an experiment. I have not found Bullfinches particularly wasteful. Possibly you are not feeding it to the best advantage.

A SKYLARK MATTER (Lover of Birds).—It seems to me that your birds ought to have sung before this, especially the steady one. I presume you are not certain as to their sex. However, as they were newly caught, you should wait a few weeks longer, and so give them every chance of proving themselves cocks—mild spring weather may cause them to break into song. I do not class Larks as desirable aviary birds (that is, to keep amongst Hardbills). They do better, and sing more freely, when in a cage.

MATING A GOLDFINCH (T. Bowerman).—You must possess your soul in patience, as it is useless pairing up the Goldfinch yet awhile. As I am often pointing out, May is the earliest month (especially if we have cold, backward weather during the early spring), in which the Hybrid-breeder can hope to get full clutches. In a state of nature the Goldfinch is a late breeder, May being well turned ere he is far embarked upon domestic duties. Of course, we sometimes hear of Goldfinches kept in captivity (in, say, a heated living-room), and fed on stimulating seeds, fertilising eggs in February, or even January. The beginner is often misled by such reports. He forgets that breeders who perform feats of this kind rush at once into print to let us all know about it, and that the scores, maybe hundreds, who get clear eggs through their rashness in starting early, never say a single word about their failures—to shout in success and be silent in defeat is very human. Let them get to know each other by sight, by all means, but don't put them together and give them a nest-pan just yet. Note the reply given A. Townley last week.

THREE ITEMS (T. W. H.).—(1) It is far from unlikely that the Robins would nest in the aviary you describe, if given the run of the place. They are not to be relied upon as safe companions, by the bye, for other small birds. You would only need to provide a suitable nesting site or two (an old tin, or even kettle, laid on its side at the foot of a bush would probably prove irresistible), and nesting materials, such as moss, tiny twigs, lengths of dried grass, hay, etc., dead leaves, cow hair, and wool; and to feed well, offering plenty of live food (including gentles, and live ants' eggs in season). Read "Nutshell" booklet No. 25 for information as to the latter items. (2) Give the Chaffinch two or three mealworms daily; let it also have a dessertspoonful of cracked sunflower seed, and twice a week a teaspoonful of hemp in addition. If the bird is house-moulted it should be singing now. Feed on the lines laid down in the "Nutshell" booklet dealing with the species. (3) You will find the management of Tits dealt with in "Nutshell" No. 25, and the best foods described. As you do not tell me how you feed them, I cannot help you to trace the cause of the failure. I can say, however, that Blue Tits are not particularly easy to accustom to cage life; even with the best of management they are apt to "go light" and succumb after a few weeks of it. I do not, in fact, look upon them in the light of "desirable cage birds."

MANAGEMENT OF SIBERIAN GOLDFINCH (Tom Chambers).—A good stock mixture now would be canary and teazle three pints each, linseed one pint, summer rape a quarter-pint. A good feed of cracked sunflower (or mixed sunflower and safflower) must be given daily. Give a little maw and niger frequently. When newly-imported, I add two pints of niger (or inga) seed to the above stock mixture. Thistles, hardheads, dandelion, flowering groundsel and chickweed, wild seeds, etc., are all good for them, and appreciated. Many Siberians are lost through wrong treatment when first bought, owing to the unfortunate inexperience of the buyer. They are immediately put in a cage with food and water hung outside, consequently they starve or die of thirst, never before having seen a water-hole, much more put their head through one. Food and water should always be put inside to them, and it should be seen they get at the same. Inga (niger) seed is usually their staple food during importation. When they have got the taste for sunflower seed (it comes quickly, for they are very fond of it and it is a grand food for them), gradually wean them off the niger. When the birds are "well caged," a little sound hemp can be given now and again, but make certain it is good hemp. Should a bird seem to droop at any time, give at once a dose (two, if necessary) of syrup of buckthorn, 8 to 10 drops in two tablespoonfuls of water. Follow this with a course of citrate of iron and quinine crystals as a tonic, a tiny pinch (just a few granules) dissolved in the same quantity of water. Watch its effects on the bowels; it is constipating when given too strongly. Also, don't give grit freely at first. They will simply "gorge" it; and then comes trouble.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.,

GREY PARROT LAYING EGGS (K. O'Connell).—Your bird is not a Grey Parrot, but a Roseate Cockatoo, and there is certainly no reason why it should not breed if you procure a mate for it and can give them a very large cage, or a room. A barrel, say about 12 inches diameter by 18 inches deep, is about the most easily procured receptacle, and should be hung as high up as possible.

AMERICAN NIGHTINGALE (Harry).—I am not at all sure whether your query refers to the American Mocking bird or Virginian Cardinal or Nightingale; the former is a graceful bird, a little smaller than a Song Thrush, but with longer legs and tail, and has a wagtail-like appearance, its colours are not brilliant, ashy brown, variegated with various darker browns, white and whitish-grey; the under parts are white; the song of a good specimen is a marvel for change and variety, and the voice is powerful and very musical, and if this species, the Common Mocking Bird of North America (Mimus Polyglottus) is the bird offered you, it is cheap at the price, if a cock. The Virginian Nightingale was on our last coloured plate, and need not be described; it would also be cheap at this price, but I do not think the latter is the bird offered you.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

A KING AMAZON (J. W. Harrison).—(1) Of the capacity of clearness and distinctness of utterance, as well as the length of their vocabulary, is very variable, even among individuals of the same species. I opine your bird will improve, at any rate, cutting its tongue will not help matters, and is quite unnecessary. (2) This habit is not of the least moment, save that if indulged in on cage tray it may soil its plumage—acrobatic exercise will be good for it, as also will notice and attention help to keep ennui the enemy of all caged birds at bay. (3) Watch against constipation by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in the usual supply of drinking water) this foe can be kept at bay. Good, clean, wholesome food will do the rest—seed mixture, green food, stale crusts and plain biscuits, nuts and ripe fruit ad lib, will suffice and supply a sufficient range to vary the diet somewhat; grit and cuttlebone must also be regularly supplied.

IN BAD PLUMAGE (J. F.).—Continue the treatment advised in our last, but a week hence substitute Byno-phosphates for the Friar's Balsam, using double the quantity. Confine the diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, dry potato, stale crusts, plain biscuits, nuts, green food, and any kind of ripe fruit it will take. This will give you an ample range to supply a varied dietary—grit and cuttlebone must be regularly supplied. An ordinary Parrot drinker can be kept always in the cage filled with water. The bread and sugar will do no harm, and you soak into the bread about 10 drops of Byno-phosphates after it has been moistened with water. Seed mixture: One quart each canary seed, white millet, hemp and oats; one pint each paddy rice, maize, sunflower seeds, wheat and a handful of chilies; the whole to be well mixed. It will take some time to undo the mischief of the previous unwholesome dietary. Report progress a month hence.

YOUNG BLUE-FRONT (J. Reid).—I should put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water every fourth day for a time, but if the voidings become watery loose, then give it less frequently. On the intervening days put half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water and continue this for some time. If the running at the nostrils continues, bathe them with a tepid solution of glyco-thymoline. If you cannot handle the bird, use a camel-hair brush. Seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet, one pint each oats, paddy rice, and maize; half-a-pint each sunflower and wheat, and a few chilies. Well mix the whole. Some kind of ripe fruit daily. It will ultimately take a little biscuit and shelled walnuts; a little green food will be wholesome. To an Amazon a little boiled maize, which only keeps fresh one day, is beneficial twice a week; supply grit and cuttlebone regularly. There is much that is common to the two species, though there are slight differences as to the dieting, as you will see from above, but the Nutshell "Grey Parrot" will be a help.

EGG-LAYING REMARKABLE (E. Bromwich).—I do not see how you can check this, nor do I consider it would be wise, and I certainly advise you to let nature take its course without interference. Your general treatment is satisfactory. What I do advise is a large cage, and get a mate for it, putting in a log or small barrel (large enough for the birds to move round in comfortably), and I should say they would successfully rear some young Eclectus for you. The Grand Eclectus was bred in a Scottish aviary last year. I should omit the yolk of egg from the dietary. The duties of incubation, etc., would undoubtedly to some extent check the abnormal egg-laying.

SCARLET WEAVERS ("Weaver.")—This name is used both for the Madagascar and Crimson-crowned Weavers, but I think most of those being so advertised at the present time are the Crimson-crowned Weaver (Pyromelana flammiceps). In colour the Combassou is a steel-blue bird, with pale beak, legs, and feet. Out of colour he is like his more soberly coloured mate—light brown, streaked with darker brown and blackish. The Cordon Bleu is mouse-brown above, with the rump, upper tail-coverts, cheeks, throat, and breast bright blue; beak pinkish-crimson, with black tip; legs and feet flesh colour. The cock bird has crimson ear patches, which the female lacks.

BIRDS FOR CAGE (W. H. B.).—Providing you do not put in any hens, several cocks will agree in one cage. Alario Finch, Cape Canary (Grey-necked Serin), Grey Singing Finch, St. Helena Seedeater, are all very fair songsters, usually obtainable for about 7s. 6d. each, and are hardy, but, like all birds, must not be subjected to draught. Lovebirds are so kept, but they really need more room than an ordinary Canary cage, unless they are let out of the cage daily for exercise. A nice cage for a pair of these birds should have a base 18 inches square and be not less than 2ft. in height, with a couple of twiggy branches as perches. The birds should then be able to get ample exercise.

PULLING OUT ITS FEATHERS (R. U. Z.).—I should certainly keep the bowels of this bird moving quite freely for a time, yet the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery loose. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water, and twice weekly put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the water. Give the following seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet seeds; one pint each oats and hemp, half-pint each sunflower and paddy rice; well mix and keep a supply in the cage; supply ripe fruit liberally, any kind it will take. Vary the diet with stale crusts, plain biscuits, nuts and green-food. Grit and cuttlebone must be regularly supplied. Spray weekly with quassia solution, oftener in warm weather. Report progress a month hence. Keep it occupied and interested.

AILING WHYDAH ("Whydah").—You have done mostly what it is possible to do, and it would appear that the bird has now got a turn for the better. Keep it caged separately; keep a millet spray in the cage, replacing it when it is picked clean. Keep the bowels moving quite freely by using the magnesia as required, and giving chemical food in the intervening days. See that the watercress is thoroughly swilled before being given to the bird. Continue to give the mealworms till it is in decent plumage again. Let it have all the light and air possible [illegible] draught, and do not subject it to a too chill atmosphere.

BIRDS FOR INDOOR CAGE (W. B. C.).—Get pairs of Avadavats, Orange-cheeked, Golden-Crested, and Grey Waxbills, Bib Finches (7s. 6d.), Lavender Finches; except where otherwise marked the value is from 2/6 to 5/- per pair. As regards diet, supply canary, white millet, Indian millet, and millet sprays, green food, gritty sand for cage bottom, and water for drinking and bathing. Use twiggy branches for perches. Hang up several cocoanut shells or rush nests for sleeping quarters, and stand your cage in some position where a draught cannot blow through it. If you get our Nutshells, "Avadavats" and "Waxbills," 2½d. post free from our manager, these will give all details as to food and treatment. Do not be discouraged if you have a death or two at first, as Foreign birds are more or less prostrated on arrival from the hardships of the voyage to this country, and some few succumb therefrom.

INDOOR AVIARY (Swallowcliff).—If it is only the Waxbills and the Finches that you are losing, possibly the Budgerigars and Lovebirds are killing them, but if the deaths cover all kinds, there must be something wrong with the conditions of the aviary, such as atmosphere too damp—through draught from drawing-room window to conservatory, or the floor boards become saturated with the exereta and full of germs. I do not quite care to suggest taking up the wooden floor and filling in with earth and gravel till I know a little more of the conditions. What kind of trees have you in the aviary that the birds are flying among? The above is suggestive, perhaps you can give me some further information that will enable me to form some definite opinion as to cause. I also suggest sending the body of the next bird that dies to our Mr. Yates, for post-mortem examination. See rules.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A. Martin.—We think you will find that all birds are protected the year round in Greenwich and Woolwich, and the immediate neighbourhood.

R. T. Campbell and "Exhibitor of Bullfinches."—Your letters have been duly forwarded.

Jim Crow.—Your letter has been sent to Mr. St. John, who will give you advice upon the matter.

A Half-hearted Novice.—We cannot take notice of anonymous communications. If you want your letter published you must supply us with your name and address as a guarantee of your bona-fides.

John Ford, Sen.—Some of your statements are too much for us, and we have reluctantly had to consign your letter to the W.P.B. Where did you learn that the Goldfinch lived in the spring on the seeds out of fir cones, and all the winter on groundsel?

The Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—I still hold that shows held on week-end dates spell short entries, and that societies holding their shows in mid-week are better supported. Take, for instance, the show of the Cork C.B.A., held last January on Wednesday and Thursday. My birds were dispatched to me at 7.30 o'clock on Friday morning, and I received them at 11.30 the same morning. Now contrast that with the return journey from Holyrood show (whence the birds were dispatched on Saturday) when the birds were on rail for fifty eight hours. Now all exhibitors fight shy of week end shows on the off chance of having their birds detained in some draughty goods store on the railway on Sunday. Another cause, which I think is responsible for short entries is the fact that nearly all the Irish societies fix the dates of their shows in the month of November. Surely the show season (from November to February) is long enough, without everyone trying to have his show in November. We could thus avoid a lot of clashing of shows and friction between the members of the various societies.

J. F. Morgan.

Scotch Fancies at the Ulster O.A. (Belfast) Show.

Sir.—In reply to Mr. W. H. Gillespie in your issue of Feb. 8th re the alleged unfair report of Scotch Fancies at the recent Ulster O.A. show. He says if the "bird of circle" was left to the mercy of the reporter it would come in for a small share of the loaves and fishes. Now I think the Yorkshire would have absolutely no share of these if left to Mr. Gillespie, as his figures go to show, when finding a loss of 8s. 6d. on these classes, which is quite incorrect. He is also wrong in stating the difference between the entry fees and prize-money in Scotch Fancy classes shows a small credit balance, taking his figures from the published catalogue. In support and fairness to the Yorkshire Fancy I herewith give a complete summary of the various classes: Yorkshires 4s. gain, Norwich 10s. gain, Mules 4s. gain, British 4s. gain, song bird selling class 10s. gain, Scotch Fancies 6s. loss. These figures are taken from the catalogue which I enclose herewith for you, Mr. Editor, to check.

A. E. Winkup.

To Prevent the Stealing of Show Birds.

Will Small Doors Solve the Problem ?

Sir,—I see another correspondent is interested in birds stolen Every show season we hear the same tale, viz., some valuable bird or birds stolen either at show or else on the journey to and from the shows, and yet exhibitors keep on sending birds to show in the same style and running the same risks year after year. We hear of show cages with bells fixed on, or with locks, or the same as your correspondent says. Locks and bells are out of the question. We all know it is the work of a moment to snip a lock off or to stop a bell ringing. Your correspondent, Mr. Ousman's idea is all right, but I think myself it is not a clue to where the bird was stolen; what is wanted is a preventative against birds being stolen and to place every obstacle in the way of the thieves. It is not an extraordinary sleight-of-hand trick, when you come to look at it, for a person to calmly wait his chance until the show room is not overcrowded, or the particular bird he is after is a bit secluded from the view of the show officials—we know they cannot have their eyes on every bird at the same time. How easy then for the thief to bob his hand in and out of the cage and secure a bird worth more, probably, than ten times its weight in gold, and then calmly walk out of the show-room. We all know it is done, as valuable birds don't always melt into the air, and it is always the same way they have gone, viz., through the cage door. Exhibitors, why do you let the thief, whether it be on a station platform, or in a show room, or anywhere else, put his hand in your show cage? Stop his hand from going into the cage. How? you perhaps may ask. Well, I have had the idea some time now, and I have placed the idea before other cage makers. Let us now see what is the exhibitors' opinion. I think they will find my idea of a cage-door the best. If any reader can find a better idea, I will raise my hat to him as the more ingenious a cage can be, the better for the exhibitors, and the worse for the thief. To this end fanciers should direct their inventive genius, and give to the Fancy the benefit of their ideas, and not wait until another show season comes and goes, and more valuable birds go astray. Well, my idea is, as I said before, to stop a hand from going into the cage. Why have a large door to your cages, which you can nearly put your head through, let alone your hand? Why not have a small cage door just large enough for the bird to pass through comfortably, and yet keep the long fingers out? Some will ask, what will the Judge do when it comes to examining a bird? Well, it is not a large order for show officials to provide a cage with a large door to run birds into which require handling, for examination. Now, for the advantages of a small door. A man can calmly unfasten a show-cage and slip his hand into a cage while the case is left for a few minutes on a railway platform, especially when the birds have to change; for instance, a case travels by a fast train, and has to change on to a branch line, and probably by the next train in. The case is left unattended a few minutes, and that is the time, I fancy, the deed is done. If you have a small door to your cage, he will require another cage and plenty of light to run the bird into the latter. Not quite so easy as putting his hand into the cage—without he takes the lot, and then the railway officials would miss them, and he would soon be traced. How would the thief fare in a show room? Worse, I should think. He would soon be detected running a bird out of its show cage. Even if he got the bird into his cage he would have a hard job to conjure the cage up his sleeve or into his pocket, or under his hat, when passing out of the show room. Another point, you could let your mind rest content that no one but the show officials would be able to handle your birds.

Canaries and their Colours.

Are Buffs Yellows and Yellows Buffs ?

Sir,—It has interested me very much to hear how fanciers in general call Canaries by their colour, and in dealing with yellow and buff, I think they are wrong. According to all recognised books of colours a buff is deeper in shade than a yellow, yet all the fanciers whom I have met call the light yellow Canary a buff, and the darker Canary a yellow. I was at a bird show some time ago and drew my friend's (a bird fancier) attention to how the tickets described the birds. Then I gave him my opinion, but he could not see eye to eye with me in my argument. So I promised to show him a colour book to prove my statement, and he then admitted I was right, but could give no reason for the fanciers mis-naming the colour of the birds. However, he assured me that your valuable paper would open a discussion. I am not a bird fancier, and know nothing about the breeds, but have, in the course of my business, been dealing in colours daily for the past twenty years, and in my opinion colours, starting from white, read thus: Yellow, buff and cinnamon, or dark buff, instead of buff, yellow and cinnamon. Perhaps you would be good enough to give this letter space in your columns, so that an explanation of how the fanciers consider a buff Canary is lighter in colour than a yellow Canary may be forthcoming..

The Blackcap Warbler in Ireland.

Sir,—In answer to "A Subscriber," re the feeding of a Blackcap Warbler in Ireland, I make my food as follows:—Get 2 or 3 lbs. broken biscuits (4d. lb.), grind up fine in old coffee mill (or roll with bottle), and add ½-lb. best ant eggs, 4 oz. dried flies, 4 oz. ground meat meal, 4 oz. ground silkworm pupæ, and mix well. Then I take sufficient of this mixture and mix it well with a fork with a piece of banana, instead of water or grated carrot. I find they do well on it. I also give a piece of banana in addition to his stock food, and he cleans the skin of banana out quite clean daily, not a scrap of fruit left. I also put a mealworm cut into 3 or 4 pieces, on top of his food, daily, once about 8 or 9 a.m., and next time about 2 p.m. My bird is singing A1, and has been doing so for about 6 weeks or more. He moulted out clean, and without any trouble, on this diet, and is always as lively as if he was out in the open He is in a breeding cage, 20 by 18 by 10, and is continually flying about and flapping his wings. My Blackcap sung right through last summer up to the moult (end of August), and commenced singing, low at first, about middle of October, and is in first-class fettle. Of course a piece of cold potato, given occasionally is good, also a little sponge cake, size of cracker nut, also sweet apple or pear: nothing like giving a change with Softbills, or Hardbills, for the matter of fact. Of course, if "A Subscriber" hasn't got more than one bird (Softbill), he can halve the quantities given above, or buy a good insectivorous food for about 1s. 6d. lb. But I like making my own, then I know of what it is composed. Don't forget the order of the bath

The Date of Hartlepools Show

Sir,—Re Hartlepools C.B.S. show date, we should like to state in reply to the letter in your last issue that the date of our next open show was allotted to us at the annual general meeting of the North Yorkshire and South Durham Federation of Cage Bird Societies. The delegates attending desired that at least a fortnight should elapse between each show, and after much discussion, Middlesbrough were allotted our late date, viz., the last Saturday in October, therefore in order to allow the agreed fortnight to elapse we were compelled to let our show fall on the 8th November.

Woodhead and Pyman, Hon. Secs.

Sir,—In your issue January 18th, I see the hon. secs. of Hartlepool Show are asking societies not to clash. A while ago they stated that the October date was their own; now they have taken November 8th, well knowing that was the date of West Stanley Cage Birds Show. We held our annual meeting December 28, and in the following week's Cage Birds it was reported. Now they are the first ones to clash. I hear they are members of the North Yorkshire and South Durham Federation, and this is what they do! If my memory leads me right, they once wrote re South Shields and Derwent Valley clashing!

Short Entries at Scottish Shows.

Are "Clique" Judges to Blame?

Sir,—I have been interested in the above correspondence. I have reason to believe there are cliques in the Fancy. I am of opinion that no matter who judged such shows as the Scottish National, the Crystal Palace, etc., a good entry would be obtained. But let some of the judges be at smaller shows in the country and fanciers refuse to follow them. Funny things exist in Border Fancy circles. One show with a specialist Border judge had not one class full. Further, I showed a few at one of the biggest exhibitions, and really was surprised at some of the classes. But I don't wonder now at the placing of the tickets, for I learned last week that the judge stayed overnight with one of the most successful exhibitors, and also went on to the show with him on the judging morning. Now everything may have been above-board, but I ask, can judges wonder at novices being jealous or suspicious when they learn these things? They naturally think the birds would be talked about. I venture to say, too, that this judge knew that a certain even-marked yellow was standing its first chance in an even-marked class, this bird being a great uneven of last year, as I pointed out to many in the show. I say that it is an uneven yet. Surely the B.F.C.C. will take action? Shall we ever get the Fancy pure?—

A Disgusted Exhibitor.

Sir,—It is with pleasure I read the letters in your valuable paper re short entries at Scottish shows. Being the writer of the first letter, I would like to rub it in a bit harder on the clique judges, for the benefit of the Fancy and next show season. I will give you a few of the mean things done by some of the clique. One judge, when a fancier asked him about a well-known winner he had put out of the money tickets, said, "It is a good yin, but, mon, I hae yin that wid bring ye tae the fore." It was not a matter of bringing him to the fore, but to get sale for a few birds he had. Another of the many mean tricks done by a well-known judge was, after he had finished judging and had seen the catalogue, he went over to the birds he had made a mistake with and wrote "soft" on their cages. A trick done by honest fanciers which I was proud to see, was to put sand in their cages, and so puzzle the judge in giving his awards. I could give a few more tricks done by the clique, but I think that is enough to convince "Plainhead" that there are cliques existing in the Fancy, more especially in Borders. I am pleased to see the same judge got very poor entries at a show with the best of classification, and hardly any other shows on that date. The meanest trick of all is one of the most prominent of the clique buying up all the Greens, Clears and Cinnamons he can get hold of, and fanciers buying them expect to breed winners, when they are not related to his winners at all. Next year will prove it. Having shown a good bit over 220 birds last show season, I am not downhearted yet, as if I am spared to next show season and get a breeding season at all, I hope to show as many again, but not under the clique I am referring to. I hope by that time they are all wiped off the carpet, and we have honest judging, also fanciers who can take beating when their birds are honestly beaten. I may say that I would not like to imitate the staging, as some of the birds were neither worth staging nor worth keeping, even for songsters. I hope that next show season will be a record one, and that instead of grumbling when we go to the shows we shall be able to congratulate our fellow fanciers upon their honest wins, and before we part have a wee dauch in doras, with the expectation of beating him at the next show.

Lover of Justice.

Sir,—I think it is about time that some steps were taken to try and alter the present manner in which judging is being carried out at our shows. I know fanciers who will not exhibit under certain judges, because they say that they won't get a run for their money. For instance, a certain judge came to judge a show near Glasgow, and got a poor turn-out o fbirds, and I am sure that if the reporter had only heard a little of the remarks passed, his report would have been different. Again, those fanciers who were at a big show near Glasgow, and heard the remarks passed between the Judge and a well-known exhibitor of Border Fancies, would have cause to open their eyes. The Border Club rules say that Borders must not be more than five and a-half inches long, and that there must be no colour-feeding. Now I understand the judge, when questioned, said that some of the birds were too small, and that he was judging for size and colour. What a chance for colour feeding! If we are going to exhibit birds, let us show fairly, and let those who judge the birds give their candid opinion. If they make mistakes, let it be for the benefit of the novice, and not the well-known exhibitor. In conclusion, let me say, do away with some of the present judges, and let others have a chance.

Just a Novice.

We have also received a letter, signed "Fancier," which bears on this topic, but the present state of the law of libel precludes its publication.—Editor.

The Keeping and Feeding of Goldfinches.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent I would advise him in the first place to get his Goldies from the catcher or dealer as soon as possible after they are caught, then give soaked or scalded seeds for a few weeks, gradually weaning them on to hard seed. I am certain a great many birds are lost through fanciers giving them hard and unsuitable seeds too soon. During the latter months of last year it was exceedingly wet, all seeds were in a very soft state, and no bird, however healthy, can stand to be put on hard seeds right away. They sometimes do well for a week or two, then the digestive organs give way, diarrhoea sets in, and death soon follows. To begin with, fill a dish of hemp, teazle, canary, and any other wild seed you may have; put in only as much as you need for the following day, and pour boiling water over same; let the seed soak till morning, then put into a sieve, place in front of fire, or in slow oven, for a minute or two to dry up the excessive moisture, and it will be ready for use. Add a little crushed hemp and sunflower. Watch the birds carefully for a few weeks, to find what seeds they are partial to; if they are doing well on any particular seed, let them have it. I find some Goldies do well on one seed, while others do better on another. For example I had a Goldie that would eat nothing but a packet mixture, and he moulted out a grand bird with as nice a blaze as I ever saw on a Goldie. Others again were very fond of teazle, and at the present time I have two Goldies in the pink of condition, and in full song, who will eat nothing but hemp seed. I don't doubt for one moment the fanciers who wrote to Cage Birds some time ago, saying they had Goldies doing well on canary seed alone, but, personally, I have never had one to live for any length of time unless it had a supply of hemp seed daily, and other wild seeds in season. Linnets and Twites should be treated in the same manner, adding rape and a little linseed to the menu. In cases of diarrhoea I have found a few drops of brandy and the sediment of port wine very useful. Tormentil root is also very good.

James B. Clarke.

Sir,—"Goldfinch Fancier's" hope that his letter should meet my eye has been realised, and I am happy in informing him that my theory and practice of feeding Goldfinches on plain canary seed still holds good. I have not lost one since I wrote that letter, and I am still pursuing the same method, and am convinced that if (after once having meated them off) he adopts the same plan, he will have no cause to regret it.

New Society for Hucknall Huthwaite and District.

Sir,—A new society was formed on Feb. 8th for this district. The headquarters are the Shoulder of Mutton Inn. A good number of fanciers put in an appearance, and 15 members were enrolled. The society will fill a long felt want, and a good sec. has been found in Mr. Taylor. Mr. Burton was elected chairman, and Mr. Marshall vice-chairman. Mr. Sam Platts, host of the Shoulder of Mutton, has consented to become the treasurer. Will all members and intending members roll up to the next meeting, which is held on the second Saturday in March. Entrance, 1s., and sub. 3s. per annum.

Sale C.B.S. Loses £10

But Pays All Prize Money.

Sir,—The Sale and District C.B.S. would like to inform members and friends that although they had a loss of about £10 on their open show, which, by the way, was a record one in entries, they have been able to pay all prize money and settle all accounts. We are starting the new year free from debt, and are making new members, but the committee would like to see more of the old members giving us their presence and support at our meetings. We also extend an invitation to the members of the late Altrincham Society to come in and join us to make this the cage bird society of the district. Our next meeting will be held at our headquarters, The Volunteer Hotel, Sale, at 8 p.m., Monday, February 17th, when we shall be pleased to receive as many applications for membership as possible. The subscription is 4s. per year.

A Broken Wing Mended.

The Bird Survives for Eighteen Years.

Sir,—A friend near here a little over 18 years ago picked up a Greenfinch cock with a broken wing. He took it home, bound the broken wing to the body, and carefully tended the bird till well. After he got all right, they opened the door for the bird to fly back to the kind Nature that our critics talk so much about, but Master Greenie would not go, and he has preferred to stop with these "cruel" people all these years, who have kept him in a cage. To-day he is still merry and bright, although so old, which he would not be if he suffered in any way through being "behind the bars." This same friend has just had die a favourite Skylark that had seen 15 summers; he will be greatly missed by his master, and his neighbours, for in the spring and summer his lovely song was greatly appreciated by the many whose privilege it was to hear him. I thought these facts were worth noting, as they can be verified any day.

The Norwich Plainhead Club Competitions.

A Suggestion for Amateur Classes.

Sir,—I noticed a communication from Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe relating to the N.P.C. winners. I don't know whether the names of the fortunate winners of the various specials have yet appeared in the Press, but certain it is I haven't seen any report giving them, unless it is that I have overlooked it somehow. It is nearly two months since the competitions finished. Surely the secretaries have had time to give the members who were so unfortunate as not to be present at the dinner the results through the Press; or is it that the N.P.C. is not of sufficient importance to have the winners of its competition advertised? In the announcement of the dinner that you gave Mr. Davies is reported as having asked what became of the novices after they had won promotion, and added that they couldn't expect societies to give extra classes for amateurs—by which I suppose he means a kind of half-way stage—in addition to the already big classification demanded. No one knows better than Mr. Davies that, because a novice has won his three firsts, it doesn't follow that he can hold his own, or compete with teams put down by himself and a few others. It is all very well to appeal to the members' patriotism for support. Patriotism is all right for those with a well-lined pocket, but that will not reimburse the working man, who keeps on sending to shows, for his entry fees and heavy railway charges. No; he just either keeps his birds at home, or otherwise sends them to a show where he knows, or hopes, Messrs. "Champion and Co." will not appear. There he has a chance of paying his expenses. If the N.P.C. could see their way to granting, say, four classes to the middlemen, it would be one of the best things they have ever done. But how is it to be done? I have no doubt the pros. will kick at having their classes reduced, while I should never suggest reducing the well paying novice classes, and, as Mr. Davies says, the societies can't be expected to grant more. What about the natural colour classes? If I remember rightly, those classes were put on for the benefit of a few members who objected to colour feeding their birds. I may be wrong, but that is how I understood it. I never remember them filled at any show. Many a time—notably the last season—they have been cancelled, and nearly always they are a loss to the societies. Why keep them on? As I said, they were put on for the benefit of the anti-colour feeder, and they have degenerated into a happy hunting ground for the deck-sweeper. I suggest drop them. That would account for two classes for the middlemen. Where are the other two to come from? Yellows are scarcer than buffs. Show the yellow cocks all in one class, i.e., clears and marks. That would be three classes. Surely societies would risk another class. If not, let the N.P.C. guarantee the fourth. I expect I shall have a host of the pros. on my track when they read this. I don't mind how many, so long as it will promote discussion on this interesting subject. Perhaps Mr. Davies himself has a scheme?

Remarkable Journey of a Swallow.

Sir,—In sending you the attached extract from "British Birds" for February, which I think cannot fail to prove of interest to your readers, I may mention that over 32,000 rings have now been placed on wild birds of many kinds, and that this is leading to results of great interest and importance in connection with the study of birds. Should ringed birds ever come into the hands of your readers, I hope they will notify the same at once, stating the name on the ring and the number, as well as the date and place where the bird was found. I will then at once inform them when and where the bird was ringed.

H. F. Witherby.

SWALLOW RINGED IN STAFFORDSHIRE, RECOVERED IN NATAL.

On December 23rd a Swallow was caught in the farmhouse of the farm "Roodeyand," 18 miles from Utrecht, Natal, with a metal label round its leg, with the words: Witherby, High Holborn, London, and on the other side B.830. The farmer, Mr. J. Mayer, took the label off and has it in his possession. The ring B.830 was put on an adult Swallow by Mr. J. R. B. Masefield, at Rosehill, Cheadle, Staffordshire, on May 6th, 1911. This bird was one of a pair (Mr. Masefield thought the female) which nested in a porch. Its mate was also caught and ringed. At the same time Mr. Masefield ringed another pair nesting in the same porch. In the summer of 1912 he again caught the Swallows which had come to nest in his porch and found that only one of them had a ring, viz. B.827, which was one of the birds nesting there the year before. Neither its mate nor the other pair of which the present B.830 is one had returned to this particular spot. That this Swallow breeding in the far west of Europe should have reached so far to the south-east of Africa as Natal, seems to me extraordinary. Unfortunately the few records we have as yet of ringed Swallows recovered during migration do not afford a clue to the routes taken, and it seems to me unreasonable to suppose that our birds proceed southwards down the east side of Africa as might be inferred from this Natal record. It is, indeed, quite impossible to theorise on a single recovery of this kind and we must be content at present with the bare fact—perhaps the most startling fact that the ringing of birds has as yet produced.—H. F. Witherby.

Sir,—Replying to note re ring on Bullfinch caught at Lochussie, sent by me, I may inform you the date was January 30th, 1913.

Arranging the Perches in Box Cages.

Sir,—I am well aware that box cages would be more suitable than open wire ones for Canaries in the way of keeping off draughts, but the worst of the former kind is, the bird has to spend so much time on the floor while feeding and drinking that the feet get dirty, and next the perches get soiled so quickly that they have to be cleaned frequently. That is a trouble if one has not much spare time. My Canaries take little notice when I am giving them food and water, and cleaning the sand drawer every morning, but the removal of the perches would not be to their liking at all. I've been trying to think of some way to arrange box cages so that the birds could feed and drink without having to go on the floor, but up to the present have failed to make out any satisfactory way. Would some cage-maker give an idea about it?

A NOTABLE GATHERING AT THE JUDGES' LUNCHEON.

Mr. Ramsden thinks it time he retired: His audience expresses an emphatic opinion to the contrary.

There was an unusually large attendance at the judges' luncheon, which was held immediately after the conclusion of the judging. Mr. G. Crabb presided, and was supported by Dr. and Mrs. Anningson, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ramsden, Mr. and Mrs. Law, Madame Feist Madewell, Mr. and Mrs. Thynne, Mrs. Griffiths, Rev. G. H. Raynor, Capt. J. H. "Jimmy" Dewar responds for the Judges to the toast of their health.

In proposing "The Judges," Mr. Crabb said he was not going to detain them long, because he knew they were all anxious to get back to the birds, but before he said anything about the judges, he was going to read a telegram from one who in the past had been with them on many occasions, and who in his retirement had never forgotten them—good old Joe (cheers) had again thought of them. In his telegram he said: "My love to you all. Hearty good wishes." It was nice to be remembered by old friends, and their old friend Joe always remembered. He had also to speak of another of their old judges, and it was with a note of sorrow that they heard of the passing away of their good friend, Joe Bexson. Mr. Crabb went on to say that he had stood before them so often on the occasion of the Palace judges' luncheon that he really had nothing new to say. He was pleased to see so many present, and gave them a most hearty welcome. They had got a remarkably good show together again, and although the entries were short in some classes, they were made up in others. The quality was grand, the exhibits being quite the best that the country could produce. As to the judges, we know that they are good men and true, some of the best, and although we cannot always agree with them, we reckon they do their best to find the birds which are most deserving of the prizes. In their modesty they perhaps would not agree with me, but it is so. I intend asking Messrs. Dewar and Hodder to respond to the toast. Mr. Dewar was one of their oldest judges, and his work was well known, even as his experience was great. Mr. Hodder, however, although not young in years, was young as a judge, and was, he believed, making his first appearance. He had now made his first attempt at the Palace, and he hoped it would give satisfaction to the exhibitors. One thing Mr. Hodder certainly knew more about judging than he did before, and perhaps when he met the exhibitors he would know more still.

Mr. Dewar, in his reply, said Mr. Crabb had made a great mistake in calling upon him—he was not a speaker. The man who should have been called upon was Mr. Mundell, and he knew, for had he not slept in the same hotel as Mr. Mundell, and had he not heard him practising his speech up till three o'clock in the morning. He thanked them for associating his name with the toast, and would ask Mr. Mundell to reply, because he knew that he was bursting to speak.

Mr. Hodder said he was quite a novice at judging, and he had been put amongst the novices. He had found a grand lot of birds in his classes, and had been particularly struck with the winning yellow in class 70. It was a regular stormer, and the winning yellow hen was also a gem. He had done his best; he did not know if he had given satisfaction to the exhibitors or not, but one thing he could say, he had asked Mr. Heath to look over the classes. Mr. Heath had done so, and had expressed satisfaction with the awards that he (the speaker) had made. He was glad he had been appointed, and hoped the L.P.O.S. would not drop him, but give him another chance.

Mr. W. Mundell, in proposing the health of Mr. J. W. Ramsden, said that the judges were all right, and so were the birds; they were a jolly good lot. Mr. Ramsden, he thought, was the most capable show manager he had ever met. He was a bit keen on the judges, and expected a lot from them, but he (the speaker) had always found him straight, and a perfect gentleman. There was a lot of work in connection with a show like the Palace, and it required a good business man to carry it through.

Mr. Ramsden thanked the company for the kind way in which the toast had been received. He thought that sometimes they were rather inclined to exaggerate the value of his services, and as he was getting older and business pressed, he hoped they would appoint a younger man. (Cries of "No, no," from all over the room met this remark). If they did he hoped they would extend to him the same kindness and courtesy as had always been given to himself. He would like to thank the exhibitors who had done so much to make the show a success, and had helped considerably in lessening the work and worry of the show by sending their entries in at the appointed time. He could not convey to them any idea of the difference it made in the working of the show when all the entries were in, as they were on this occasion, at the proper date of closing.

Mr. Heath proposed "The Chair," a toast that was most heartily received. In a few brief words Mr. Crabb replied, and then the company wended its way back to the show.

For the Next Palace Show.

Sir,—A few fanciers, members of the Derwent Valley C.B.S., who have the desire to visit the Crystal Palace Show of 1914, have proposed to form a small club. If there are any fanciers in the district who would like to join same, would they kindly send their names to sec., Mr. E Jameson, 59, High Westwood, Hamsterley Colliery, and we will try and arrange about same at our next meeting. We could pay a small contribution every fortnight. Hoping this scheme turns out successful.

The Marauding Cat.

Sir,—Yesterday a curious incident occurred in my outdoor aviary, which is about 14ft. long, and half-covered by tarpaulin. At the time I had only a newly-caught hen Robin and a cock Chaffinch outdoors. When feeding them I was surprised to see a second Robin. I looked to see how it could have entered, and where the previous day had been a minute cut in the tarpaulin I saw a hole almost large enough to admit a cat. As I had that morning frightened two cats from off the roof I know it was their doing, but, curiously enough, the birds confined inside had not escaped. The second Robin can only have got in there. All this must have happened before 8 a.m. Can any reader tell me an efficient way of preventing this being repeated?

Late Entries at the Palace Show

Sir,—I, like Mr. Godley, had my entries returned as too late, and being a member of the L. and P.O. Society, I also enclosed my subscription for 1913, which also was returned. Now I don't know who is to blame but myself for not properly taking note of date when the entries finally closed. But surely a National show of such calibre as the Palace ought not to enforce the final date of receiving entries thirteen days before the show takes place. Of course it can be argued that some are always behind, even to the last day or two. That, I admit, wants putting a stop to. But thirteen days prior to the show, is, to my mind, perfectly ridiculous.

Gossip from the Palace

A. MISUNDERSTOOD MATTER.

Is the Fieldfare a Thrush? was another much discussed topic. The answer, of course, is "yes." Who said a Ring Ousel was not a Thrush?

NOT AN EASY MATTER.

A gentleman representing some Humane Society button-holed Mr. Ramsden to know if it was possible to make a rule for all exhibition birds to have their seed and water vessels placed outside the cages, to prevent possibility of fouling.

'WARE THE BAR!

The notices on the secretary's office of specialist club meetings, and giving directions how to get to the meeting place, were written, it is said, with an eye to full gatherings by carefully following the directions one got there without passing too near the bar.

CONSULTING (?) THE JUDGE.

Mr. Heath did not shirk his responsibilities as judge of Norwich and Crests. He was among them every day of the show, always ready to give his reasons for placing one over the other, and we have every reason to think he satisfied most of the enquirers even the inveterate grumblers.

GETTING MORE THAN YOU WANT.

One met fanciers on all sides seeking birds; some found them, others did not. One or two we met looked all through the limit and other classes, only to eventually find what they required among the pairs. It sounds quite sporty to buy a pair to get a single bird! Time is getting on, however.

STILL WINNING.

Mr. Binn's buff cock was greatly admired. He has a wonderful reputation. He won at the Palace as an unflighted bird four years ago, and has scored no end of premier awards since. Although he was not staged in the best possible condition, he won well in his class.

THERE WHEN WANTED.

"J.W.R." is nothing if not thorough. We noticed a big fishing net handy to land lost birds with (fortunately it wss not required). At many shows this necessary article is frequently not to be found when most needed, and there is generally a good deal of chaff while a steward hunts the bird!

A LONG PRICE REFUSED.

Among the Norwich perhaps Mr. Joe Thomas' third prize buff cock was as much admired as any. He is certainly a grand bird, and we were informed that during the show one admirer offered Mr. Thomas £18 for it. A long figure, certainly, but not surprising to those who know the difficulty of getting a real good one.

BACKING THE WINNER.

There was a good deal of wagering Yorkshire way, on the winner of special for best bird. One gentleman planked a golden coin of the realm on Mr. Binn's buff cock, and another on Messrs. Ogden Bros.' unflighted buff. As a matter of fact neither won, for "Jimmy" Bailey once more held the trump card.

THE 36th VISIT.

Said veteran "Jimmy" Howard: "How many Palace shows have you been at, G.?" "Oh! don't ask me to feel old!" replied "G.G." "Well!" said Jimmy, "this makes my 36th show, and I have never missed one. And, what is more, I have been in my time one of the largest individual exhibitors at the show!"

A GREAT RECORD.

In the course of a few minutes' cheery chat with the great little "Jimmy" Bailey, who naturally was delighted at winning the championship diploma in the Yorkshire section, he mentioned with pardonable pride that this made the twelfth time out of sixteen years that his birds had secured this high honour for him.

WING BAIL.

On the last day of the show one bird (a Parrakeet) managed to escape. He was sent to the show in such a cage as compelled the attendant to open the door to give him fresh water daily. He managed to squeeze by, and soaring away to the roof, shrieked to his companions below. The replies were certainly audible, if not understandable.

SIGNALLING.

We were surprised to see a Yorkshire lad flourishing a fiver like a boy scout signalling. We wondered at first what the trouble was. But he was only attracting J. W. R.'s attention, who, you may be sure, was soon on the spot for fear it should go into the pocket again. The lad only wanted that clear buff out of the novice class. "Eh! it's a right good —," he said.

UNCONVINCED YET!

We heard of a heated discussion between an old fancier and various other old fanciers as to which was the larger—a Tree Pipit or a Meadow Pipit. The majority who had had practical experience said there was not a shadow of doubt—the former. Notwithstanding the view expressed by several authorities, we heard talks of "Fivers" and "Fresh Air Funds" from the unconvinced starter of all the trouble!

NOT ONE SICK BIRD.

The birds had the very best of attention, Mr. Ramsden, with his usual thoughtfulness, having engaged Mr. W. Shakespere specially to look after any sick or ailing birds, but so healtby was the whole gathering that his services as medical attendant were not required. The only casualty was that of a moody Budgerigar, who was either tired of this life or feared the interference of the suffragettes, and so managed in some manner to hang himself to the wires of his cage. Unfortunately, no one noticed his "suicide" until too late. One of Mrs. Deacon's grand Cinnamons arrived at the show dead —hard lines.

BILL SYKES—BUNGLER!

On the day upon which entries finally closed burglars paid a visit to the show manager's house! Evidently they thought they were timing it nicely to make a fat haul of exhibitors' postal orders and cheques. And it was only by sheer good luck that some, at any rate, of the cash did not disappear. What postal orders, etc., Mr. Ramsden had in the house were lying on a sideboard in the centre of a loosely-folded copy of the "Daily Telegraph"! Bill Sykes passed them by! They were too "obvious" to attract his professional eye! Unfortunately, however, he "pinched" all J.W.R.'s best cigars, and drank his whisky (to the annoyance of our representative who called on him next day to obtain details of the entry), and, worst of all, decamped with some valuable items of clothing, Mrs. Ramsden, unfortunately, suffering the most seriously.

ROUND THE STALLS.

A very prominent feature of the show—and now quite a "hardy annual"—was the stall of Mr. Joe Thomas, of Amblerthorn. Upon this could be found high quality Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Mules, and other birds. He had a good steady demand for them, disposing of most of his stock during the time the show was open. He brought a few Cinnamons with him, but these were snapped up almost at once. Cages of all kinds were also much enquired for, and altogether business was quite satisfactory. Two pairs of Lizards, Mr. T. informed us, had just been bought to take to Australia.

Mr. Chas. Roehl (of Edgware Road, W.) was in his usual position to the left of the secretary's office. He had on view all requisites for bird breeding, and particularly for Rollers, of which he makes a speciality. At this stall could be seen special breeding cages, basket nests, baths, etc.; also the necessary mechanical organs for training the budding champions. Some of his small aviaries and drawing room cages (particularly those upon stands) are wonderfully handsome, and would make charming ornaments for any home.

Carter's stall was, as usual, just inside the entrance, and there the choicest specimens of all varieties of seeds used in the Fancy were on view. Upon enquiry, we heard that the business done was quite up to the usual, there being a steady demand for this firm's exceptionally fine seeds.

Just at the entrance, so as to catch the visitors before they got to the birds, Messrs. Spiller and Baker, with Mr. E. S. Lugg in charge, had a very tastefully arranged gathering of all the specialities of this enterprising firm. Their Finch and wild seed mixtures are now well known to the Fancy, and many well-known men use these continually. Although Canary seed has risen greatly in price, Mr. Lugg informed us that fanciers still prefer the best. The samples we saw were as good as one could possibly desire. We were particularly struck with some good hemp, very clean, of fine colour, and evidently well ripened. Fanciers will need some like it pretty soon.

Mr. J. W. Ramsden had a neatly arranged show of his pure tasteless pepper, showing the raw pod and the ground powder. The colour was wonderfully deep and rich. Quite dazzling, his silversmith's show of special prizes attracted a lot of attention, and we overheard more than one remark "which on 'em they'd like." Mr. Ramsden is putting on the market a new tonic food (named "Lacphos"), which promises to equal in popularity his famous sweet pepper. It is a grand thing to ensure vigorous stock birds, plenty of young, and a good and quick moult, while it is economical in use.

Trower and Co. (Caledonian Road, N.) had a splendid collection of seeds, both loose and in packets, baths, drinkers, nest pans, etc., on view. They tell us they have a steadily increasing demand for both "Cecto" and "Softbilo," two fine mixtures put up by the firm for the feeding of softbill birds. Trade was brisk, particularly for Canary seed, many fanciers getting in a decent stock while the price is fairly reasonable. Messrs. Trower had some grand samples, also, of the choicer seeds, such as maw, hemp, niger, etc., which are always in good demand at the Palace. The business done by this firm on Saturday was somewhat above the average, most of the visitors this year being genuine bird-keepers.

Messrs. Hyde and Co.'s stall was, as usual, tastefully arranged with their specialities. The majority of their goods are put up in packets for all varieties of cage birds, and sold at all seed and corn stores, etc. Their foods and remedies keep wonderfully to the front and command a ready sale, which is the best evidence of their excellence.

Cage Birds stall came in for a fair share of attention, which, we hope, was merited, and our various handbooks were in steady demand. It is pleasing to find them so widely recognised as just the practical, thoroughly informative works needed to help fanciers through the breeding season, with its joys and its troubles, and to assist them in keeping all kinds of birds to the best possible advantage.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Annual pair show held Feb. 4, at the Broadway. The entry was good, although hardly up to last year. Yorks. and Borders were the most numerous, some of the pairs being all that one could desire for future stock purposes. Norwich were a grand lot, Mr. Saunders, Sutton, sending in a strong team, his winning pair, a buff ticked cock and yell. hen, were of grand type and quality of feather. This magnificent pair took the special for best in section and best in show. Mr. H. Smith managed the show with his usual tact and ability, assisted by Messrs. Thynne, Stoakley, etc. Mr. J. Robsou judged.

THE SHOW THAT LEAVES PLEASANT RECOLLECTIONS

The 54th annual Great National Show was held at the Crystal Palace on February 7, 8, 10, and 11, under the auspices of the London and Provincial O.S. It may be summed up as a thoroughly successful, splendidly managed, and very enjoyable function. That the Fancy generally has complete confidence in the present management is evidenced by the exceptionally good entry which results year after year at this historic fixture. On the present occasion close on 2,200 exhibits graced the benches —three less than in 1912, though the average entry per class, as 12 classes had been removed from the schedule, was actually a better one.

There were some strange fluctuations in certain of the sections—or fluctuations that seemed strange at first glance. But this happens almost yearly, and though wise-acres are generally to be found who can tell you the precise cause in less time than it takes to wink your eye, the real reason, we think, is not so easy of location. For instance, who would have dreamed that an entry of 119 birds would be received in the three novice British classes, when, under the same judge last year, only 49 put in an appearance! The "slump" in the Norwich Plainheads was generally regretted, but the majority of the "old hands" we conversed with put this down as being merely accidental, one of those reverse turns of fortune's wheel which few sections succeed in entirely escaping. Let us hope that in 1914 the wheel will be jammed over the other way—and jammed right hard. We do not like to see the "chubby ones" under water, so to speak, to keep up the nautical simile.

No Sensational Birds.

There was no bird on view that could be termed "sensational." The nearest approach to this, perhaps, was the black and white Canary exhibited by Mr. Kiesel. This, however, was something of a disappointment, the black areas of the plumage being very small and somewhat unconvincing. We may say, however, that Mr. Kiesel lost two birds when young, which were a very near approach to what promises to be the next novelty, i.e., the black Canary. May-be, we shall have the pleasure of seeing it on view in 1914. Some wonderful Crests attracted a deal of attention, and everyone seemed delighted that these noble and valuable examples of the skill of the modern Canary breeder should once again be present at the Great Glass House in such considerable number.

A Frolic with the Suffragettes.

Although we were vouchsafed nothing sensational in the birdy line, the show was not allowed to pass without at least two incidents of a startling nature. One is the attempt to "get at" a judge (dealt with on the "Twitterings" page), and the other concerned those formidable persons known as Suffragettes. It will be remembered that on the Saturday they amused themselves by damaging the orchid houses in Kew Gardens. Well—would you believe it?—it was seriously thought that they intended to visit the Palace Show and let as many birds as possible out of their cages! The police authorities in London warned the Crystal Palace Company, and, further, sent down detectives, while the Palace Company's servants also rallied to the defence. Every visitor—though he or she little suspected it—was closely scrutinised by a Scotland Yard official on entering the show enclosure. Luckily, nothing transpired. Maybe, luckily, too, for the Suffragettes, as the word had been passed quietly round to numbers of the fanciers present, and the misguided females would have had a decidedly unpleasant time had they tried any of their pranks upon the birds. We even heard regrets expressed at their absence!

The Magnet that Draws.

The attendance was well above the average. There was a good sprinkling of visitors on the Friday, Monday and Tuesday, and on Saturday the show enclosure presented a very animated and attractive appearance, the aisles being packed with sightseers. Excursions were taken advantage of by many hundreds of provincial fanciers and most of the "heads" from North, South, East and West were to be seen enjoying the display and, above all, seizing the opportunity to exchange greetings and experiences with old and new friends from far and near. It is this social aspect of the function, indeed, that is perhaps quite the most enjoyable feature of the National show. Next week we shall publish the list of signatures in our "Visitors' Book," which will be found lengthier than ever, and to include the names of a great number of our leading exhibitors and breeders. As a natural consequence of the fine attendance, Mr. Ramsden had the satisfaction of seeing the sales reach a very satisfactory total—over £30 more than last year!

The weather was delightfully mild and open throughout, and this contributed largely to putting everyone, including the birds, on good terms with themselves. The Palace Co. had made the best possible arrangements for the exclusion of draughts, and the temperature of the enclosure was at all times suitable and agreeable. It was quite a treat to be able to walk about unencumbered by a topcoat.

The "Boss of the Show."

The presiding genius—in other words, the "boss of the show"—Mr. J. W. Ramsden, proved to be in fine form. We have in the past said all that there is to be said concerning the superlatively excellent manner in which he conducts the affairs of the show, about his wonderful mastery of and attention to details, and about the courteous and genial fashion in which he deals with those of us mortals who are brought into contact with him in his official capacity. We can only add that the 1913 show was quite one of the best of the whole long series we can call to mind. And we will let it go at that. The Fancy will appreciate to the full what such a statement means. May it be long years before J. W. R. deserts bird-shows and birdy-men. He once again enjoyed the valued and able assistance of Mrs. Ramsden, and Mr. Ramsden, junr—George of that ilk—the latter a true "chip of the old block" (except that he says little) in coping with the details of a bird-show.

There is no better committee in the kingdom than that possessed by the L. and P.O.S., everyone an enthusiast in the matter of birds, and the way in which they stewarded the judges and assisted in the unpacking and re-packing of the birds redounds greatly to their credit. The hall was absolutely cleared by 10 p.m. on the closing night. The officials this year comprise Madame Feist Madewell, and Messrs. W. Laskey, J. Oldaker, G. Mortlock, F. S. Matthes, G. A. Harris, C. R. Bullen, A. Cooper, G. H. Couzens, J. Hedder, R. J. Pretty, J. W. Ramsden, W. Salter, T. Ward, G. Graham, W. Kiesel, R. Bamber, F. J. Day, J. E. Graves, F. Lathlett, G. Thurling, and C. W. Law, the latter the able hon. sec. of the Society. In Mr. Geo. Crabb they have one of the most popular presidents in the Fancy, a gentleman of wide experience and large views, while his genial disposition makes him a favourite and friend of everyone. Other fanciers to render most useful help were Messrs. Greenway, R. J. Pretty, R. A. Newley, J. B. Kerr, and H. W. Warner.

A Triumph for the Feeders.

The arrangements for the feeding of the birds were once again par excellence. This is a feature upon which Mr. Ramsden prides himself. In Messrs. Small and Crutchfield he has two able lieutenants, with an experience of half-a-century behind them, and needless to say they take very great interest in their charges, and leave nothing undone that could contribute to their welfare. The seeds were supplied by Messrs. Carter and Co., of High Holborn, and this firm always do things well, while Messrs. Trower and Co., of Caledonian Road, N., provided the insectivorous birds with insectile food and yolk of egg, and the grand condition of the birds spoke volumes for the excellence of their wares. Not an ailing bird—what a triumph!

Old Friends and How They Got On.

The judges (many of them quite "old friends" now) were: Messrs. H. W. Battye (Yorks), H. T. Camps (For.), J. Dewar (Belg. and Mules), H. J. Fulljames (Brit.), G. Gardner (Canaries), T. Heath (Nor. and Crests), J. Hodder (Novice Nor.), C. A. House (Green Canaries and Lizards), W. Mundell (Yorks), H. Norman (Novice Bords., Hyb. and Brit.), J. Oldroyd (Rollers), J. Robson (Bords., Lancs. and Scots), A. Silverd (Brit.), W. Swaysland (For.), J. Wones (Cinns.), and G. E. Weston (Brit.). They all got through their tasks in good time, being very ably assisted by a band of excellent stewards, and we can conscientiously say that we heard very little grumbling at their decisions, considering the magnitude of the show and the fact that they were faced with classes often containing several "champions" in each.

The very handsome cases of stuffed birds—notable champions and rare exhibits of former days—which had their origin in a happy idea of Mr. G. Crabb's, were inspected with the keenest interest. Another exhibit to attract considerable attention was the excellent drying cage placed on view by Mr. A. Wilson, of Glasgow, the general opinion being that it was a decidedly "good thing," and likely to be a great help to exhibitors.

At the Sales Office.

Once more the sales were wonderfully good, making the magnificent total of £255, about £33 more than last year. To dissect them is somewhat interesting. The highest price was given for Messrs. Ogden Bros.' cinnamon-marked cock—a real gem, which fetched £6 10s. Another grand Yorkshire exhibited by Mr. J. Grange, first in the unflighted buff class, was claimed at £5 by a well-known Yorkshire judge, who is reputed to "know one when he sees it." Two charming hens found new homes at £2 10s. and 3 guineas. In the Green classes, there were only two birds secured—a cock at £3 10s. and Mr. Naylor's buff hen at three guineas. In the Norwich section, the highest price given was £5 for Mr. J. Peter's yellow cock, a very fine specimen. A hen belonging to the same owner changed hands at £3, and another one at £2, all grand birds and admitted by everybody to be "sound goods," and well worth the money. Another good hen purchased was Mr. Sheldon's, which changed hands at three guineas. The only sale of note in the Crested section was a C.B. cock, exhibited by Mrs. T. Taylor, which went for £5. In the British bird classes, Mr. Prior lost his vhc Goldfinch and his first prize Siskin, the former at £3 and the latter at £2. Mr. Pickles sold his two-guinea Redpoll, standing second in its class, and winner at Scottish National, and Mr. Raine lost his charming Cirl Bunting, but the best sales in this section was Mr. Sykes' winning Twite, which changed hands at £4. The demand for foreign birds was hardly up to the average, a Grey Parrot at £5 and a Sugarbird at £3 15s. being the only ones of any note, although at the last moment a lady with tears in her eyes induced Mr. Ramsden as a special favour to let her have that lovely Siberian Bullfinch for five pounds, and Mr. R. graciously obliged. At this stage in the proceedings the curtain was lowered. It was noteworthy that there were no sales in the Novice British Bird and Mule classes, excepting a Greenie at 8s. 6d. Of course, there were many birds, single and pairs, that changed hands at prices under £2. We think the sales would have been much higher had exhibitors stated the lowest possible price when sending their birds. Mr. Ramsden showed our representative quite a long list of letters received on the Monday, asking for a reduction in the prices of birds. However willing Mr. R. may be, there is a limit, and when a man is up to his eyes in work it is impossible to do more. Had many of these prices been in the catalogue on the Friday and Saturday, more birds would have changed owners.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEADS.

Taken collectively, we did not think the champion Norwich Plainhead Section up to many previous years either as regards quantity or quality, several of the most notable exhibitors not being represented. This year only one first prize went to a Northern exhibitor. The exhibits of Mr. E. Baker and Messrs. Gill and Pethick did well, and deservedly so, the clear buff cock of the former capturing the championship diploma for best Norwich, the L. and P.O.S. challenge cup, and the Victorian Society special. We thought this was, in racing parlance, quite "an armchair ride," and it could not be otherwise than a popular win. The bird is a grand all round exhibit, one of the evenly balanced sort, and the sort to gladden the heart and eye of any Norwich enthusiast. We offer our hearty congratulations to its deservedly popular owner, one of the pillars of the Norwich Fancy, to know whom is a real pleasure. The unflighted yellow of Messrs. Gill and Pethick took special for second best. This again is a good one, and quite one of the western sort. Mr. Hodder put down a clinking yellow hen, which got to the top of the class quite comfortably. This was a good class for quality, and although it was hardly to be expected, beat the buffs in numbers. The specials for best vhc and best hc went to Messrs. Chedgey and Turner respectively, and Mr. Ramsden's special for best fed, Mr. A. Hirst.

Novice Norwich classes were well filled, and many good birds were staged, most of the winners being of sterling merit. Type was well maintained, and there was an absence of the big, coarse feathered and long-sided birds we used to see in these classes a few years ago. The winning yellow cock was undoubtedly one of the best yellow Norwich in the show, and had it been in the champion section must have stood near to the top of its class. The winning buff cock is also a real good one, and quite one of the best in the show. The winning hens were capital specimens, well up in size, and good in type and feather. Altogether the novices are to be congratulated on the good display they undoubtedly made. Mr. Hodder handled these classes in a painstaking manner, and did well. Special for best in this section went to Mr. Booth's yellow cock, best vhc to Messrs. Handley and Sons' unflighted, best hc to Mr. J. Fox's unflighted, and that for best c to Mr. C. Brooker with his yellow cock.

The Norwich Greens, although showing only a small increase in numbers, exhibited a decided advance in quality. They were quite the best lot we have seen at Sydenham. Yellows were good, but Buffs quite outdistanced them, all the specials going to exhibits in the Buff class. The Championship Diploma was secured by a magnificent bird from the stud of Messrs. Metcalfe and Sons. In type, colour, and feather it led the way in grand style. In a word it was a Green, and a Norwich Green. Need more be said? Special for best 2nd bird was won by Mr. T. H. Neale with a grand bodied bird of most excellent colour, but pied in tail; still even with this handicap he was very close on the heels of the champion. That good fancier, Mr. J. Walker, secured special for best third with another beautiful Green, a rare bodied bird, but losing a trifle in head. Mr. Dyer's vhc, special winner was a topping exhibit, so far as colour and type are concerned, but it lacked the finish of the leaders. Buffs were wonderful. Hens were an improvement on last year, but are yet far from what they should be. Most of them failed, as they did twelve months since in general finish and quality of feather. Some of this might have been altered with a little attention. Greens, like all other breeds, are improved by preparation. Mr. Godfrey staged a nice pair of yellows, and they held their own well. Type and tightness of feather placed Mr. Dyer's buff at the top. Had the second, Ball, been tight in feather, she, doubtless, would have stood at the top.

THE CRESTS & CRESTBREDS.

It is some years now since the Crest section at the Crystal Palace reached such a high degree of excellence, either in numbers or quality. An average of over eleven per class in the eight guaranteed classes of Crested Canary Club's classification is a result which must give the greatest pleasure to all who wish to see this grand variety make the progress it should in popular estimation. It was somewhat of a daring experiment to put on a class for Cinnamon Crests and Crest-breds, and the fact that it only received two entries proves that it was hardly warranted. When one considers how exceedingly beautiful are the Cinnamon Crests it seems strange that more fanciers do not turn their attention to them. The championship for crests, and the Victorian Canary Society's special for best Crest or C.B. was won by Messrs. Greenwood and Burson's handsome variegated buff hen. A lovely exhibit this, full of quality and yet carrying a tremendous wealth of feather, both of crest and body. When one thinks of the many good birds which are now being turned out from Swindon, Exeter, and Barnstaple, one cannot but think of those olden days when the West was quite on top. Cheltenham, Gloucester, Plymouth, Exeter, and Torquay have all played a big part in the fortunes of the Crest Fancy, and the work which is now being done in the West revives many old memories. Mr. Smith scored his second notch in the L.P.O.S. challenge cup for Crests and C.B., by the aid of a beautiful clear-bodied dark crest. Mr. Ley's handsome young yellow was the cynosure of all eyes, and was quite the talk of the show, at least that portion of it interested in the turncrowns. Speaking of this bird reminds us of the wonderful condition in which the whole of the Nottingham team were staged. Their condition alone attracted attention, and the same could be said of the Barnstaple cracks. Mr. Brotherton's old champion scored well, and was looking as fit as a yearling, in spite of his six seasons of hard work. Mr. Colledge staged a young crest which stood well to the front. It is a real charmer—type, quality, and substance all combined. It looks like a bird that should improve considerably, and in congratulating the plucky Derby enthusiast on producing such a specimen we hope it may go on to many and greater victories. Mr. Bale's grizzle in this class was a charming example of the breeder's art, "Away to the West" went the leading positions in the young Crest-breds, and the Barnstaple and Swindon representatives did win too. They are a couple of gems. At the Crested Canary Club meeting held on the second day of the show one of the motions on the agenda read: "To discuss ways and means of awaking the interest in the variety from its present dormant condition." As we glanced down the benches at the Palace we thought the awakening had come, that Crest fanciers were arousing themselves from their lethargy. The entry and the merit of the exhibits told us this, whilst the fact that average excellence was higher than usual without any startling monstrosity, or exceptional exhibit, led many to take an interest in and admire the section. The entry was a compliment to Mr. Heath, who handled the birds in the most careful and thorough manner, and little fault indeed could be found with his decisions. May the spurt of 1913, the fateful year as the superstitions tell us, be maintained. If it is there will be no more need for pessimistic motions at C.C.C. meetings, but everything will be fair and beautiful, and altogether lovely.

CREST CK., BUFF (14): 1, Bale, cl. body with dark tail, very dense crest, with tremendous length and width of frontal, neat centre, wonderful radiation and droop, full of qual., beautiful body covered with very dense feather of great length and width, grandly finished, and beautifully staged; 2, and L.P.O.S. Challenge Cup, A. J. Smith, very handsome cl. body, great spread of crest, well radiated from a nicely defined centre, splendid droop, excels in length, width, density, and qual. of crest feather, most beautiful body feather, very nicely shown, spoilt by a run at rear of crest; 3, Todd, massive, heavy feathered wing-mkd., capital length and width of body feather, nice spread and shape of crest, radiates well all round, but is not so heavy in crest, and centre is not quite so clearly defined; 4, Ley, splendid qual., cl., very shapely in body, and covered with an abundance of high-class feather, beautifully radiated and drooped, grand shape and carriage of body, good crest formation, but is spoilt by a few refractory feathers in the centre; vhc, Greenwood and Burson, very nicely spread grey, well radiated, carries a lot of feather, fairly well drooped, but was not shown to the best advantage, and thus lacked finish; hc, Woollard, very pretty varieg., but not enough of it; c, Horton, grand radiation and spread, well drooped, but irregular in centre, still we thought it deserved a bit more; absent, 152, Broad. BUFF, HEN (10): 1, Victorian Canary Society sp. and championship, Greenwood and Burson, an immense varieg., tremendously dense in crest, grandly radiated and drooped, superb front, well-finished sides and back, neat in centre, capital body clothed in a very thick suit of long feather of great width, but yet not coarse; 2, Brotherton, wing-mkd. grey, a magnificent-bodied hen, superb shape, stands well over her perch, and is splendidly feathered right through with feather of great substance and qual., her head supports a complete mass of feather of extraordinary length and density, but it is not very regularly put on, a wonderful hen for breeding purposes, but is hardly finished enough to secure the highest show honours; 3, Brundell, varieg., wonderful frontal of great width and density, nice spread and radiation, droops well all round, but is a bit open in centre, body is of nice shape and well clothed with dense feather of good length; 4, Woollard, heavy mkd. bird, wonderfully neat centre, very pretty at front and sides, radiating and drooping well, rather inclined to be coppy-backed, and is also a bit long and straight in body carriage, beautiful qual. of both crest and body feather; vhc, Ley, wing mkd., very densely feathered on a nice shaped body, large well radiated, densely feathered, well drooped crest, but is a bit mixed in the centre, profusely feathered on body: hc, Pickard; c, Evins Bros.; absent, 163, Campbell. CRESTBRED, BUFF (17): 1, and championship, Gilbert, varieg., rather coppy-shaped body, but covered with a wealth of long dense feather of great width, nice width of frontal, very shapely skull, covered with very long dense feather, grandly browed; 2, Ley, grand shape and style, tkd. in neck, far better shape of body, wonderfully profuse in body feather, rare shape of skull, splendid front and rise, well browed, and carries an abundance of high-class feather; 3, Twigg, pied tail green, splendid body shape and carr., good rise of skull, plenty of width and substance, neat beak, nicely browed, and skull, carries a good dense thatch, in very nice form; 4, Evins Bros., varieg., splendid shape and body feather, nice frontal and browing, not so densely feathered on skull; vhc, Mrs. Taylor, heavily mkd., of superb qual., great width and substance of skull, also well domed on top, hardly so heavily feathered; hc, Ley, very nice pied tail green, good shape and feather, not so much substance of skull; c, A. J. Smith; absent, 177, Campbell. BUFF, HEN (11): 1, Bale, varieg., shown in the pink of condition, and this no doubt pulled her through, the manner in which she was toileted would have done credit to a Yorkshireman, but in crestbred properties she was hardly so good as some behind, she possesses plenty of feather of very high-class quality, her head is of nice shape and width, and she is well browed, but in shape of skull she does not excel, and is a trifle long in body; 2, Bewick, a green, one of the finest-shaped crestbreds we have ever seen, she carried our thoughts back to the famous "Devastation," so successfully shown by the late Mr. Pine in the years of long ago, in formation of skull and body this hen is almost perfection, she has abundance of feather both on head and body, and she carries herself like the beauty she is, the sole reason she was second was because she was not shown in the lovely condition which pulled the winner first past the post, Mr. Heath certainly had reasons for his action, he loves condition, and he reluctantly had to put this hen second to a hen which he recognised was her inferior on points; 3, Ley, cap, wing, and tail mkd., grand shaped skull, covered with a mass of dense feather of great length and width, splendid body shape and carriage, carries a wealth of body feather, does not carry her wings well, and this goes sadly against her; 4, A. J. Smith, splendid shape and carriage of body, nice width and shape of skull, beautiful qual. of feather, a neat sweet hen; vhc, Groves, very shapely, nice skull, not so heavily feathered; hc, Broad, green with pied tail, a very useful sort, capital skull, and plenty of feather; c, Memmott. YELL. CRESTS (7): 1, 3, Ley, green with pied tail, beautifully centred, with almost perfect radiation and droop, capital length of crest feather and plenty of it, well-filled front, neat back, grand finish all round, lovely silky body feather, very shapely, and well turned out; 3rd, another very high qual. green, pied on vent, and in tail, neatly centred, nice spread, droop and finish of sides, loses in length of frontal and density; 2, Mrs. Taylor, very nicely feathered grey, capital length, width, and density of crest feather, plenty of body feather, good radiation, droop, and spread of crest, not so neat in centre formation, and hardly so well put down as the Nottingham crack; 4, Todd, very nice varieg., good shape and finish of crest, not so long or dense a feather, and rather more coppy shaped in body. CRESTBRED, YELL. (9): 1, Brotherton, grand shaped varieg., stout deep chest, rare back, splendidly domed skull of great width and substance, and covered with a dense thatch of long broad feather, grandly browed, carries an abundance of body feather of great width and length, shown in grand form, notwithstanding the work he has done this season; 2, Colledge, another varieg., with tremendous length and density of body feather, some of which he was casting freely when we saw him, not so short and chubby in body as the winner, but owns a magnificent head of the approved shape, and it is also of good width and substance, is well browed, and has a very nice "turn back"; 3, Pickard, rather more Lancashire shaped in body, but carries an abundance of feather of very high-class character, good shape of skull, very nicely browed, and turns back well; 4, Wright and Son, very shapely cl., showing a lot of qual., but is not so heavily feathered either on head or body, good width and shape of skull, and if it only had a bit more feather would be indeed a beauty; vhc, Ley, grand silky feathered varieg., not quite so massive and stout in skull, but grandly put down, and possesses plenty of feather both on body and skull. BUFF CRESTBRED, 1912 (12): 1, Colledge, very handsome wing and neck mkd., lifts just a trifle in centre, but is not ragged, the centre being clear and well defined, very nicely radiated all round, splendid droop and finish, magnificent front and sides, and grandly finished back, crest is very long and wide in feathering, and closely packed, splendid silky feather, a most handsome young bird, and very grandly shown, a most popular and deserving win; 2, Bale, most charming grizzle, full of qual., neat clearly defined centre from which radiates in the most approved manner, very densely feathered with long wide feather which droops well and evenly, splendid finish of front and sides, grand shaped heavily feathered body, shown in the pink of condition, a lovely bird indeed; 3, Ley, a very handsome even-mkd, a bird which took our eye immensely, the true Nottingham stamp, all qual., beautiful centre, most excellent radiation and droop, well formed front, lovely body feather of true silky character, and yet very close and weighty, a splendid combination of type, qual., and substance; 4, Colledge, another grand-bodied bird, short and compact, with an abundance of body feather of grand length and width, very neat, shapely, well-formed crest, nicely centred and radiated, but not so long in feather as the leaders; vhc, Greenwood and Burson, heavily mkd., nice body, carrying an abundance of feather of good substance and qual., large well-radiated crest, but is not so neat in centre as the others, and loses a bit in general finish, a most useful bird for the breeding cage though; hc, Broad, very neat body and crest, a charming type of bird, but it needs length and width both of body and crest feather, what there is is nice, but there's not enough of it; c, Bewick. BUFF, CRESTBRED, BRED, 1912 (12): 1, Bale, most lovely green, magnificent qual. or featber, whicb is very heavy and profuse on body and skull, the skull is nicely domed, and is of great width and substance, the browing is good, and the "turnback" is such as to satisfy the most exacting of critics, added to all this was the splendid condition in which the bird was staged; 2, Greenwood and Burson, very heavily feathered cap, wing, and tail mkd. hen, and a real good one for a hen too, taking sex into consideration, it is a moot point if she was not the better bird of the two, for a hen she has a most lovely head, it is wide, massive, and well formed, she carries a grand thatch, is most excellently browed, in body shape she is not quite all she ought to be, and would be better if a trifle stouter, but she does carry a wealth of feather; 3, Barker, beautiful bodied green, and his grand figure is clothed in a suit of dense long feather of grand qual., he also is nicely browed, the skull, although carrying a lot of feather, does not possess the width and massiveness of the leaders; 4, vhc, Mills, two grandly feathered varieg., nice shaped, well browed skulls, with plenty of feather of high-class character, given a bit more substance, which may come with age, they should do well; hc, Evins Bros., very handsome saddle-mkd., nice shapely bird, carrying an abundance of long wide feather; c, Groves. CINN. CREST, OR C.B. (2): 1, Mrs. Thynne, wing-mkd., splendid shape of body, which is covered witb a mass of high-class feather, the crest is heavy, shapely, and of capital width in front, but fails somewhat at the sides, it is a very nice bird, and full of qual., in some exhibitors' hands more would be made of its undoubtedly good properties; 2, Todd, self-coloured, neat, but small crest, and smaller n body, nice qual. of feather, but not enough of it.

Mr. Robson's Classes.

In the novice Crests and C.B.'s Mr. Robson had the exhausting task of judging thirteen birds in two classes! Nine Crests and four Crest-breds, in the year of grace 1913, after years of toil by the C.C.C.! Are we down-hearted? Not half! At the number of birds, particularly so! At the number of exhibitors, perhaps not, for there were six different exhibitors to account for the thirteen birds. Still, the Crest is usually considered a poor man's luxury, for it does not come any too frequently within the province of the man with a limited purse. Anyway, despite the apparent dearth of novice Crests and Crest-breds—a dearth possibly more apparent than real—we will adopt the late Harry Clifton's motto, and "hope for bright and better days, but never look behind."

CRESTS (9): 1, Cage Birds plate, Lightbown, rather small body, neat, well formed crest, leafy, nice at centre, comes well over the beak, with good vein, radiation, sides, and back, very uniform; 2, 3, 4, vhc, Miss Onslow, congratulations to this lady upon staging such a nice team, 2nd scarcely the length of crest feather of the winner, and just a wee bit open at centre, marked on wings, good body, 3rd close fitting crest, just a little less perfect in formation, nice droop and vein, 4th wing mkd., good droop, just a little hairy, nice; vhc, spls, hen, not the length or fulness of crest, but neat and well formed; hc, Mayhew, good length of frontal, fails to others in formation; c, Mrs. Gould, clear crest, how few we see nowadays, and yet they are beautiful when good; not so long in frontal, neat,and nice. C.B. (4): 1, Pettit, varieg., nice length of skull feather, not so wide at entrance as some, but good cushion and nice body; 2, Miss Thorburn, lightly varieg., fails lashing, neat head, fairly good length and density of head feather; 3, Mrs. Gould, needs more length of turn back and width of skull, nice body.

THE YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

Although the entry in the Yorkshire section again exhibited a drop, the average came out in a manner which easily placed the birds of the Broad Acred county far ahead of any others. The average per class was fourteen and a half, comparing most favourably with the thirteen and a bit of the Norwich section. Yellows were a very hot lot and fitting indeed was it that out of such a good class should come the winner of the championship, the L.P.O.S. Challenge Cup, and the Victorian Canary Society's special. The fortunate winner was the veteran Yorkshireman from Sandy Lane—Mr. J. Bailey. The bird is indeed a beauty. It is quality from head to tail, whilst for type and carriage it would be difficult to fault it. Added to all its good properties of structure and feather was the magnificent manner in which it was shown. Mr. Clegg headed the buffs with a bird of most excellent finish and grand style. A bird we liked much was Messrs. Ogden Bros. third prize, but it was not quite so level in colour, and this doubtless pegged it back. Mr. Binns stood at the top in both the ticked classes with very representative specimens. Mr. Towers' highly commended yellow was a bird which took our eye immensely. Messrs. Dykes, Whitley, and Ogden each staged birds of great merit, and it may truly be said that if the ticks were few they were good. Both the firsts in the unflighted classes went to Windhill, and there was not much doubt that Messrs Sutcliffe's and Mason's exhibits well deserved the positions they held. These two classes contained a magnificent lot of exhibits, and the task of sorting them out was not at all an easy one. In addition to the winners Messrs. Dykes, Stonelake, Townsend, Helliwell, Kearns, Bennett, and Thomas, all staged birds of most lovely quality and type. Hens made two good classes, the buffs being extra good, amongst the latter so close was the competition that one could have easily picked out half-a-dozen good enough to win, so close was the competition. Wonderful indeed is the progress which has been made amngst the green-marked Yorkshires during the past few years, and whereas not long since they were the weeds of the Fancy, they are now well able to hold their own with the rest of the variety. The birds shown by Messrs. Higgie, Morrison, Brown and Son, Whitley, Hall, Bailey, Dykes, Mason, and Thomas, were most beautiful in breed characteristics, and well fitted to hold their own in any company. Mr. Higgie's yellow which won the championship is a very nice bird, and looked well, but we thought it just a trifle lucky. Cinnamon marks came up well, both in numbers and quality, and there was no denying the right of Mr. Bailey's handsome yellow to the claim of champion, he won that position well, a wonderful bird indeed. Messrs. Ogden Bros. won in the buffs with a Yorkie all over, a gem indeed for type, colour, quality, and carriage, its only marking is a slight grizzle on one cheek. The hens of Messrs. Dykes and Towns were beautiful, especially the buffs of the latter.

One of the most handsome varieties of the Yorkshire family is the Green, and it is indeed remarkable that its popularity does not increase outside of the immediate neighbourhood of Lancashire's great seaport, whilst in Liverpool, and across the river in Birkenhead, and its district, it is continually extending its influence. The birds staged at the Palace on this occasion were quite the elite of the Fancy, and a real "gradely" lot they were; there was also, we are pleased to say, an increase in the number compared with last year. Yellows made a splendid collection of a baker's dozen, and a very typical, grand coloured lot they were on the whole, although many of them showed signs of having seen much hard work during the season. Mr. Morement's representative got home quite as much for its smartness and freshness as for its colour and shape. Buffs, like those in the Norwich section, beat the Yellows for general all-round excellence, whilst in numbers they were half as many again as their brighter hued brethren. That old and highly successful breeder, Mr. T. Rowlands, had the satisfaction of securing the first two places in this magnificent collection, undoubtedly the best of its colour ever staged at Sydenham. In type they were excellent, whilst the colour was just immense, there being very little signs of that detestable bronziness and smokiness which has handicapped the Buffs so much in the past. Hens made two very nice classes, and taking each as a whole, there was not much between them. Several of the exhibits, good in shape and style, had to give way to others which looked smarter and fresher. Looking at the classes it seemed as though not a few Green men are afraid to toilet their hens in the same manner as they do the cocks. It is a paying policy, perhaps, looked at from a breeder's standpoint, but it does not pay from the exhibition point of view, because, no matter how good a bird may be, if it is not well staged, it is handicapped. Mr. Robinson's yellow was in rare form and looked very smart and dainty, and her freshness gave her the pull over more than one. Mr. Mockridge's buff looked in rare form, and handled remarkably well, as did Mr. Robinson's runner-up.

Mr. H. W. Battye's Classes.

YORKS., CL. BUFF (15): 1, Clegg, smart, upstanding bird, lovely finish right through from head to tail, neat head, close, well fitting shoulders, very compactly braced wings, and well piped tail, nicely tapered body, grand legs, plenty of swagger and style, nice level back, in rare form; 2, Mock, beautifully proportioned, neat back and bead, splendid shoulders, grand level back, beautiful carr. of wings and tail, nice even col., full of qual., not quite so long as winner, but very smart, and full of nerve; 3, Ogden Bros., smart, typical bird, with good clean run through, neatly feathered underneath, grand legs and feet, splendidly braced wings and tail, not quite so level in col., full of qual.; 4, Thomas, greater length, strength, and col., very nicely feathered right through, plenty of style and nerve, grand carr. of wings and tail, nicely shown; vhc, Matthews, good style and shape, capital qual., nice even col., but not so clean and smart in feather; hc, Dyson, smart, stylish, well feathered Yorkie, bit pale in col.; c, Salter. TKD. THE BORDER FANCIES.

The "wee gems" were once again well to the front in numbers, especially the yell. and buff cock classes, and even the even mkd. had several representatives of this charming variety. The Cinnamon class also came up well, over twenty birds being staged. Quality all through was well up to the standard of the Palace, particularly in the buff cocks. All through the class there was an evenness of type and quality of feather that made them most difficult to separate. Yellows were also of very high merit, some of the leaders being particularly charming. Practically all the birds in the cards were owned by northern men. Although the variety is certainly increasing in the south the best produced cannot at present hold their own with the birds from the north, or is it that the southerners cannot stage them in quite that perfection of bloom required in such keen competition? The names of the principal winners are mostly well known at the Palace, and include Messrs. Mossie, Munro, Hay Bros., Sampson, Wilson, Beard, etc., whose birds one and all were staged to the hour. The novice section did not quite come up to previous numbers, but the type and quality of the birds were a distinct advance on previous gatherings. The two leaders were lovely specimens owned respectively by Messrs. Claydon and Pepperell, the latter's buff winning special for best in section. The southern men managed to get in in these classes, some of the winners being owned by Messrs. Claydon (Weybridge), Warner (Wood Green), Hobden (Wallington), and Jones and Sons (Penygroes). The Champion Diploma for best Border was won by Mr. W. Mossie with his charming yell. hen, the same bird winning the special presented by the Victorian Canary Society, per Mr. F. White, of Melbourne. Palace medal for best vhc, to Mr. Wilson's yell ck., and best hc, Mr. Halliday's buff ck., best c bird also went to Mr. Wilson for another yell. ck.

With an entry of sixty-two in four classes the Green Borders out-distanced the Greens of the Norwich and Yorks. types in numbers, but not so fully as they did in type. They were a wonderfully even lot, and of a very high average of merit. It was a most strange coincidence that the championship in each of the three green sections should go to a buff. No clearer indication could possibly be given of the wonderful advance of the Greens. Championship Diploma and the Victorian Canary Society's special fell to a magnificent buff shown by Mr. E. C. Little, it had not a lot to spare in beating Mr. Middleton's yellow, Mr. Johnston's yellow hen is a smart stylish lassie indeed; she excelled in colour, as did Mr. Whitelaw's exhibit, which stood at the head of the buff class. As evidence of the keenness of the competition, and also of the increased excellence of the exhibits, it may be said that right through the three sections for greens no one stud secured more than one first prize, whilst the remaining awards were also widely distributed. Greens, of all varieties, are undoubtedly improving at a great rate, and the season 1912-13 will be remembered as the one which excelled all others.

LANCASHIRES AND LIZARDS.

Lancashires with only two classes had seventeen entries, and a good shapely lot they were; most of the exhibits possessed an abundance of good all-round Lancashire properties. It is strange that the Lancashire men do not make an effort to secure better representation of the breed at the great classical fixture of the year. In the Coppy class Mr. F. J. Green put down a grand quartet and had the honour of securing three out of the first four places, but he missed the championship, which went to a very high quality yellow Plainhead, shown by Messrs. Kay and Lee. We thought it just a bit lucky to do so, as we fancied Mr. Fitton's second Plainhead, a massive skulled, heavily feathered bird.

The good old-fashioned breed, Lizards, made a very poor show, only thirteen in the two classes, being half-a-dozen below last year's total. If the entry was poor, the quality certainly was not, for four of the five birds in the Golds had, according to the catalogue, won first prizes at four important shows, and seven out of the eight Silvers had secured a similar honour at five leading provincial shows. It is doubtful if such a record has ever been put up before. Mr. Ollerenshaw's trio of Silvers were the first prize-winners at Newcastle, Bradford, and Manchester, whilst his Gold was also 1st at Cottonopolis. Mr. Barnes' three Golds had first at Rochdale, Sunderland, and Worstdopolis to their credit. Need more be said as to the quality seen in these two classes? It tells its own tale. The championship, and the Victorian Canary Society's special fell to Mr. Ollerenshaw's Silver, whilst Ramsden's Colour Food special was taken by Mr. Barnes' winning Gold.

Mr. Robson's Classes.

PLAINHEAD (10): 1, sp, championship, Kay and Lee, long, shapely bodied yell., lovely silky feather, very neat and compact, nice carr., good width of skull, excellent condition; 2, hc Fitton, very massive yell., wealth of feather on stout heavy body, broad massive skull, with great width of front, and good scowling brows, rare neck and shoulders; 3, c, Green, neck tkd. yell., long stylish, well developed body, on a good pair of legs, plenty of body feather, good scowling expression; c, a lovely yell., plenty of subs. and feather, shows well, good skull and lashing, we liked for a higher place; 4, vhc, Kay and Lee, big, heavy feathered yell., grand head, plenty of body feather, good legs, not so neat in wing carriage; vhc, plenty of length and nice style, well feathered, and stands on a good pair of legs, not so stout in body.

THE ROLLER SECTION.

Judge, Mr. J. Oldroyd.

Once again the Rollers received their share of admiration, and many were the appreciative remarks that were overheard, concerning the beautiful way these birds sang. The ladies in particular were delighted, and asked numerous questions bearing on the training and the general management the birds received at the hands of their owners. One gentleman in particular seemed quite surprised at the masterly way some of the birds sang their song. "Well! well! well!" he exclaimed; "I have never heard such singing before. Have these birds been bred in England?" "Oh, yes," was the reply he received from the patient and courteous official displaying a judge's badge. The room in which the Rollers were staged had been renovated, and looked quite bright and cheerful. There was an increase in the number of entries over last year. In the champion open class were some well-known winners, including that good old bird belonging to Dr. Read. The birds had met together for the last time this show season to do battle for the honour of their owners. The number of entries in the champion young bird class left much to be desired. The novice young birds turned up very well, but some of these appeared to have received no training whatever for the show bench; in consequence, the judging of this class was not completed until Friday morning. Another omission on the part of the owners was that the majority had tied their number labels on to the cage front, instead of glueing them on to the inside of one of the cage doors. The edges of the labels and the ends of the string made a perfect plaything for the birds, and they were quite interested in their new amusement, much to the annoyance of the judge, who was patiently waiting for their song. In our opinion Mr. Oldroyd would have been quite justified in passing some of these birds and marking his judging sheet, "No song." The following are the abbreviations for the names of the different tours:—Hollow roll, HR; hollow bell, HB; Bass, B; schockel, Sch.; deep bubbling water tour, DBWT; flutes, F; water roll, WR; water glucke, WG; bell roll, BR; bell tour, BT; general effect, GE.

Hocking wins bronze medal for 3rd best; J. Tomlinson wins L. and P.O. Society's bronze medal for 4th best Roller.

SCOTCH FANCIES & BELGIANS.

Scots with only two classes had seventeen entries, but if the numbers were poor the quality most certainly was high. The yellow cock of Mr. Steel's which won the championship is a very high shouldered bird with great length of side and tremendous drive, and the winning hen of Mr. Willison's is a topper, she could hold her own both in structure and style with many cocks. Mr. Steel's trio did wonderfully well, and they were a good team.

Three classes were given for the "King of the Fancy," the Belgians, and they were under the patronage of the United Kingdom Belgian Association, yet the entries only totalled fifteen, and of these one failed to put in an appearance. When one remembers the many classes of a score and upwards which we used to see in days that are past, and also the times when Belgians were claimed at the Palace at £20 each and upwards, one can but exclaim "How the mighty are fallen!" Of the fourteen exhibits staged, no less than six came from the stud of Mr. F. Reddihough, and they did not go empty away, winning the premier card in two out of the three classes. The bird which pleased us most of the Baildon team was the winning youngster, a grand exhibit this, and one which should have a most successful career. The championship went to a grand shouldered buff, shown by the Barnstaple enthusiast, Mr. G. S. Baker, and it did win too.

Mr. Robson's Classes.

SCOTS FY. CK. (8): 1, championship, 2, Steel, very heavy shouldered yell., great length of neck, grand head, splendid wings, uses his tail well, nice length of side, takes well hold of the perch, brings his head down in the most approved fashion, and pulls like a champion; 2, also a yell., hardly so high in shoulder, but massive and well filled, rare back, wings, and tail, great length of side, and very quick in action; 3, 4, Thompson Bros., topping yell., grand head and shoulders, good wings and tail, handles well, gets his head down nicely, but has not quite so much length of drive; 4, very massive, well built buff, grand head and shoulders, plenty of nerve, great length of side, is not quite such a quick actioned bird as the yellows, but when played with he gets there and shows himself a true Scottie; vhc, sp, best vhc, Hunter, very long-sided, good topped buff pied, full of nerve, grand wings and tail, not so heavy in body and shoulder; hc, Willison; c, Fleming. HEN (9): 1, vhc, Willison, big slashing buff, very massive top end, grand head and neck, splendid back wings and tail, full of nerve, gets quickly into position, grasps perch firmly and brings her tail well down, a really fine hen, and well deserved her position; 2, Steel, long sided pied yell., grand head and neck, plenty of shoulder, capital wings, uses her tail nicely, and is a quick, nervy, fine actioned bird; 3, Hunter, smart, racy, stylish buff, not one of the biggest, but has the outline, and possesses just enough nerve and swagger to bring out her other good properties, given a bit more size, would be a topper; 4, hc, c, Fleming, foul headed yell., grandly proportioned, very quick in action, grand shape and style, but needs a bit more timber; vhc, Willison, very fine, long-sided yell., grand shoulders, lovely head and neck, gets well hold of her perch, and drives nicely, a hen we liked much.

Mr. J. F. Dewar's Classes.

BELGIANS, YELL. (4): 1, 3, Reddihough, not one of the largest possible, but grand in shape, very fine head and neck, capital shoulders, well-placed wings, tail brought down like a plummet line, plenty of nerve and style; 3rd, rare body properties, but not quite so reachy, stands well, and shows plenty of nerve, capital wings and tail; 2, Horrill, rather more subs., capital head, neck, and shoulders, nice length of side, and good style, but not in the same excellent condition; absent, 809, Rizzi. BUFF (5): 1, championship, Baker, grand head, great length and fineness of neck, stout high shoulders, grand wings and tail, gets well up into position, and pulls grandly when handled; 2, Dart, splendid shape and reach, nice length of side, good wing and tail carr., not quite so fit as the winner; 3, Horrill, clever little fellow, full of nerve and style, grand wings and tail, handles beautifully, just needs a bit more subs.; 4, vhc, sp, best vhc, Reddihough, on the small side, but full of nerve and action, grand head and neck, takes perch well, and stands like a soldier; vhc, a rattling good bird for shape and general properties, takes longer to work into position. BRED 1912 (6): 1, 2, Reddihough, very smart shapely yell., grand head and neck, lovely shoulders and back, grand wing and tail carr., grasps perch very firmly brings head down well, full of nerve; 2nd, pied wing buff, on the small side, but a smart and clever little worker, grand position and nerve, very shapely and full of qual.; 3, vhc, hc, and sp. best hc, Horrill, grand positioned buff, good head and shoulders, nice side, wings, and tail, but does not handle so smartly; 4, Baker, long, quick-actioned yell., needs substance, but is good in stand, and has plenty of nerve.

THE CINNAMON CLASSES.

Judge: Mr. J. Wones.

Cinnamons, taken all in all, were a nice lot for quality, one or two birds, however, stood out in bold relief, notably Mr. Dormer's winning yellow, and Mrs. Deacon's buff. The yellow was the cynosure of all eyes, and friend Wones was quite enraptured with this bird, we understand. We liked Mr. Procter's unflighted yellow very much, with luck it has the making of a really grand bird. Mr. Dormer's winning hen, too, struck us as a rattling good one. She could certainly have been shown closer and brighter in feather, but for all that her points of excellence were indisputably apparent. It cannot be suggested that 34 Cinnamons in four classes is a satisfactory result for a Crystal Palace show. An average of just over eight per class, and that, too, with all the backing of a specialist club, and all its specials in competition! One thing we noticed, there was a greater uniformity of type than we have seen, and this is gratifying, as it conduces to standardise the bird more than ever. Breeders seem also to be curing in great measure an old and bad defect—i.e., light throats. It is a relief to note an almost entire absence of those long bodied, long tailed snipy headed cinnies we used to see when the go-as-you-please fashion was in vogue. Mr. Wones was generally happy in his selections. Of course, everybody would not be satisfied! The novice class only totalled eight birds, seven of which were shown by two exhibitors. Hardly a sign that the Cinnamon is "catching on!" Wherefore the reason?

CINN. YELL. CKS. (5): 1, championship diploma for best Cinn., and sp. presented by the Victorian Canary Society for best yellow Cinn., Dormer, one of the sweetest, soundest Cinnies we have seen for some time, full of col., which was pure in both depths of shade, lustrous and level, no paleness at rump or throat, nicely modelled head, free from horns, short body wings and tail, wins; 2, 3, Mrs. Deacon, former very lustrous, but not quite that deep, rich cinnie shade of leader, and showing just a shade of horning, scarcely such a bold head, but a sweet bird, 3rd loses in boldness of head, is not quite so stout in build, lustrous, a nice Cinny that would want a lot of setting back in less aristocratic company; 4, Bentley, good head and body, has a habit of dropping its tail, not so lustrous or pure in cinny feather; vhc, Oldaker, grand in silkiness and gloss, thinner in body, but very rich colour, very finely burnished head. BUFF (12): 1, sp, presented by Victorian C.S. for best buff cinn., 2, 3, vhc, Mrs. Deacon, a grand team, leader sound, rich col., nicely frosted, full and deep in chest, grand head, well finished, short wings and tail, a nice one, 2nd scarcely so rich in tone of col., nor so well finished, but a sweet bird, 3rd good shape, not quite so pure in colour all over, vhc smaller in body, but nice type, not so rich in col.; 4, Dormer, bonny type, rich, full level colour, hardly free from horns, good head, paler at throat; hc, spl, Palace bronze medal for best hc, Andrews Bros., nice head, good body, not so rich or sound in col., but a bird that did credit to its owner; c, Collins, good shape of body, bold head, not quite free from horns. UNFLIG. (8): 1, Procter, yell., rich, pure and lustrous, sound cinn. tone, rare type, good head, a bird of great promise; 2, c, Mrs. Deacon, yell., beautifully burnished head, very lustrous, hardly so bold in skull or body, or so pure at thighs as winners; c, neat bird; 3, Dormer, rich and bright in col., fails just a trifle at throat, good body, not so well pulled up, seemed a little slack; 4, Hartup, buff, very nice body shape and good head, sound in colour, but hardly the life in the feather one likes to see on a buff cinny, yet a well modelled bird; vhc, medal, best vhc, Bentley, yell., somewhat thin in body, not yet developed in head, rich colour and lustrous, fairly sound all through; hc, Mills, good shape of body, somewhat free in feather, especially at the thighs, might be purer in colour. HEN (8): 1, Dormer, yell., full of rich col., rare body shape, good head, short wings and tail, carried herself a bit slack, but a gem when shown at her best; 2, vhc, Mrs. Deacon, former yell., lovely glossy feather, especially rich on head, just a bit pinched at skull, and a trifle paler along sides to thighs, a nice hen all through though; vhc, buff, good qual. of feather and shape of body, carried herself a bit slack in feather, nice col. and head; 3, 4, Hartup, leader buff, good head, col., and type, 4th yell., sound in col., well burnished head, very silky in feather, a good one that we liked better than 3rd; hc, Andrews Bros. NOV. (8): 1, 2, 4, c, Mrs. Tweddle, nice team, leader very nice bodied yell., rich and lustrous, good head and burnishing, short wings and tail, nice tone of col., a credit; 2nd yell., very like the winner, except as to lustre, 4th buff, thinner in body instead of stouter, trifle horned and not so sound in col.; 3, vhc, hc, Andrews Bros., all buffs, nice tone of feather, good head, very nice; vhc, fails a little in colour and soundness.

WHITE AND A.O.V. CANARIES AND LIMIT CLASSES.

Judge: Mr. G. Gardner.

The white Canaries were this year much enquired after by the visitors outside the Fancy, and Mr. Kiesel was almost indispensable as chaperon to the many anxious to see these pretty birds. The variety is certainly popular, it has decidedly distinctive features, and is attractive. Two distinct types were in competition this year—evidence of an extension of the variety. Mr. C. H. Goodman gave Mr. Kiesel a close run with a neat and pure coloured Border Fancy—indeed, so close that it was practically condition that turned the scale. So much for the white Canaries. But what shall we say of the black and white ones. Surely the oldest person living never saw such times before! And if Mr. Kiesel created a furore when he brought out the white Canary, he has made things hum even more loudly by bringing out the black and white. As with the white Canary, there were "superior sniffings" amongst the wise acres; but one may safely predict that, as in the case of the white Canary at its introduction, so it will be with the black and white—those who came to curse remained to bless. But just a word: The white Canary has a class of its own; it is attracting the general public; there is a "bit in it"; where are all those cast-off white Yorkshires that have been 'bred for years!"

The Limit classes, as usual, contained some real bargains. The quality was very high in many exhibits, and the wonder is their owners were willing to part with them at the figures quoted. Sales were good in this section, most of the winners carried the well known "sold" ticket very early in the show. Norwich were well represented, and it is remarkable that there were as many as 28 crests entered in the £3 Limit. What does this point to? A surplus of crests that fall short of tip-top form, or a dearth of buyers? Yorkshires came up well, and here again business was brisk amongst the winners. On the whole the Limit classes did well.

WHITE CANARIES (10): 1, championship diploma for best White Canary, Kiesel, last year's winner, Yorks. type, shown in beautiful feather, not a soil upon its plumage, absolutely white from end to end, white legs and clean beak; 2, 3, 4, vhc, hc, Goodman; 2nd Border Fancy, just a trifle too stout and large for the Border standard, but very pure in colour all through, and well shown, not quite so lustrous as the winner, which turned the scale, 3rd Yorkshire type, next purest and best in feather, 4th Border type, lacks condition, else nearer to type, vhc Yorks type, bit smaller, and not so pure and nice in feather, looked a little weedy, hc fails condition; c, Mrs. Gould, a very nice one when in form, but shown soiled on head, and neck feather not nice. Dutch Frill, not so massive, but a good one; hc, Dormer, foul tailed yell. cinn., rare quality, bit small; c, Kiesel, black and white Canary, small and trifle slack in feather.

Lawrance, Fox, J. P. Lawrence; c, Wilson, Richardson, Lee. HEN, 20s. THE MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Judge, Mr. J. F. Dewar.

Mules and Hybrids were easily the best collection brought together this season, and in all classes some well-known winners had to be content with the so-called "codding cards." The winner in the clear class, Mr. R. Jamieson's (junr.) Goldie, is truly a grand exhibit; good in size, lovely in shape, and feathered like a Java Sparrow, he can be best described in two words, "a gem." Many thought him a wee bit unlucky not to have won the special over the section. In this class Messrs. Martin and Archer's well-known clear Linnet Mule was absent; we are extremely sorry to hear that this magnificent bird is in a bad way, and that it is very unlikely he will ever grace the show bench again. The unevenly-mkd. class was well led by Messrs. Martin and Archer's grizzle-mkd. Greenie Mule, which was awarded the championship diploma, L. and P.O.S. cup, and Palace medal for best Mule or Hybrid in section. Dk. Goldies numbered 23, and not a bad one among them, condition only separating the winners. Mr. Shellam's Jonque carried off the chief award. He is indeed a real topper, having size and shape, and carrying a wonderful colour and polish. Mr. Parlett's Dk. Greenie (Mr. Somerfield's old champion) was in fine form, and stood away in his class. Messrs. Tams and Son's Dk. Greenie was winner of the spl. best 3rd. The A.O.V. Canary-Hybrid class contained some real stormers. Mr. Shellam's Canary-Bullfinch, "Freddie Welsh," is still unbeatable, but was not looking quite his best when we saw him, which, no doubt, kept him out of the running for special. He is indeed a blaze of colour, and easily carried off Ramsden's spl. for best fed bird in section. Mr. J. Lavery's Can.-Bully was awarded spl. best 4th in section, and Mr. E. J. Lamb's Can. Bully best vhc. They were both in tip top order. The Bully Hybrids also were a hot lot, Mr. E. J. Lamb's Redpoll-Bully, being a real gem. This exhibitor also put down two sweet Goldie-Redpolls and a charming Greenie-Siskin. Messrs. Martin and Archer's well-known Greenfinch Chaffinch, still the only one of its kind on the bench, seems to improve every time we see it, and again carried off premier honours. The awards of that respected Scottish fancier, Mr. J. F. Dewar, met with very, very little criticism, everybody seeming to be well satisfied.

CL., TKD., ETC., HYBRID (8): 1, Jamieson, cl. Goldie, Scotland's champion, wonderful size and shape, feathered like boxwood, a real topper, wins; 2, Shellam, cl. Greenie, lovely exhibit, grand size and shape, lovely qual. and cond., undoubtedly the best of this cross on the bench; 3, sp, Lamb, wing mkd. Goldie, grand col. and qual., beautiful shape, A1 order, hardly the size of leaders; hc, Lamb, tkd. Goldie, very neat, but hardly the size, nice polish; c, Collins, sweet non-fed var. Linnet-Can., in good order. DK. GOLDIE (23): 1, 3, Shellam, Jonque leading, wonderful substance, a blaze of col., the best of quality and cond., a real "top sawyer," latter good buff, fine blaze, lovely meal, nice shape, col. and qual.; 2, Martin and Archer, Jonque, close up, lovely polish, grand size and shape, not quite the col. of leader, looks like L.C.B.A. winner; 4, Gilchrist, another real good one, grand size and shape, very little behind, hardly the polish of leaders; vhc, Crone, very neat, lovely col. and qual., hardly as large as the leaders; vhc, Miss Bousfield, buff, another grand exhibit; hc, Bowler, very nice all round bird; hc, Lamb, really good exhibit, nice col., qual. and size, had damaged flights or probably would have stood higher; c, Grey, Jonque, very neat exhibit, hardly the depth of col. of leaders; c, Jamieson, very shapely and neat. DK. GREENIE (11): 1, Parlett, Jonque, stated to be the winner of 59 firsts, grand exhibit, wonderful substance, a ball of fire, lovely qual., staged to perfection; 2, McQuiston, another Jonque, lovely col. and qual., good size and shape, grand feather, real gem; 3, Craig, Jonque, medium size, splendid col. and qual., put down in lovely order; 4, Jamieson, good shape, col. and qual., a trifle on the small side; vhc, Lavery, nice size and shape, good col., hardly the feather of leaders; hc, Webster, very sweet exhibit, grand size and shape, not the col. of leaders; c, Dunlop, very neat, nice col. and qual., could do with a little more substance. DK. SISKIN, ETC. (18): 1, Master Johnston, real gem, beautifully bright col., grand qual. and cond., nice size and shape, one of the best we have seen; 2, Edmunds and Smith, Redpoll, lovely col. and qual., nice size and shape, put down in faultless condition; 3, Crabb, Siskin, neat exhibit, good size, shape and qual., not the brightness of col. of leader, but a really fine exhibit; 4, Andrews, bouncing Mealy Redpoll-Can., wonderful size, qual. and cond.; vhc, Collins, Twite-Can., grand shape, col. and qual., real bouncer for size, put down in A1 order; vhc, Middleton, large buff Siskin-Can., neat markings, lovely type and qual.; hc, Buckingham, Redpoll-Can., fine exhibit, loses col. to leader; hc, Martin and Archer, very fair Siskin-Can.; c, Miss Bousfield. A.O.V. CAN. HYBRID (8): 1, Shellam, Can.-Bully, "Freddie Welsh," aptly named, a real champion, wonder for col. and qual., marvellous size and shape, an easy win; 2, Mrs. Askham, another Can.-Bull, grand exhibit, lovely type and qual., would look a real champion in the absence of winner; 3, Griffiths, var. Twite-Can., very neat, rare, but not very taking exhibit; 4, sp, Lavery, Can.-Bully, nice col., qual. and type; vhc, sp, Lamb, still another Can.-Bully, lovely type and qual., put down in perfect order, close up; hc, Askham, Can.-Bully, good col. and qual., hardly the substance of leaders; c, Howick, very neat Can.-Bully, not quite the col. of leaders. BRITISH BIRD SECTION.

The British Bird Section was once again very well supported in the matter of entries, and proved of great interest, as there were to be seen representatives of almost evey species one can fairly term "desirable cage birds," and the majority of the recognised "champions" met in competition. Truth to tell, however, we get few outstanding champions nowadays; the average standard of merit is now on so high a plane that few birds stand appreciably ahead of their fellows, a mere matter of condition—even a suspicion of "off colour"—being sufficient in the majority of cases to make all the difference 'twixt success and failure in the prize list. The new method of classification advocated by the N.B.B. and M.C. (i.e., of naming every species entitled to compete in each class) worked fairly well, though a Sandpiper and a hen Little Bunting had to be excluded, albeit entered, owing to this. The absence of a class for hen Bullfinches, however, seemed regrettable and unnecessary. In Mr. Weston's section the majority of the birds were very high-class, comprising the best of their kinds on the show bench to-day. The Goldfinches were, as usual, the cynosure of all eyes, and proved very level in quality, though we have seen better individual performers, so to speak, in the years that are gone. There is no real star shining at the present moment. The Bullfinches were simply grand, and the winner, belonging to Mr. Woods, secured the unanimous vote of the judges for the special for best in the British Section—the first time, if memory serves us correctly, one of this species has secured the honour since the days of the great Job Williams. We did not notice one bird of doubtful nationality in the whole class! In the Linnet class the judge's predilection for birds of the chubby (Norwich) type was very marked. He also did not look with favour on the very heavily streaked ("henny-marked") kind of bird. The four leading Chaffinches were beauties, the winner's forward condition just landing it home. In the Greenfinch class we saw several good birds which, in our view, were simply spoiled by the use of too much colour food, and we believe these were penalised by the judge. The winner was a really magnificent non-fed specimen, which, with Mr. Sykes' lovely Bramblefinch, and Mr. Mays' charming Grasshopper-Warbler, ran the Bullie a close race for the premier special. Mr. Burr's Linnet took special for best vhc in Mr. Weston's classes, Mr. Andrew's Goldfinch that for best hc, and Mr. Inman's Linnet that for best c.

On the whole Mr. Silver's nine classes were well filled, the average being 15 per class, and some birds of high merit were to be found amongst the Hawfinches, Buntings and small insectivorous classes. The winning Hawfinch is a real topper, as also is Mr. P. H. Harris's 3rd prize bird, and quite two sets of winners could have been found, most of them being very forward in condition. The mixed Bunting class contained specimens of six species, including the now common Meadow Bunting, which, by the way, stood cardless, as it rightly should do in a British class. Mr. Prior's natural coloured Siskin stood well away in a strong class of 26. The Chough and Magpie class contained about the usual number of entries, with the Chough as leader, as is the usual custom. Of the Wagtails only two species were represented, six yellows and two greys. The small insectivorous class was, as it usually is, an interesting one, and contained some delightful little birds among the 16 entries. Mr. May's Grasshopper Warbler and Treecreeper well deserved their places, in fact, had the class been double the size it would have been impossible to pass the "Grasshopper," for he is simply perfection of his species. We heard many expressions of approval of the new departure in the catalogue—naming the species that are eligible to compete—for where the line of size was cut at a Skylark or Grey Wagtail it was not always a simple task for the young fancier to decide which class to enter, say, a Wryneck or a Redbacked Shrike. It may he advisable another year to include three or four species not mentioned in this year's classification; for instance, the Blue-throated Warbler, the Meadow Bunting, the Black-headed Bunting and the Little Bunting. When the National B.B. and M.C. drew up its classification of desirable British birds the Meadow Bunting had not been recorded as visiting England, but during the last ten years some five or six have been recorded. Many more than this have been seen on the show bench, and they have been admitted by most judges as entitled to compete. The Blue-throat is a great favourite with Northern exhibitors, and is known in these islands on its autumn passage. The Black-headed Bunting is about equal to the Little Bunting in its recorded appearances (five or six), and it would do no harm to include all the four birds mentioned. With few exceptions Mr. Silver's awards seemed to be well received, but then judges and exhibitors sometimes differ, and of course the judge is master of the situation.

In the nine classes judged by Mr. Fulljames were to be seen many of the champions of this and previous seasons; the mixed classes produced in every case most interesting competition, and the task of deciding which was the best among such a lot of extra good birds was far from being an easy one. The Bramblefinch class, although it comprised only eight entries, contained perhaps the most level lot of Brambles ever gathered together; there was not a bird in the class that was not capable of winning in very high competition. In the winner was seen probably the best Bramble that has ever been shown. This lovely bird was put forward by the judge to compete for the spl. and diploma for best British, and made a very good fight for victory. The owner, Mr. J. Sykes, accomplished a wonderful performance throughout the British section. With four birds—Chaffinch, Twite, Bramble, and Hawfinch he took four firsts, an achievement at the Palace of which any exhibitor should be proud. It is saying nothing to remark that the birds form a team which is a credit to its owner. Four better British birds could not be found throughout the whole breadth of the country. The class for hen British Finch or Bunting was a real "teaser," and made a lovely collection. "Bevy of Beauties" puts the matter in a nut-shell. In the class was a very perfect Little Bunting, a first appearance of the species on the show bench. The bird presented a knotty problem, for the class is headed "British," and only five or six instances, we believe, are recorded of the appearance of the Little Bunting in England; more have been recorded in Scotland, but most of these appeared in one lot, nine on Fair Isle in 1907, while only one appearance in Ireland is recorded. The judge was further faced with the fact that the heading of the previous class read "A.O.S. British Bunting (5 species)," and the Little Bunting is not among these five—(the Corn, Cirl, Reed, Lapland, and Snow)—so the beautiful Little Bunting had to stand without a card. We understand that the bird was caught in the South of England, and if this is so, it should be added to the existing record. The "Woodlark, etc.," class was remarkable as containing quite a number of pairs, a very unusual occurrence in the British classes, but very commendable, at least in the mixed classes. Three pairs of Bearded Tits, and one single cock, were in competition, and a very nice lot they were. It is pretty certain, however, that there was not a British caught specimen amongst them. A lady exhibitor, Miss A. B. Smyth, was responsible for five entries in the class, and captured two of the prizes, 2nd with a perfect pair of Marsh Tits, and 4th with an equally good pair of Blue Tits. Miss Smyth exhibited also a pair of Long-tailed Tits, which were unfortunately not in the best of plumage, a perfect "Jo Ben," and a nice Hedge Sparrow, all well shown, and the Tits had natural branches and sleeping places in their cages, which added both to their comfort and their attractiveness on the bench. An uncommon exhibit appeared in the class for Woodpeckers, etc., a very beautiful and perfectly steady Sandpiper. Apart from the question whether the Sandpiper is a desirable cage bird, the bird was clearly out of competition, for the class heading distinctly mentioned the various eligible species, and the Sandpiper was not included in the list. The Pied, Albino, etc., class as usual formed one of the most interesting classes in the show, and contained some beautiful specimens of abnormally feathered Britishers. The corner in which they were staged was crowded at all times; we were sorry to see our old friend the famous Silver Starling standing down among the cards, but he is showing signs of a strenuous career and honourable old age, and could not have been justly placed higher. We shall expect to see the White Hedge Sparrow do better at some future time; at present this pretty bird is certainly not up to show form.

Mr. G. E. Weston's Classes.

BULLFINCH (34): 1, sp. best Brit., Woods, undoubtedly a gem, medium size, lovely cobby shape, ideal cap, exceptionally brilliant breast colour, very hot and level and of great purity, grand back and wings, not a feather out of place, and polished like plate-glass, does its owner great credit; 2, Thomson, also house-moulted, and another real beauty, size larger than leader, wide, bold, clean-cut cap, good back and bars, fine level breast colour, though not quite so fiery as the winners, staged in perfect order; 3, Gilbert, we heard was 4th last year when in field plumage, has moulted into a grand specimen, correct thick-set build, grand neck and head, wide jet-black cap, perfect wing bars and back colour, splendid hot even breast, beaten the merest shade in boldness of cap at front; 4, Carrier, all round a gem, loses only by a trifle in colour and silkiness of condition, lovely shape and style, grand head and wings; extra 4, Mays, perhaps hardly so bold in build, in polish and beauty of condition, however, excelled by none, good at all points, grand solid colour; 5, Evans, fine bold type, good in colour, very tight in feather, splendid condition; vhc, Griffith, Lawrence, Miss Wishaw, a trio of grand birds, very little behind several of those above them; hc, Holborow, Burr (2); c, Cheney; some nice birds had to be left out, notably Nos. 1,514, 1,545, 1,530, 1,540, and 1,533 (the latter rough at thighs). GOLDFINCH (36): J L. and P.O.S. Members' Cup, Pitchford, a noted winner, finishes the season in grand style, we believe his 21st 1st prize in two seasons, fine bold bird, very taking, cobby shape, stylish to a degree, exceptionally bold in skull, very wide face, grand top blaze, square-cut under, though not particularly expansive, tanning very rich, beautifully buttoned and mooned, perfect condition, except for slight puffiness on cheeks (may be due to soap left in at the wash), which told against it when competing for the special for best British; 2, Pringle, upstanding type of Finch, wonderfuly rich in colour all over, very fine expansive blaze both top and bottom, not quite so clean in cut as the leader's, and carrying a trifle too much black at the "muzzle," these, however, being but minor blemishes in a splendid whole, a grand bird, put down in lovely order; 3, 4, 5, hc (2), Richards, a great performance by this keen Welsh enthusiast, and accomplished by means of a grand team, staged to perfection; 3rd, a beautiful Goldie, rare big blaze, clean cut and pure in colour, rich chestnut tan, grand wings, presses close on second's heels, not quite so large; 4th, very taking bird, grand size, shape, and style, lovely pure-coloured blaze, which, however, is a trifle narrow; 5th, has remarkably square-cut blaze, rich and solid in colour, very stylish carriage, well marked all over, somewhat on the small side; extra 4, Burr, unlucky to be so low down, but lack of polish and tightness kept him back, we took to be last year's 2nd, lovely cobby shape, rare wide clean-cut blaze, we noticed plain canary seed in his cage, and if this is his diet his condition does not say very much for its efficacy; vhc, Prior, gem for colour and polish, blaze shone like a mirror, pressed the extra 4th bird hard, was claimed at £3; vhc, Bowler, another sweet all-round bird, in fine condition; vhc, Metcalfe, nice colour and polish, very good blaze; hc, Andrews; c, Checksfield; No. 1,567, Cheney, really nice Finch, unfortunately had knocked out some feathers, hard luck. LINNET (25): 1, 3, Parlett, the leader we heard was the Scottish National winner, a bird of exceptional size, very shapely, and stylish, grand head and chest, chock full of pencilling, and very sound and rich in colour, splendid flights and tail, put down in grand order; 3rd, even bigger and more cobby than its stable companion, but not quite so clearly marked; 2, Reay, real marvel for markings, grand breast, lovely rich, level colour, gem for condition, shining like satin, very thick-set and shapely body, good head, plenty of white in wings and tail, beaten only in size; 4, Tams and Son, fine bold head and cobby body, thick-set and clean cut, rich nutty colour, sound all over, splendidly pencilled at flanks, trifle weak at centre, carries a grand polish; 5, Richards, also a beauty for size and shape, full of work all over, and nicely polished, trifle dark in ground colour; vhc, sp, and hc, Burr, leader shade small, grand level nutty colour, well marked, gem for condition, not a feather out of place; vhc, Marley, noted winner, gone a trifle dark in colour, grand shape and style; hc, Douglas and Glaister, great size, splendid shape, trifle grey in colour; hc, Francis, fine type, too streaky in pencilling; c (2), Inman, both fine birds, one gone a little in neck feather, the other a bouncing big long-sided bird, fine col. and markings, weak in skull; c, Heal, very promising; some real good ones unplaced for various reasons; No. 1,588, McQuiston, refuses to face cage front, hard lines; 1,605, flights frayed; 1,599, rough at shoulder; 1,593, lovely colour and shape, but gone at neck, hard lines; 1,596, good old bird, wants legs scaling. CHAFFINCH (20): 1, Sykes, wonderfully rich in colour and carrying a lovely sheen, grand cap and bars, splendid whites and wing markings, good size, perfect style, and very shapely indeed, we liked much, put down in rare order; 2, Marley, trifle larger and bolder in build, bonny bird for colour and markings, loses a little in carriage and polish; 3, Nicholson, beats 2nd in polish, splendid bird for shape and style, lovely tone of body colour, in grand trim, fails in cap and bar, otherwise a beauty; 4, Prior, shade thinner at neck, perhaps, otherwise close up, excels in beauty of condition, wax-like in plumage and steady as a top, grand colour and markings, clinking good bird; vhc, Jeffreys, grand size, colour, and markings, shade soft when judged; No. 1,622, same owner, another very big and good bird, had small bare place over right eye; vhc, Stuart and Dalling, extra big and shapely, good colour and markings, looked a trifle coarse (not sleek) in head feather; hc, c, Francis, both real nice ones, former presses hard for higher place, trifle dull in appearance; hc, Barnett; c, Burrows. GREENFINCH (24): 1, vhc, Pickles, leader gem of a non-fed buff, ideal shape, big, very thick-set body, fine flights and tail, grand bold neck and head, splendid carriage, in wonderful condition, not a feather misplaced; the vhc we believe to be the Scottish National winning non-fed, beaten on head and in neck feather, and not looking so plump and fit as we have seen him, yet a bird of grand shape, quality, and colour; 2, Stuart and Dalling, a noted winner, lovely quality, splendid bold shape, grand head and neck, fed a nice tone of colour, not overdone, plumage shining like silk; 3, Lawrence, another gem, nicely fed, wonderful chest and head, equal to winner in type, excels in quality, unfortunately had some flight feathers not quite fully grown or would probably have gone up one notch; 4, Metcalfe, very fine stamp of bird, magnificent polish and quality, grand wing flights, splendid size and shape, but fed far too hot, we have little liking for "red" Greenfinches; vhc, Messer, another very taking non-fed, but gone in neck feather a trifle, beautiful shape, style, and quality; vhc, P. Walsh, the Sheffield, Nottingham, etc., winner, real gem for shape, tone of colour, and polish, but also a little faulty in neck feather, a pity; hc, Lavery, Marley, two very good ones, losing only a little in size; c, Godfrey, Davidson; No. 1,628 had on a marking ring, which is not wise, and only attracts comment about "distinguishing marks"; No. 1,628, remarkably hot fed, and excels in quality, but all the feathers lifting at back of skull, as though with soap left in.

Mr. Silver's Classes.

LESSER REDPOLL (25). A strong class, and some grand specimens amongst them, many good ones perforce out of the cards: 1, Davidson, pretty little Redpoll, shows cap, nice bib and pinkish flush on breast, good flank markings, and in first-class condition; 2, Pickles, we liked much, paler than 1st, full of bloom and very shapely, good pencillings and cap; 3, Bruce, very steady, but fails in markings to leaders, nicely polished plumage and good carriage; 4, McQuiston, good size, well pencilled, capital colour, well shaped head; 5, Nicholas, capital chested bird, nice wings and cap, we liked much; vhc, Mrs. Hudd, good shapely bird, in splendid condition, as large a bib as any of the winners, well shown; hc, Reay, rich col. and a neat little chap all round; c, Webster, very neat, nice size and colour, perfect in feather. SISKIN (26). A strong class, some overdone with the pepper, and very few with the greatly-desired bib: 1, Prior, nat. col., very fine specimen, rich yellow and clear wing bars, nicely pencilled on flanks, good cap, large bib, capital carriage, shown in Mr. P's usual style; 2, McQuiston, col. fed, nice size, well mkd. on thighs, small bib, not so bright in colour as some in the class; 3, Watson, good cap, no bib, very shapely, splendid carriage, fine clear wing bars; 4, Mortlock, good size and shape, not much of a bib, nicely laced cap, well pencilled on flanks; 5, Burr, c.f., nice wing bars, smaller than leaders, well laced cap, stands well; vhc, Nicholson, hot fed, very taking exhibit, well shown; hc, Heal, hen, nicely pencilled, on the small side; c, Irvine, another good coloured bird, in fine fettle. HAWFINCH (17). A capital collection, mostly in spring plumage, but some rather spoilt by an overdose of red feed: 1, 4, Sykes, two very fine specimens, about as near perfection as one could wish, winner rich coloured head, good collar, correct tint of breast col., large clean cut bib, in the pink of condition; 4th, very little behind, shade narrower skull, and not quite such a neat shaped bib, quite equal in condition; 2, Welch, another grand bird, but fails to 1st in head and colour, a lighter built bird altogether, colours well defined, perhaps a trifle lucky to be 2nd; 3, Harris, rare size, grand head, very slight chip over beak or might well have been higher up, nice wings and collar, a bonny specimen, and very tame; ex 4, Parlett, blue bill and very hot colour, rare big bird, but not over shapely compared with others; vhc, Burr, a nice specimen, good bib and chest, on the small side; hc, Marley, undoubtedly spoilt by too much colour feed, the collar is brown instead of grey, rather on the small side. A.O.S. BRITISH BUNTING. A very interesting collection, including a Meadow Bunting, having to take a back seat as not being among the five species for which the class was given. The Snow Buntings were not as white as those we used to see from Yarmouth way: 1, Raine, capital Cirl, beautiful head markings, fine size and good carriage, the black and yellow head markings especially good, well shown; 2, Bruce, large Corn Bunting, rich col., and beautifully marked, the markings being regular in formation, capital exhibit; 3, Miss Bousfield, Snow Bunting, rather lucky some thought, too dark in plumage for a "topper," and might be steadier; 4, Francis, Lapland, not in full col., and on the small side, very unsteady when we saw it; vhc, c, Frostick, former Reed, capital head and throat, clear collar and well marked on back and flanks; latter, a grand Corn, very steady and rich col., not the size of 2nd, but in high condition, well staged; hc, Clark, Corn, good size, and well marked; 1772, Pearce, Cirl, rich yell. markings; 1778, Mays, much whiter plumaged Snow Bunting than 3rd, and seemed steadier, rather hard lines. SONG THRUSH or BLACKBIRD (17). A good class and some good birds out of the cards: 1, 3, Marley, both Blackies, 1st, well-known winner, jet black lustrous plumage, capital crocus bill and eye cere, very shapely and steady as could be wished; 3rd, not quite such good carriage, but not much to choose; 2, Bruce, large well spotted Thrush, fine bold-chested bird, we should say a hen, stands well, very tame, and lovely condition, all that could be desired; 4, Lott, another good Thrush, plenty of spots, but not so distinct as 2nd, very tame and in grand condition; vhc, Addison, Lomer, Blackbird and Thrush respectively, latter well spotted, but not distinct enough, and the Blackie struck us as a bit too slim for such company; hc, Hawkes, Blackie; c, Ford, a very promising youngster, will make up with a moult. MAGPIE, JACKDAW, ETC. (8): 3 Choughs, 4 Mags and 1 Jay; the Magpies seemed to hold quite a levy; 1, 2, Williams, Chough in fine condition, good red legs and bill, and a real good Magpie, perfect head, well polished, plenty of metallic sheen on flights and tail, perfect feather, clean cut bird, well shown; 3, McQuiston, another Chough, hardly as large as 1st, lustrous plumage and good red legs, rather better shape; 4, Bowler, Jay, nice wings, but too pale in plumage and on the small side; vhc, Kerr and Sons, Magpie in perfect feather, but on the small side; hc, P. Walsh, Chough, pale legs, looks like a young hen. SKYLARK (8). A very imposing array of brass-banded cages 1, Potts, a capital upstanding bold chested bird, good length, deep pencillings, rich colour and well staged; 2, Baseley, splendid specimen, must have pressed winner hard, very tame and in lovely condition, rich warm colour; 3, vhc, Lott, both very good birds, former very sprightly, good markings carried well down chest; latter hardly so stoutly built, but a good upstanding Skylark; 4, McVay, medium size, nice col., good chest and carr.; hc, P. Walsh, nice size and col., but pencillings not very distinct, very tame, and was singing beautifully whilst we were taking our notes, well shown; c, Smith and Thompson. WAGTAILS (8), only two of the five species being on view: 1, Collins, Yellow Wag., good colour and nice size, but struck us as rather unsteady, and we thought it lucky to get above 2, Rose, another Yellow, perfect feather, rather smoky on breast, but very tame and beautifully shown, must have been a tight thing with 1st; 3, Lund, entered as a cock, if it is a cock it is in immature plumage, and what were the "Greys" doing? can't follow the judge here; 4, Bent, again a Yellow (catalogued as a Grey), good colour, trifle rough in plumage, but might well have gone up a notch; vhc, Arnott, very good Grey, good size, moulting into spring plumage, tail feathers imperfect, but very clear white throat and eye marks; hc, Tout, young Yellow, not in colour, good feather; c, J. Bousfield, Grey, in perfect feather. FLYCATCHER ETC. (16). A very interesting class, containing a mixture of resident and migratory species, the Dartford Warbler, although entered, was not on view, having, we understand, gone into moult: 1, 2, Mays, 1st, a charming Grasshopper Warbler, in lovely order, a real gem of the first water, and shown for all it is worth; 2nd, pretty Treecreeper, looking very cosy in his baize lined cage, snow white throat and underparts, and beautifully marked on back, perfect feather, and quite at home; 3, Jeffrey, Wryneck, well laced and rich coloured throat, nice size and in splendid order; 4, Hattersley, sweet Lesser Whitethroat, undoubtedly the best of the 5 specimens present, tight as wax and very sprightly in his scenic cage, lovely silky plumage; vhc, Tout, Wheatear, nice white head marks, perfect plumage and claws, good size, not so large as some; hc, Hose, capital Redstart, perfect plumage and very steady; c, Saywell, very tame Greater Whitethroat, well shown. This class containd a topping Black Redstart, Fletcher, which seemed to be all that one could wish in size and colour, and many were surprised to see it cardless.

Mr. Fulljames's Classes.

MEALY REDPOLL OR TWITE (25): A grand lot, headed by one of the best Twites, Sykes, we ever remember seeing, the body col. is something wonderful, and the breast markings perfection, carries wings to a nicety, and as steady as any champion Linnet; 2, Campbell, equally perfect Mealy, extraordinary quality of plumage, beautifully steady, shows himself well, a very good 2nd indeed, very easily the best Mealy in a collection of extra good ones; 3, Crone, lovely Twite, not so very far behind the leader, perfect as that is, his breast and flank markings are not quite so well displayed, and his body colour is not quite so deep, but to say more would be entirely superfluous, the bird was only just beaten by a slightly better one of his own species, and by an absolutely perfect Mealy; 4, Metcalfe, Giant Mealy, worthy of the highest honours, but here had to stand down to one which was just a trifle better. In comparison with the 2nd he loses in texture and plumage, and in definition of markings, but it is only in comparison with perfection that any criticism could be made, a good one indeed; 5, vhc, Webster, grand Twite, and a beautiful Mealy Redpoll. The Twite loses in size to those above him, but in quality he yields nothing to any in the class, the Redpoll is the slimmest in shape of its species that we remember seeing, too slim perhaps for a Mealy, but still a beautiful bird. vhc, Pickles, extra good Twite, only unfortunate in meeting other extraordinary ones; vhc, Miss Bousfield, another good Twite, beautifully steady, loses only in definition of markings; hc, c, Heal, two lovely Twites, unlucky to be in such company; hc, Francis, very nice Lesser Redpoll. BRAMBLE (8): Eight of the best Brambles that could be gathered together, and amongst them, 1, Sykes, a bird which only the word perfection could describe; to attempt to detail the merits of the bird would be to use up all the superlative adjectives in the commendatory list; 2, Henderson, a lovely bird, but clearly beaten by a real champion, fine depth of breast col., carried well down, perfect in back markings and steady as a rock, might be a wee bit better in flank markings, but it is perhaps invidious to find a fault with so beautiful a specimen; 3, Marley, very nice Bramble, but lacks the subs. of those above it, and is not so good in flank markings, extra good polish, and no fault whatever could be found with the bird as a high-class exhibition specimen; 4, vhc, Hull, two more good ones, not so rich in breast col. as the others, and the chestnut does not extend so far down, both extra fine polish, and well shown; hc, Pringle; c, Nicholson. YELLOWHAMMER (20): A class that took a bit of sorting, but the winner, Marley, was clearly the best; nothing could be better than the cheek markings of this bird, the V on the head is sharply defined, the back markings are extra special, and the breast markings ditto, we have seen bigger but rarely better; 2, Lloyd James, a welcome return of an old exhibitor, and a worthy representative, further advanced in clearness of the head and neck yellow, and beautifully marked on the back, an extraordinarily good bird, only beaten by one that was just a bit better; 3, Livingstone, beautifully even body col., extra good back markings, cheek and head marks all that could be desired, steady to perfection, fine size, a good one all round; 4, Pitchford, beautiful 'Hammer, fine cheek markings, crown still a little mottled, and we could see nothing else that put him behind those above him, body col. and breast and back markings all that could be wished; vhc, Hawkes, nicely marked and beautifully steady, not quite the substance of those above him; vhc, Johnson, another good one, not yet clear enough in crown, and a shade small compared with the winners; hc, Evans; hc, White, both good enough to win in ordinary competition; c, Tabor; c, Gibb. Several of the birds in this class were colour-fed out of all resemblance to the natural colour of the Yellowhammer, and the judge appears to have had regard to this, for one or two of the unnoticed birds were good enough to have gone up if they had not been over colour-fed. HEN FINCH OR BUNTING (24): An extraordinarily good class; 1, 3, Francis, leader lovely Hawfinch, extra rich in body col., lovely polish, bib expansive, and clearly cut, finely shaped head, very steady, wins well; 3rd, very massive Corn Bunting, excelling in markings and polish of feather, steady beyond anything that would be expected in this restless species; 2, Jamieson, jun., the most perfect British Bullie hen it has ever been our lot to see, a lady all over, the polish of her plumage was a treat to observe, and in all the lines of her shape she displayed the utmost elegance, it must have been a very near thing that she was not placed before the Hawfinch; 4, Mays, the sweetest possible hen Bramble, a wee bit tiny, as becomes a lady, but a multum in parvo, excellence in a small package, nothing could be better; 5, Evans, a picture of a hen Linnet, markings disposed as though painted on, of the Yorkshire type, but all the more beautiful in consequence; vhc, Furley, very typical British Bullie, exceedingly rich in body col., extra fine polish of plumage; vhc, Bignall, beautiful Yellowhammer, a wee bit unsteady, or might have gone up, even in this strong class; hc, Davidson, exceptionally good Greenfinch; hc, Jeffreys, prettily marked Siskin; c, Burr, nice Hawfinch; c, Lloyd James, prettily mkd. Yellowhammer. STARLING (5): 1, Dell, one of the smaller spangled kind, marvellous lustre, the whole of the breast and under body packed with spangles, not one of which touches another, a marvel of a bird; 2, Lean and Son, an almost equally good example of the larger spotted variety, but, as usual in this kind, does not carry the high polish of the other sort, and the spangles touch in places; 3, Oliver, nice bird, but some degrees behind the others in spangling, extra good polish and shows well; 4, Alton, nice polish and profusely spangled, perhaps too profusely in places, well known winner, but we think justly beaten here; vhc, A. and O. Wellings, evidently extra good in spangling and polish, but too unsteady for close examination. NIGHTINGALE OR BLACKCAP (6): 1, Lean and Son, a model, clean as a smelt, steady as a rock, extraordinary depth of chestnut on back, one of the best ever benched; 2, Miss Bousfield, Blackcap, perfect in every detail, feathered like wax, no need to describe it, ideal is the only word; 3, Welch, beautiful 'Gale, but shades lighter in colour than the winner, wonderfully steady, shows himself for all he is worth, and that is saying a great deal; 4, Mortlock, extra good Blackcap, only unlucky in meeting a slightly better one, very nice all round; vhc, J. and R. Lewis, nice Blackcap, tastefully shown in a cage fitted with natural perches and foliage; hc, Bent, nice Nightingale, well shown. WOODLARK, ETC. (15): 1, Fletcher, one of the best marked Tree Pipits we have seen, the breast markings are a picture, a lovely specimen indeed, a model of grace and beauty; 2, 4, Miss Smyth, leaders a perfect pair of Marsh Tits, healthy and lively without being at all wild, a very pretty and uncommon exhibit; 4th, an equally good pair of Blue Tits, exceedingly well shown with natural perches, and a rush sleeping place; 3, Andrews Bros., lovely pair of Bearded Reedlings, in a well furnished cage which showed them at their best. Continental specimens, certainly, but nearly all the Bearded Tits exhibited have had an assisted passage, and it would be hard to leave them out at the Palace after they have been accepted by judges all over the country; vhc, Collins, beautiful Hedge Sparrow, quite up in breeding col., a lovely exhibit, had broken a tail feather or two, or might have gone up; hc, Lott, nice Shorelark; c, Alton, Bearded Tits. WOODPECKERS, ETC. (12): 1, Wood, beautifully marked Missel Thrush, wonderful size, lovely col. and very steady, wins well; 2, Miss Bousfield, gem of a Waxwing, the "waxings" extra beautiful, marvellous texture of plumage even for this splendidly clothed species, absolutely perfection; 3, Yealland, exceptionally fine Greater Spotted Woodpecker, marvellously tame, feather perfect and well shown; 4, c, Marley, leader beautifully feathered Fieldfare, a thousand pities it has one foot slightly malformed, nicely steady for the species; c., the now well-known Missel, profusely spotted, too profusely perhaps, for the markings crowd together too much in places, very steady, takes sp. for best c. in the nine classes; vhc, Walsh, beautiful Waxwing, sp. for best vhc. in nine classes, feathered like silk, extra good one; hc, sp. best hc. in nine classes, Williams, another beautiful Waxwing, little if anything behind the vhc. bird. PIED, ALBINO, ETC. (16): 1, Ramsden's sp., Martin and Archer, the renowned cl. Yellowhammer, beautiful as ever, often described and as often praised as it deserves; 2, Mays, sweetly pretty Pied Meadow Pipit, all white except for marked wings, beautiful exhibit; 3, Teague, pure white Goldfinch, white as snow, well deserving its place; vhc, Sykes, nearly all white Blackbird, prettily marked on wings, extra good plumage; hc, Walsh, famous Silver Starling, hero of many battles, now showing age, but still a good one; c, Rowe and Richards, pretty Cinnamon Starling; the class comprised, as well as the above, a fine White Jackdaw, Price, which some thought might have been in the cards, White Hedge Sparrow, Hamilton, which could be greatly improved; Pied Linnet, Cinnamon Skylarks, Black Bullfinch, etc.

FOR. GOLDFINCH OR BULLF. (Judge, Mr. J. F. Dewar) (17): 1, Henderson, the Scottish National and last year's Palace winner, we think, truly a grand Finch, splendid size and shape, finely marked wings, large, well-cut blaze of excellent colour, in magnificent condition; 2, Welsh, a really first-class Bullie, huge size, very bold chest and head, grand cap, rare rich even breast colour, very steady and stylish, condition A1; 3, Ovenstone, another exceptionally good Goldie, loses only a shade in width of chest and polish of plumage, fine big blaze, rich colour, clean in cut, very expansive underneath, nice buttons, etc.; 4, Price, Goldie, huge expanse of blaze, not quite so pure in colour or so well cut, stylish, fine wings and tan, trifle slim in build; vhc, Jenner, another really grand Bullie, wonderful size, very massive, beaten a little in breast colour; hc, Mrs. Davidson, very good Goldie, but built on smaller lines; c, Arrighi; No. 1,928, Howie, real good Goldie, we liked for a place.

BRITISH LIMIT: 1, vhc, Buckingham; 2, Frances; 3, Henderson; 4, Pickles; vhc, Ray; hc, Prior, Ramsden; c, Parlett, Pitchford.

NOVICE HYBRIDS & BRITISH.

Judge: Mr. H. Norman.

Entries in the novice British bird classes were a record, and far in advance of last year. Two of the classes (Goldfinch and Bullfinch, and Linnet, etc.) contained over forty birds in each, and we should think this is a record for any novice British bird classes. In the first class the Goldies were rather better represented than the Bullies, and although a Bullfinch led, they were not all through quite as good as the Goldies, but among them one could find some really good specimens. Taking the section all through there were several birds that could hold their own in open competition. The leaders in the Linnet, etc. class, were two really good ones. Mr. Grisdale's Mealy Redpoll, and Mr. Fowler's Linnet being something quite exceptional, as also was Mr. Oliver's Hawfinch—he is a shade on the small side, but in other respects equal to anything on view. As usual here and there among them one could find very fine birds that might have done better if a little more care had been given to the staging. A bird needing a wash and exhibited in an old cage badly in want of a coat of paint can hardly be expected to take premier honours. Novices should walk round the open section and observe the champions' methods. Mr. Oliver secured the Crystal Palace silver medal for best bird, Mr. Bryant the special for best vhc, and Mr. McKinlay for best hc bird. Hybrids were hardly so numerous as formerly, but still some good ones were sent in, and some choice crosses were represented, the light class contained a fine big Canary Bullie with a light tail, and one or two capital pointed birds. The judge wrong classed Mr. Fisher's bird, entered in catalogue as a Linnet Canary, for being, in his opinion, a clear Canary. Some very fine dark birds were to be found in the other class, Mr. Davis leading with a Goldie-Canary, and Mr. Morris-Richards winning with a Goldie-Bullie in A.V. class, another bird of the same cross, owned by Mr. Oldham, pressing it hard for premier position. Special for best Hybrid was won by Mr. Lewis; best vhc, Mr. Tanner; and best hc, Mr. Prosser-Thomas.

NOV., BRIT., GOLDF. or BULLF. (43): 1, hc, McKinlay, Bullfinch, a beauty for type and qual., lovely flush of breast col., good well shaped cap and bib, perfect wings, clear bar, full of polish; 2, Miller, rare size Goldie, good full face, hardly so clean cut as some, but grand top, and sound rich col., well tanned all over, capital wings, put down in tip-top condition; 3, Sadler, very fine Bullie, bold rich col., good cap, and nice full neck, chubby build, grand silvery back, good wings; ex. 3, Stephens, charming Goldie, bright clean blaze, good top, dense blacks, nicely tanned, stands well, nicely polished; 4, Allison, very chubby Bullie, with good front, of capital even col., richly polished cap, of good shape; ex. 4, Plummer, topping Goldie, rare size and shape, lovely clean cut blaze of sound col., well tanned, hardly the finish of leaders; 5, ex. 5, Dawson, grand shapely Bullie, good bold fronted bird, capital depth of col., beaten in polish here; ex 5, charming Goldie, beaten in size, clean cut face, in A1 condition; vhc, Parker, Kemp and Govier, Bryant, Murrell; hc, Stephens, McKinlay, Nott, Grisdale; c, Holden, Hardie; a fine class. LINNET, ETC. (45). 1, Grisdale, real good Mealy Redpoll, grand size, shape, clean cut with frilling, beautifully laced, nice clean bib and good wing; 2, Fowler, grand up-standing Linnet, lovely tone of col., well proportioned all through, wealth of pencilling, very distinct whites, shown in the pink of condition, close up; 3, Lewis, bonny Siskin, good size and shape, nice depth of col. and well laced, hardly the polish; ex. 3, Shearmur, fine, bold Linnet, big bird, of good col. and shape, hardly so distinct in pencilling as second, capital wings; 4, Miss Smyth, beautiful Linnet, grand shape, stands well, as good as any in class, unfortunately lost a feather in one wing; ex. 4, Raine, good Mealy, capital all round bird, but falls a bit in size, well shown; 5, Dr. Sprawson, bonny Linnet, grand shape and col., hardly staged to the best advantage; ex. 5, Dawson, smart Siskin, lovely cap, bib, wings, and lacing, nice tone of col.; vhc, Bryant, Tanner, Hardie, Sadler; hc, Kemp and Govier, Holden, Aldous, Woodcock; c, Holden, Alexander. A.O.V., FINCH or BUNTING (31): 1, Oliver, grand Hawfinch, leading, clean, smart feathered bird, very pure col., grand head and bib, good wings, beautifully staged, not a big one, but wins; 2, Plummer, very fine Chaffinch, grand size, shapely, very rich cap and breast, capital wings, in very fine condition, a credit to its owner; 3, Walker, beautiful Yell. Bunting, lovely shapely bird, nice deep rich col., grand well mkd. head, good flanks, back, and wings; 4, Griffin, very fine Greenie, grandly proportioned, rare rich wings, as tight as wax, well put down; ex. 4, Edgley, very nice Corn Bunting, capital size and shape, and well marked; 5, Johnson, big, bold Hawfinch, grand head and front, good depth of col., very expansive blaze, in good condition; vhc, Orange, Bostock, Bryant, Dawson; hc, Lomas, Holden, Cooper; c, Allison, Wade. HYBRIDS, CL., ETC. (9): 1, Lewis, bonny cl. tailed Can.-Bullie, good size and shape, grand full head, perfect wings, sound col. and qual.; 2, Morris, Richards, lovely four-pointed Goldie, grand size and shape, put down in the very pink of condition, a good bird; 3, Morrine, highly fed var. Greenie-Canary, not over large, but full of qual. and col., well staged; 4, Prosser Thomas, good four-pointed Goldie, grand shape and qual., perfect wings, nice touch of blaze, beaten size; vhc, Tanner; hc, Alexander; c, Frost. DARK (16): 1, Davis, grand bold Goldie, nice size and lovely type, good rich, even tone of col., nice touch of blaze, rich breast, very smart; 2, Bryant, big Linnet, rare subs., grand shape, good full head and front, stands well, nicely mkd., in good order; 3, Shipton, lovely Redpoll-Can., capital size and type, sound rich col., good wings with nice distinct bars, bit rough at thighs; 4, Lafbury, bonny Siskin, shapely smart bird, lovely type and style, in A1 condition; vhc, Cornelius; hc, McKinlay; c, Kemp-Govier. A.V., BRIT. HYB. (5): 1, Morris-Richards, real good Goldie-Bullie, bold fronted bird, stands well, lovely col., grand deep rich black, good wings, in very fine condition; 2, Shipton, lovely Siskin-Greenie, smart taking bird, good col. and qual., a charming spec.; 3, Oldham, another good Goldie-Bullie, hardly so big as winner, but very shapely, capital col., well shown; vhc, hc, Prosser-Thomas.

FOREIGN BIRD SECTION.

The foreign birds were small in numbers, yet formed a section which received a large share of the attention of the visiting public, and while one regrets that the efforts of the L.P.O.S. did not meet with a larger entry, yet the absence of entries from one or two prominent exhibitors is a full explanation and not an indication of waning interest. The beauty and quality of the exhibits left nothing to be desired, and the evidence of the excellence of the organising abilities of Mr. J. W. Ramsden and his colleagues met one on every hand throughout the period of the show. The changing cycle of fortune brings at one time overflowing, and at another meagrely filled classes, and though the latter ruled this year, the foreign section of the National Show for 1913 will not rank as the least successful of L.P.O.S. achievements. It has brought many rare and beautiful foreign species before the visiting public, and we congratulate both the society and the exhibitors on the result. The ten classes provided secured some ninety entries, including rare and beautiful species from many climes, the more notable of which winning many specials, as well as premier honours in the respective classes. The championship diploma, the Abrahams' Memorial trophy, L.P.O.S. members' silver challenge cup, and F.B.C. silver medal, were all secured by Mr. A. Ezra's rare and beautiful Minivet, the trophy for best Australasian bird and F.B.C. silver medal going to Miss Lydia Clare's lovely Queen Alexandra's Parrakeet. Mr. Ezra also secured the C.P. silver medal with his exquisite Amethyst-rumped Sunbird. Other rare and beautiful exhibits were: Mr. Ezra's Abyssinian Lovebird, Blue Chaffinch, Chilian Siskin (failed to catch the judge's eye!), Sepoy Finch, Japanese Redbreast and Loo-choo Robin, which, with the others named above, constitute a team of which any exhibitor may well be proud. Miss Clare's Hooded Parrakeet was another gem, which came in for almost as much admiration as her Queen Alexandra's Parrakeet; in fact, with these two birds one might well call the honours even. The Rev. Raynor's Pococephali triplet, Aubry's (very rare), Meyer's and Senegal Parrots, made an interesting group, the former will not do itself justice till it has been through another moult. Mention must be made of an exquisite Rainbow Bunting (Miss E. M. Dooly) and a gorgeous Hunting Cissa (J. Frostick). Mr. H. T. T. Camps, F.Z.S., judged the Parrot classes, and Mr. W. Swaysland the remainder. Their awards met with but little adverse criticism.

Mr. Camps' Classes.

BUDGERIGARS, LOVEBIRDS, ETC. (4): 1, A. Ezra, Abyssinian Lovebird, probably the only one of its kind in captivity, it is larger and stouter than a Budgerigar, and it (a hen) is all green with a crimson beak, the cock has a rich crimson beak; 2, Miss A. B. Smyth, good pair Black-cheeked Lovebirds; 3, S. W. Davis, Yellow Budgerigars, the greenish undulation very distinct; 4, Colville and Son, Yellow Budgerigars, not so pure a yellow as we used to see. A.O. PARRAKEETS (12): A very interesting class, all the exhibits being in excellent trim: 1, 2 sps, 2, Miss L. Clare, Queen Alexandra's Parrakeet, in exquisite colour and perfect condition, deserves its position, but run very close by the same owner's Hooded Parrakeet, equally beautiful and rare, and it must have been difficult for the judge to separate these—almost a case of "honours even"; 3, W. Edmunds, Many-coloured Parrakeet, one of the richest coloured and sleekest we have seen; 4, Christer and Sons, Red-naped Lorikeet, rich colour and very sleek, an interesting species; vhc (2), G. Fletcher, Barraband's (lovely colour) and King Parrakeet, both perfect, and a marvel of gorgeous colouration; c, W. Baxby, good pair of Alexandrine Parrakeets. Good specimens of Barnard's, a hybrid Pennant's and Red-rumped Parrakeets, were also staged. A.O.S. PARROTS (9): 1, 2, hc, sp, Rev. G. H. Raynor, Meyer's, Senegal and Aubry's Parrots, a fine trio of the same genus, the latter very rare, probably the only one in private hands, but needs to pass through another moult to bring it into exhibition trim; Meyer's, now quite a veteran, yet we have never seen it in better trim, the Senegal quite one of the best we have seen; 3, vhc, Schluter, Leadbeater Cockatoo, grand bird, very clean, lovely colour and bloom, and a good Grey Parrot; 4, Wade, Red-vented Parrot (catalogued as Blue-necked Parrot), a nice bird, with plenty of colour, but looking a wee bit dull; vhc, J. Ditchfield, Blue-fronted Amazon, perfect plumage and very loquacious; c, Ballington, another good Blue front.

Mr. Swaysland's Classes.

AVADAVATS, ETC. (11): 1, 2, Young, Diamond and Parson Finches, both perfect, very tight and silky, good colour and markings; 3, Miss M. Bousfield, St. Helena Waxbills, good colour, very tight; 4, Hose, good pair Golden-crested Waxbills; vhc, Hattersley, smart pair Zebra Finches; hc, Leavers, Diamond Finch; c, Frostick, another Diamond Sparrow. A good class, but not so large as it ought to be, not so representative considering the numbers of really beautiful "Freely Imported Species" that are now continually on the market. WAXBILLS, ETC. (10): An interesting class in which Mr. Ezra's exquisite Vinaceous Fire Finches were an easy first, and Mr. Chadwick's uncommon Red-collared Whydah, though the ends of the tail feathers were somewhat frayed was a good second, but run very close by some perfect Black-headed Gouldian Finches; 1, Ezra, Vinaceous Firefinches, uncommon, exquisitely beautiful, perfect; 2, Chadwick, Red-collared Whydah, uncommon, tail a bit frayed, but otherwise in excellent plumage; 3, Miss Bousfield, Black-headed Gouldian Finch, beautiful colour, very tight and sleek, never seen better; 4, Miss Backhouse, good pair, B.H. Gouldian Finches, not quite so tight as the 3rd prize bird; vhc, Andrews Bros., Ruficauda Finches, a handsome pair, rich col. and very tight; hc, Mdm. Feist-Madewell, Red-billed Weavers; c, Andrews Bros., pair Red-headed Finches, cock, nice bird, but hen quite soft, possibly caught a chill travelling to show. A good pair of Blue-breasted Waxbills were also shown and might have had a card. A Red-breasted Marsh bird entered as a South American Finch should have been marked wrong class. TRUE FINCHES, ETC. (11): The best filled class in section, and containing some really rare and beautiful birds, Mr. Ezra having a grand trio out, in our opinion the first and second prizes should have been transposed, and we cannot understand how the judge came to overlook the rare and perfect Chilian Siskin, one of the rarest birds in the show. An exquisite Rainbow Bunting, and a good pair of Japanese Hawfinches were other notabilities in a good class; 1, 2, Ezra, Sepoy Finch, rare and beautiful species, which unfortunately does not retain in captivity the lovely scarlet plumage, but moults out orange-yellow, and Blue Chaffinch (Fringilla teydea), beautiful and rare, a typical Chaffinch in contour but a lovely deep blue colour; 3, Miss Smyth, Japanese Hawfinches, a handsome pair of birds, very fit and a good colour; 4, Miss Dooly, Rainbow Bunting, a gem, one of the best we have seen; vhc, sp, Mrs. Greene, very good pair of Black-headed Siskins; hc, Frostick, Virginian Nightingale, tight and rich colour; c, Arrighi, Cape Sparrow, well-known bird and beautiful, the sharply defined markings being very clean and distinct, and the colours pure, quite one of the best we have seen. Red-crested and Green Cardinals also staged. TANAGERS (5): contained nothing new, and very good White-capped, Festive, and Maroon Tanagers, were the more notable; 1, 2, Miss Bousfield, Festive (a hen) and White-capped Tanagers, both good birds, but the former not so tight as it might be, the position of these two birds might have been transposed; 3, Mrs. Thynne, Maroon Tanager, in good trim and grand colour, but wild; 4, Arnott; vhc, Frostick, both tri-colour Tanagers in splendid order. SUGAR BIRDS, ETC. (4): 1, sp, A. Ezra, Amethyst-rumped Sunbird, beyond praise, a living gem, scintillating like a ruby, and its owner is to be complimented on his skill in having thrice moulted this bird in captivity; 2, Arnott, Yellow-winged Sugarbird, a beauty, rivalling in the richness of its hues the renowned specimen which Mr. S. M. Townsend (we regretted to learn that ill health had prevented Mr. Townsend sending any birds this year) staged so successfully for several years; 3, Miss Bousfield, Yellow-winged Sugarbird, good colour, but not so tight as the 2nd; 4, Meager, Red-eared Bulbul, a handsome exhibit, really smart bird in perfect trim; vhc, Yealland, good pair of Yellow-winged Sugarbirds, but a little soft. The Tanagers and Sugarbirds provided an array of silken tropical colouring that was worth a long journey to see. A.O.S., SMALL (8): 1, 4 spls, 2, 3, Ezra, short-billed Minivet, beautiful and rare Indian species of graceful form, shining black with bluish sheen above, and flaming red beneath, while its elegant form and graceful deportment rival its exquisite plumage; it may fairly be termed an all round exquisite; 2, Loo-choo Robin; 3, Japanese Redbreast, both grand birds in perfect plumage and with all the attractiveness of the Robin-tribe, a grand trio; 4, Miss Smyth, Red-breasted Marsh Bird, very steady for such a species, but with claws much too long, it is a young bird and will yet show more red in its plumage, the red areas will become more intense in colour; vhc, Fordred, Pekin Robin, exceptionally well-coloured, looks to be colour-fed; hc, sp, Yealland, Hangnests, rather rough plumage, and, though very probably cock and hen, the birds were of two species; c, F. R. Tatten, Silky Cowbird. A pair of Hill Mynahs in rough plumage, should have been marked wrong class, their proper place being in the next class. A.O.S., LARGE (5): A small class, containing two uncommon birds, and other beautiful and interesting species. Most of the visiting public paused before the winner, Mr. Frostick's Hunting Cissa, and exclaimed at its beautiful plumage, and it certainly merited all the admiration it received; alert yet steady, its silky garment of soft pale blue and warm brown, red bill, and flesh coloured legs made a most effective combination, which would have shown to even greater advantage against a darker background. Mr. Simpson's Cuban Trogan 2nd is a species which does not show to advantage within the limits of a show-cage; in roomier quarters the beautiful coloration of the plumage and interesting demeanour are displayed, but it is a lethargic species, this specimen approached very nearly to the full coloration of the wild bird, the plumage is soft and easily damaged; 3, Hattersley, long-tailed glossy Starling, a perfect specimen of this beautiful, but well-known species, the same remarks apply to Messrs. Andrews Bros., Green Glossy Starling (vhc), a perfect specimen, but the glistening and changing metallic hues of this lovely species, are too well known to call for description; 4, Hon. C. Agar-Robartes, Greater Hill Mynah, very sleek and perfect plumage.

CRESTED CANARY CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING.

An appreciation of Mr. Tyson's services: The Club now financially sound.

It was half an hour after the advertised time that the annual meeting commenced of the Crested Canary Club in the Board Room at the Crystal Palace on Feb. 8th, and even then the attendance was only small. In opening the meeting, Mr. J. Tyson, the hon. sec., said he had received a letter from the President, Mr. Rhodes, informing him that much to his regret he was unable to be present, but that his interest in the Club was as great as ever, and anything he could do to promote its work he should be at all times pleased to do. On the proposition of Mr. T. Heath, seconded by Mr. J. Robson, Mr. G. Crabb was voted to the chair, and he was supported by Mrs. Litchfield, Dr. Twigg, Messrs Heath, Robson, Ley, Horton, Dawn, Broad, Framp, Burrows, Greenwood, Burson, Barnett, Sheppard, Brotherton, and J. Tyson, hon. sec.

The balance sheet was taken as read, all the members having received a copy. In his annual report Mr. Tyson spoke of the liberality of the members in assisting in the work of reducing the adverse balance which was in existence when he took office two years ago. It had now been not only wiped out, but transformed into a balance in hand of £7 7s. 5d. He emphasised the fact that the work during the year had not only been onerous and arduous, but it had been depressing owing to the loss of old members, and the absence of new ones. He had tried hard to secure new members, but the result had been very poor, and not worth the effort made. The result was seen in the lack of demand for stock, and this was due also in some degree to the lack of enthusiasm among the members. The membership, in spite of all his efforts, had decreased. He deeply regretted the loss of four members by death, amongst them two of their oldest and best, Messrs. T. Taylor and J. Dobson. In speaking of the club competitions he pointed out that owing to the absence of novice members there had been no novice competition, as, according to the rules, the number competing had not been large enough. During the year the sub-committee appointed to deal with the question of a Club show cage had selected a pattern cage, and asked the Club to make the Club show cage compulsory from the year 1914. Five hundred rings had been sold, and he had received a number of reports concerning them, which on the whole were satisfactory. It had not been a glorious year, and whilst conscious of his own shortcomings, due not to lack of interest in the Club, but to the fact that he could not give the time necessary to carry on the work of the Club, he did feel that the members might have done more, and more would have to be done if the Club was to be kept going.

What the Secretary Did.

Mr. Ley said that now they had a balance in hand he was going to refer to the matter of the secretary's honorarium, of which he spoke twelve months since. On that occasion himself and two or three others felt that Mr. Tyson should be remunerated for the work and time he gave to the club, and they decided they would do their little to help, but Mr. Tyson would not hear of it until such time as the Club was self-supporting. Now that the Club had a balance of over seven guineas, and had shown that it was self-supporting, he thought that they ought to give Mr. Tyson an honorarium. When they begged Mr. Tyson to take office the Club was heavy in debt, and in a little while would have ceased to exist had Mr. Tyson not stepped into the breach, and well had he done his work. A debit balance of £15 had been turned into a credit balance of over £7. They must remember the Club made a big claim on Mr. Tyson, he had practically to work it the whole twelve months by himself, as there was only the day of the annual meeting when he had any help from the members. He thought they should give him an honorarium, and he with some friends would make it up into £10. Mr. Heath proposed and Mr. Robson seconded that the Club vote £5 as a honorarium to the hon. sec. This was carried unanimously, and Mr. Ley undertook to collect the other £5.

On the motion of Mr. Framp, seconded by Mr. Broad, the secretary's report and balance sheet were adopted. Mr. Ley proposed, and Dr. Twigg seconded, a vote of thanks to the auditors, to which Messrs. Heath and Robson responded, expressing their great pleasure in helping on the work of the Club.

The three-guinea special drawing then took place, Cheltenham, Nottingham, Plymouth, Manchester, and the Crystal Palace all drew blanks, and the last out of the hat—the L.C.B.A.—took the honour. On the points being totalled it was found that Messrs. Evins Bros. were the winners with 17 points, the runners-up being Messrs. Greenwood and Burson with 11 points.

Mr. Tyson announced that the committee had again elected Mr. Rhodes as President.

The Club Show.

Mr. Ley had given notice to discuss the advisability of holding the Club show annually in London. He said he considered it important that all the Club's trophies should be competed for in the centre of the universe. All roads led to London, and fanciers would attend a show in London when they would not go to Cheltenham, Nottingham, or Manchester. He also thought that the show should be held later in the year. He, himself, had won the principal cup last year, yet when the Palace came round he was completely outdistanced by a bird which was not ready for the Club show, and he did not think it fair that he should hold the cup when Messrs. Greenwood and Burson had a better bird than the one which had won the cup for him. The Palace show might be thought too late, but there was the L.C.B.A., that would neither be too early nor too late. He thought that the knowledge that the Club show was held at a fixed date and place would tend to create greater interest. If the show was held in October or early November the best young birds were not through moult, and thus the Club show did not bring out the best birds of the year, which it would do if held at a later date.

Mr. Heath agreed that a later date would work for the benefit of the Club show, but it would never do to fix the Club show in London. He considered that the provincial members should be studied, and it was against their interests to hold the show always in London.—Mr. Greenwood agreed with Mr. Ley, and seconded his motion, and Mr. Broad supported. Mr. Robson, Mr. Sheppard, Dr. Twigg, Mr. Brotherton, and Mr. Dawn all said it would be most unwise and unfair to fix the show in London. Mr. Robson said that Mr. Ley's argument that London shows drew the best entries was really an argument against his proposition, because it showed them there was need for the Club to arouse more interest in the country shows. He could not understand Mr. Ley, a Nottingham man, suggesting such a thing, because it had for years been Nottingham's proud boast that they always had the best show in the kingdom.

Mr. Ley said he suggested it because the provincial shows were most of them too early, and the Nottingham men were sportsmen, they wanted the show held at such a time when all the best birds would be out, and they had no fear in sending birds to London. Further, he was certain it would mean increased entries.—Mr. Tyson said Messrs. Evins Bros. had written in favour of London, whilst Mr. Bale was against it, the latter suggesting that each county should have the Club show in turn, and thus let fanciers throughout the country have a chance of seeing the cream of the Fancy occasionally. Mr. Tyson went on to say that when the present rule of one society only having the Club show once in five years was fixed, it was done with the object Mr. Bale mentioned, but times had changed and it was difficult now to fix up the Club show, whilst the London shows seemed to draw the best entries.—Mr. Ley, in reply, said that those who agreed with a fixed and later date overlooked the fact that the adoption of November would limit the Club to one or two shows, and thus the objection against London was removed, especially as the L.C.B.A. show was always held at the end of November.—Mr. Crabb thought the present arrangement could not be improved upon. If a later date was fixed upon he thought there would be grumbling from the members whose local show was held in October or early November.

The Novices Considered.

Mr. Tyson suggested that greater liberty should be given to the committee in the allocation of the Club show, the five years' rule worked rather arbitrarily, and caused a certain amount of hardship. He thought the drop in the entries was not due so much to the date of the Club show as to the fact that the novices were forced out of the novice classes too soon, and finding they could not hold their own in open competition, dropped out altogether.

Mr. Robson said that the novices were forced out more because of the high prices asked for stock than to any method of allocating the Club show. He agreed with Mr. Tyson that if they could attract and keep the novices it would increase the membership, and promote the welfare of the Club as a whole.

Mr. Ley said if the Club show was held at a fixed and later date those who held the best birds would keep them back, and thus the novices would have a good chance. Mr. Brotherton thought the early shows would suffer, too, because if there was anything in Mr. Ley's argument they would all be holding back for the club show, and then what would become of the early shows?—On the vote being taken there were 6 for the motion, and 8 against, and thus one-and-a-half hours' talk ended in things being left as before.

On the motion to receive reports of the 1912 experiments and discuss the compulsory adoption of closed rings, Mr. Tyson said Mr. Woollard had written against compulsion, as had Messrs. Bale, Evins Bros., and Guy, but Mr. E. Barker was in favour.—Mr. Ley said his experience was all against the use of rings.—Dr. Twigg said he had had no trouble.—Mr. Robson said the secret of successful ringing was not to ring too soon. The general feeling of the meeting was against compulsion, and Dr. Twigg proposed and Mr. Heath seconded a motion that a larger ring should be issued this year, and that members should be advised not to ring birds till seven days old. This was carried unanimously.

Mr. Tyson said compulsion having been dropped, the next motion fell through, as it was impossible to have championships unless they had all birds rung. This motion read—"To discuss the advisability of awarding championship certificates after a given number of wins, thus allowing the exhibit the use of the title 'champion.'"

On the motion "To discuss ways and means of awaking the interest in the variety from its present dormant condition" coming up, Dr. Twigg said he would give eight specials of 5s. each to be competed for at eight shows for the best bird shown by a novice, the winner not to take it unless he became a member of the C.C.C. This would result in an accession of new members, because if successful it would mean one new member from each of the eight shows. Dr. Twigg's offer was accepted with thanks.—After some discussion it was, on the motion of Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. Heath, decided to offer a "draw special" for yellows, on the same conditions as the one now given for buffs, but with the difference that both old and young birds compete, and at any show where there are two classes for yellows.

Mr. Dawn suggested that the Club should arrange for experts to give lectures up and down the country from time to time, so as to instruct the novices.—Mr. Ley said that the novices could teach the experts, for if anything wonderful was done and the record appeared in the papers it was usually a novice who had done it.—The meeting closed with votes of thanks to the chairman and hon. sec.

THATTO HEATH O.S.

Monthly meeting held Feb. 3, at Railway Hotel. Owing to sickness our chairman, Mr. H. Enever. was unable to attend. Mr. A. Ashcroft occupied the chair in his absence. There was a pretty fair turn-up of members to take their share of prize money from last show, which was a success. Special prizes of cash went along with every first prize, besides material specials. Decided to hold our Nest Feather show July 5. Proposed also that the monthly papers be continued. Mr. R. P. Bixter, Prescot, kindly promised to give the first at our next meeting on March 3, on the Norwich Plainhead. Members cannot afford to miss this treat. Novices, remember this, and turn up and bring a fancier friend. Officials for 1913:—Pres., Dr. Cotton; vice-presidents, Dr. Wilson, Mr. J. Ashton; chair, Mr. H. Enever; vice-chair, A. Ashcroft; hon. treas., Mr. J. Leather; hon. sec., Mr. H. Cuttler; assist. sec., Mr. H. H. Bixter. Fanciers wishing to join the society may do so by applying to any member of the society or sec.—H. Cuttler, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHERN NORWICH P.C. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual general meeting was held in the Press-room at the Palace, on Saturday afternoon. There were present: Messrs. E. Baker (in the chair), F. S. Matthes (hon. treas. and sec.), Midgley, Hodder, Geo. Gardiner, Gill, Keech, Houghton, Cole, W. Ellis, Newley, Parr, Tomsett, and Lathlieff. The Sec. read the minutes of the last annual meeting, which were adopted, on the motion of Mr. G. Gardiner, seconded by Mr. Keech. The secretary announced the result of the voting as follows:—Pres., Mr. E. Baker; hon. treas., Mr. F. S. Matthes; auditors, Messrs. T. Heath and Robson; committee (London area), Messrs. J. W. Ramsden 22, J. Robson 21, J. Hodder 20, L. Richardson 20, J. Hazell 12, G. F. Crawford 9, (provincial area) W. W. Midgley 20, W. Ellis 19, S. Gill 16, W. Collings 16, A. J. Kilby 12, J. Houghton 8. The Treasurer then made his annual report. He said he had not got all the subscriptions in, and there were a few sundries to settle up, so he had not yet been able to get out a proper balance sheet, but from a rough guess he thought he had enough in hand to meet all liabilities to the end of the year 1912, with cash to pay for all specials won during the season. Balance sheet, after audit, would be issued in March. They had done fairly well during the past year. They had lost about six members by resignation, but their total membership was 108. Of the members starred only about six were more in arrears than 1912, and none over four years. He thought he should get most of the money in by the end of March. He thought they might take it that Mr. E. Baker was the winner of the £10 10s. cup this year, and Mr. J. Houghton the £3 3s. cup. For the novice special, Mr. S. Ward Clapham show, Mr. Campbell Wimbledon show, Mr. Crawford L.C.B.A. show. He (Mr. Matthes) had been round to most of the London shows, and thought that this year they had Norwich on the bench better than ever before down South. He thought there had been as good specimens of Norwich at the Palace as seen for several years, and he could assure them that the club was fully alive to everything that could tend to work up the standard of bird to their ideal. He thanked all the members who had helped him with subs., and in other ways. Everybody had seemed willing to help him when he needed it. Mr. Gill said he thought they might have had a balance sheet presented at the annual meeting, and thought it ought to be out. The Sec. explained that he had waited until the final results at the Palace re points, then after the purchase of specials would present his balance of accounts. Mr. Cole thought it was quite in order until the Palace show was over, so far as funds were concerned. Mr. Gill then mentioned that the annual meeting ought to be held in March, and after other discussion the secretary's report was adopted.

The following resolution, of which notice had been given, stood in the name of Mr. C. Garland (Plymouth): "That all birds competing for the S.N.P.C. trophies must be bred by the exhibitor." Mr. Gill was the seconder to this motion. The Chairman said if he had not been interested in the cup competition he should have been inclined to rule the motion out of order. Legally, the £10 10s. cup had been won four times, and the conditions under which it had been competed for could not be altered until it was won outright. Mr. Gill did not see that this motion altered the conditions one iota. It merely says that a man must breed his own birds. Mr. Midgley: But it would be an alteration! The Chairman: It is a sweeping suggestion. It would court dishonesty and bring disaster. How is anyone to know whether a bird is bred by an exhibitor or not?—Mr. Hodder spoke of some of the difficulties in the way of the resolution, and declared he was opposed to it as impracticable. Mr. Midgley moved that they proceed to the next business.—Mr. Gill: I think it will help the Fancy. The Chairman could not help thinking, from things that came to his knowledge, that the resolution was aimed at him. Mr. Gill did not think so. The Chairman: I have it as a hit against me because I bought a bird at Plymouth.

After other discussion, in which the Sec. said he was of opinion that if the resolution were carried it would in less than two years reduce the membership to 20, then to ten, and ultimately destroy the club altogether. The resolution was then put and lost.

A letter was read from Mr. Crawford, stating that if Mr. Garland's resolution was defeated, he would wish to withdraw his resolution, set down as follows: "That all birds must have closed rings, if owners' birds only compete for trophies, and these be bought through the club, with a record kept of sales," and this was consequently withdrawn.

The following motion by Mr. Spillman (Devonport), was afterwards agreed to: "That rule 10 be altered for champion classes as follows:—Nor., cl. or invisible tkd., yell., ditto buff, tkd., mkd., or varieg. yell., ditto buff, yell. hen, buff hen, yell. unflighted, buff unflighted." The chairman here left to catch a train, and Mr. Midgley took his place while votes of thanks were recorded to the retiring officers and chairman.

OXFORD C.B.S.

Third annual general meeting, Feb. 6, at St. Peter-le-Bailey Hall. There was a good number of members present. The balance sheet for 1912 was presented and passed, and was considered very satisfactory, showing a balance in hand of £8 13s. 11d. Decided to hold a pair show on March 6, for Canaries and Muling and Hybrid pairs, and some good competition is expected. Members are particularly asked to bring their friends, and make the show a success.—A. F. Fifield, Press Correspondent.

Songs were beautifully sung by Miss Beaumont, Mr. Lawrence Creed, and Mr. Schofield, while Messrs. Steeple and Green produced sweet melody from the concertina. Mr. Ernest Taylor, Shaw, was an excellent pianist, and Mr. Thomas Ashton a good M.C.—James Cope, Sec.

Meeting held at headquarters, Flying Dutchman, Leeds Road, Bradford, a nice collection of members gathering together. Mr. W. Morement in the chair. The principal item of the evening's work was the voting on the alterations to present Yorkshire Union rules, etc., some of which created very important and interesting discussions. After each old rule and suggested new rule had been carefully studied and discussed by all members present, the voting was then put into operation, after which the ballot paper was duly filled in by Mr. W. Helliwell (sec.), which brought the meeting to a close.—P. N. Jenkinson, Assist. Sec.

LOANHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held in Masons Arms, Feb. 8, Mr. A. Jardine, President, in the chair. The chairman asked members to consider Rule 6, and after discussion it was decided, on the motion of Mr. H. Nelson, seconded by D. Dalgleish, that we be firm with this rule. All members must book their hens at March meeting, and secretary was instructed to post-card absent members about same. On the motion of R. H. Douglas, seconded by R. Fisher, it was agreed to give a gold medal for best Mule or British bird. The chairman tabled a motion that we consider classification at March meeting. Something out of the ordinary are the medals for runners-up in each section, the centre of each being a fine engraved Yorkie. BRADFORD EAST O.S

Mr. W. Cruise opened a very interesting discussion on the general management of Canaries at the meeting held February 4th before a good attendance. All seemed to thoroughly enjoy the proceedings. Mr. Cruise's remarks emanated from one who has proved for himself the practical benefits to be derived from the various methods he advocated, and who has never hesitated to give others the benefit of his long experience in the Fancy. The audience was not slow to accept the chairman's (Mr. G. R. Rushworth) invitation to ask questions, and for upwards of an hour these were levelled at Mr. Cruise from all quarters, his responses to same being very concise and clear. One question as to when Mr. Cruise usually paired his birds together elicited the information that March 21st was about his usual time; another, as to letting the birds have plenty exercise, was met by the response that he usually lets his birds fly about in a spare room for a month or five weeks, and from this method he declares that he never knows what an egg-bound hen is. Many were in total agreement with him on this point, and I believe that Mr. Cruise was about the first fancier in this district who adopted the above oft-ridiculed idea of letting his birds have room to exercise themselves on the wing. He was certainly the first fancier I know about, and I copied this idea with much success. Asked his opinion as to sweating hens and its cause, Mr. Cruise instantly replied that the birds were not in proper health, or otherwise they would not sweat the young, and as a remedy he suggested double breeding cages, and putting all food into the compartment farthest away from the nest pan. Mr. Cruise is also a strong believer in green food, but gives it very judiciously during the first few days, when the young are hatched, afterwards increasing it liberally without any detrimental effects. The nest he made properly for the hen before she is put to sit, making it perfectly round and smooth, so that the eggs will roll nicely, and not lodge in any flat or uneven places. This is undoubtedly a cause of many clear eggs. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Cruise, on the proposition of Mr. C. Cowgill, who personally thanked him for his advice and interesting remarks, and seconded by Mr. J. Rhodes, the vote being carried with enthusiasm. —H. Hill, Sec.

EDINBURGH NORWICH AND MULE BREEDERS CLUB.

Usual monthly meeting of the above club, held 142 High Street, Mr. J. Cooper in the chair. Sec. intimated his resignation, as owing to other work he had not the time to give to carry on the club affairs as they should be; it was agreed with regret to accept same, and Mr. J. B. Cooper was elected to the vacancy.—J. C., sec.

We are holding our pair show at All Saints' Parochial Hall, Prince of Wales Road, Battersea, on Feb. 15, 7.30 till 10, when we have a case of spoons for lady novice Border members, given by an anonymous fancier, and who wishes me to put in Fancy Press that we accept the same; also cup and other specials will be competed for. EAST HAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Jan. 9, at Hartley Avenue Schools, Wakefield Street. The officers for the past year were most heartily thanked, and the following were elected for 1913:—Pres., Alderman J. Brooks, J.P., C.C.; vice-pres., A. J. A. Marley, G. Oliver, W. Smith; chair, T. Walker; vice-chair, G. Perry; comm., P. Mays, C. H. Cooper, G. Thomas, C. H. A. Bennett, C. R. Evans, W. L. Taylor, F. Potten, and Mr. F. Onslow, assist. hon. sec. The pair show takes place at headquarters, Sat., Feb. 15th, door open at 6; free, all invited. There is an interesting code of specials (points), two cups, a tea service, timepiece, and money for the ensuing year. A letter from Mr. E. Oakes was read to the members.—Frederick Fox, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held the Crown Hotel Hill, February 5th. Mr. W. C. Wells presided over a fair number of members. Resignation of Mr. J. Hughes accepted; also, after having reconsidered Mr. Shepherd's resignation, it was unanimously accepted. Mr. Collier proposed, regarding the proposed Roller section, that a special committee meeting should be called in a fortnight's time to thoroughly go into the matter. The secretary then read a few letters and postcards from Roller fanciers who wished to join; most of them mentioned that they thought it was a step in the right direction, also wondered why it had not been taken up in Birmingham before. Mr. Derry proposed that a lecture on the Norwich Canary should be given at the next monthly meeting, and that Mr. Weaver, of Wolverhampton, should be asked if he could make it convenient to oblige. Carried unanimously. The guarantee for advertising the open show, etc., was carried after a short argument. A British table show was then proposed by Mr. Broadhurst, and it was arranged to have it in April, together with a lecture on same. Decided to write Mr. Tonks and ask if he will kindly judge. Two new members elected: Messrs. Hallam and Chattaway, and one nominated, Mr. Sadler.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec.

WARRINGTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, Jan. 31, Mr. Weston presiding over a very good muster of members. Sec. read the balance sheet of the open show, which showed a credit balance of £3 15s. 1d., while the balance sheet for the year ending Dec. 31, 1912, showed £14 5s. 4d., on the right side, a figure which speaks well for the management of the society, and one which gave every satisfaction to all present. The committee would be glad to hear of a few good fanciers who would like to become members. Surely, the healthy condition of the foregoing balance sheet should be an inducement for some to join a good soicety. Prize money for the members' show held on New Year's Day was paid out to the winners who were present. Messrs. Pain and Holbrook were elected new members. Messrs. Leigh and Pitchford were asked to audit the balance sheet. Decided to have a judging competition for British at our next meeting, Feb. 28, when Mr. Leigh promised to adjudicate. Mr. Baxter kindly promised to give a washing exhibition at a date which will be arranged later in the season. Prior to the meeting a pair show was held, Mr. Leigh placing the winners as follows:—YORKS., YELL. CK., BUFF HEN: 1, Harper; 2, Baxter. BUFF CK., YELL. HEN: 1, Baxter; 2, Harper. NOR., YELL. CK., BUFF HEN: 1 Weston; 2, Nelson. BUFF CK., YELL. HEN: 1, Nelson; 2, Baxter. BORD., YELL. CK., BUFF HEN: 1, Nelson; 2, Pitchford. BUFF CK., YELL. HEN: 1, Nelson; 2, Pitchford.—Geo. M. Nelson, Sec.

NORWICH P.C.C. OF IRELAND.

Special meeting held in Clarence Place Hall, May Street, Feb. 6, for the purpose of deciding whether the club would be re-formed and carried on, or dissolved, and the cups presented to some other society. There was a very fair attendance of fanciers representing the breed catered for by the club, the following being present: Messrs. Barclay, Thompson, Bowman, Carson, Scott, Connell, Lavery, McCrea, McBride, Laughlin, Houston, Gilmore, Teasey, Cassells, and Stewart. Mr. Barclay, chair, fully explained the purpose for which we were met, and after the matter was fully discussed, said he would take a show of hands in favour of re-forming the club. All present, except one, who remained neutral, voted in favour of giving the club another try. A provisional set of officers were elected:—Pres., Mr. Barclay; sec. and treas., Mr. Stewart; committee, Messrs. Thompson, Bowman, Carson, Scott, McCrea, Lavery, McBride, Laughlin, Houston, Gilmore, Connell, Foreman, and Montgomery. A sub-committee was then elected to amend old rules or draft out new ones to come up for approval at our next meeting, Wed., Feb. 19, at 8, in Clarence Place Hall. A very hearty invitation is extended to all fanciers to this meeting. The two silver cups, the property of the club, were presented by their present holders, and set on the table free, to be competed for afresh in whatever way the committee think best. Both cups are at present in my possession, as sec. pro. tem. In passing, permit me to say a word or two in reply to Mr. Connell's letter of Feb. 1, re the cups. There was only one promise given, and that was to give the cups up to the club to be competed for afresh by unflighted birds, and I, as sec., tried to get the members together for this purpose, but my efforts were rewarded by no response, as Mr. Connell well knows. As there is no rule in our rule book, or resolution ever passed to turn the cups over to any society, the holders had no alternative but to do as they have done.—James Stewart, Sec. pro, tem.

BOOTLE C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held at Wood's Cafe, Jan. 4, Mr. Rimmer in the chair. The financial statement for 1912 was submitted, showing a balance of close on £7. This result, which was considered very satisfactory, has to a large extent to be placed to the credit of our worthy sec., Mr. L. Hamilton, who has worked very hard for the benefit of the Society. Proposed by Mr. McNulty, seconded by Mr. Lobb, that a part of the cash in hand should be given to our sec., but the offer was declined by Mr. Hamilton, with thanks. Officers for 1913 were elected as follows: Pres., Mr. H. Berry; vice-pres., Mr. R. Ratcliffe; chair, Mr. J. Rimmer; vice-chair, Mr. Lobb; sec., Mr. L. Hamilton; treas., Mr. Larkin; committee, Messrs. McNulty, McLean, Skilling, Hall, Rawsthorne, Steinart, Handley, Young and Owens, Plunkett. Mr. Plunkett, who has been doing great things last show season, kindly offered a valuable special in the form of an electro-plated tea and coffee service, to be won for most points in clears or ticks (Yorkshires) throughout the whole of this season's shows. The offer was accepted with acclamation. Five new members were nominated for entry to the society, and it is hoped heaps of fanciers in Bootle and district will join our happy little circle in the near future. Mr. Hamilton made a nice little speech, thanking the members for the support they had given him, also for the handsome present he received at the last meeting in the shape of a marble clock and side ornaments, which he said would always remind him of the good feeling shown him by fellow members.—G. Rawsthorne, Assist. Sec.

The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

From the Harz Monntains of Germany.

At prices quoted below. Have on approval, and test the bona-fides of this statement. Never excelled at prices, if ever equalled, which I believe they have not. Don't be "gulled" by purchasing mongrels sold as Hartz Rollers at lower prices. They have never seen Germany, and to sell as such is an impertinent lie. Specially selected. Why, one of my Norwich or Yorkshire songsters is worth half-a-dozen of these insignificant birds with really no breed in them. Hartz cocks, 6/6, and 7/6. Hens, 2/-; Genuine Seiferts, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Pairs, 10/6, 15/6, 21/-, 25/- upwards. Hens 3/6. Pairs, 7/6, 8/6. Cages, 3d. extra. A few exceptional birds, 30/- and 40/- each. An exceptional lot of good hens, and now is the time to purchase them. All kinds of cages for same. Pairs, ditto, for breeding, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-. If you desire to know all about those interesting little birds, you should send for "Profitable Canary Breeding as Practised in Germany," by Albert Retch. This is, in my opinion, the best and most reliable little work ever published on Hartz Mountain Rollers, and can only be purchased from me (copyright), price, paper cover, 9d.; cloth gilt, 1/3.

W. RUDD, The Bird Specialist, NORWICH.

E. L. STOREY, Roller Importer, CROWLE DONCASTER.

BEFORE YOU DECIDE

to purchase a Roller from anywhere, just read the unsolicited testimonials given below, and when it is taken into consideration that these letters are written by persons whose only motive is to tell the truth and express their appreciation of the Rollers I have sold them, I think even the most sceptical person will admit that there really must be something special about my Leipzig Rollers, and that what I claim for them is correct. I have repeatedly said that the Leipzig Rollers are far and away better singers than the ordinary Rollers and that they have a much more pleasant song and a greater variety of changes than any other Roller on the market. To test the truth of this statement, I ask you to have a Leipzig Roller on a week's trial from me and an ordinary Roller at any higher price on similar conditions from elsewhere, test them side by side, and if in your honest opinion and the opinion of any Roller judge you can call upon, mine is not by far the better bird, return it to me, and I will instantly refund the whole of your out-of-pocket expenses. I now have about 1,600 (one thousand six hundred) of these Leipzig Rollers in stock, all cocks guaranteed in full song day and gas light, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water bubble runs, soft roulades, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., etc. and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or discordant notes whatever price; 7/6 and 8/6 each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/6 and 12/6 each (the latter at 12/6 are specially good value). Hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 3/- each; two, 5/6. I also have a magnificent stock of genuine Glucke-bred contest Rollers at 15/- and 21/- each; hens, 4/- each. These contest Rollers have a wonderful range of soft mellow tours, and are of bluest blood Germany can boast of, just the birds for anyone starting to breed contest birds or for improving their stock. I also have a splendid lot of loud, free singing Hartz cocks in full vigorous song, day and gas light, at 5/6 each; three, 15/6; seven, 33/-. Hartz hens, 2/3 each; 4/- couple. All birds are safely and warmly packed (no matter how cold the weather) in special travelling cages free of extra cost, and are sent on full week's approval solely at my own risk during whole time either on receipt of cash or if same is deposited with Editor, and unless perfect satisfaction is given and your every expectation realised, the whole of your money is promptly returned without question or comment. Note, full name and address, also date, given with each letter below:—"Longicy House, Rochester, Feb. 1st. Sir,—Bird arrived safe and I am very pleased. He is a splendid free singer, at it nearly all day. Thanking you for your honest dealing.—Yours, etc., Conway Gordon." "24, Park View, Nantwich, Feb. 1st. Sir,—Received birds on Wednesday, and have great pleasure in stating that they quite surpassed expectation.—Yours, T. Heap." "10, Rossall Road, Chorley, Feb. 1st. Sir,—Received Roller in splendid condition and was soon singing when put in fresh cage. I am more than pleased with your selection. He is a lovely songster. Yours, T. Blackburn." "Shakespeare Street, Cardiff, Feb. 5th. Sir,—Received Bandmaster safe, and must say he is a champion. He sang beautifully one hour after arrival.—Yours, S. Watkins." "6, Filmau Road, Fulham, London, Feb. 10th. Sir,—Please send me a Leipzig Bandmaster. The one I purchased from you last year still sings as well as ever and gives every satisfaction to the friend I gave it to.—Yours, H. Brown." On Feb. 16th Mr. Brown again writes: "Sir,—Roller arrived quite safe on Thursday and started singing when caged and still keeping it up. Your advt. is not misleading; they are, as you say, reliable songsters, free from harsh notes, etc. Thanking you most sincerely for such a good bird.—Yours, H. Brown." "10, Queen Street, Ashby, Doncaster, Feb. 10th. Sir,—Please send Roller hen. The cock you sent is singing splendidly, and started before being taken out of travelling cage.—Yours, F. Mumby." "The Intake, Glenlea Foyers, Inverness-shire, Feb. 11th. Sir,—Roller arrived here safe after being 21 hours on the road. I must say I am more than satisfied with him. Your advt. does not give your Leipzig Rollers half credit enough for their beautiful notes at such a reasonable price, and I think there is nothing to equal them.—Yours, J. McMillan." "125, Windsor Road, Penarth, Feb. 11th. Sir,—Received bird in pink of condition. Am very pleased with your choice. Thanking you for prompt despatch.—Yours, G. Mounter." "Netherton Colliery, Feb. 11th. Sir,—Roller arrived safely and gave us a few tours three hours after arrival. He is a beautiful singer; his song is enchanting. I thank you very much for sending such a nice bird. The other bird I have is not in it with yours.—Yours, J. Wood." "11, School Street, Williamstown, Penygraig, Feb. 12th. Sir,—Please send Leipzig hen to match the cock. He is a little marvel and seems to get better every day.—Yours, J. Williams." "41, Kilmailing Road, Cathcart, Glasgow, Feb. 14th. Sir,—Roller hen arrived safe, and am pleased with same; also cock doing well and singing fine. They are a well-matched pair. Thanks for prompt attention.—Yours, J. McGilp." "Barrington Park, Burford, Oxon, Feb. 16th. Sir,—Many thanks for Roller received on 11th. He is a perfect gem, and was quite lively after travelling 24 hours. Shall recommend you to my friends.—Yours, R. Burden." Please note, as this is most probably the last consignment of Leipzig Rollers I shall receive this season, it behoves all intending purchasers to send their orders early as possible to avoid disappointment. (See British Bird column.)

A CLEAN SWEEP

1913—we have won the Yorkshire Challenge Cup, so don't be led astray with misleading adverts. of winnings of the past. Also we have won the Yorkshire Challenge Trophy two years in succession, which now becomes our own property, also winning outright the 10-guinea G.M.Y.C.C. Trophy, also winners of "Cage Birds" competitions, and 40 points, leading at all Yorkshire Union Shows with four highest awards. The above is a feat never before accomplished, finishing up with two 1sts at Crystal Palace and specials too numerous to mention. This is official proof where the best is to be got. We have the world's record for breeding winners. As for testimonials, we could publish them daily of winners bred from our strain. Those desirous of laying a solid foundation cannot equal our strain. NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

The Humanitarians were busy at the Crystal Palace Show, and this is not an unmixed blessing, for they will have had the opportunity of seeing for themselves that the keeping of cage birds is not the "acted blasphemy" which they represent it to be.

Amongst the "cruelties" into which they made up their minds to enquire was the feeding of seed-eating birds throughout the show with seed thrown on to the cage bottom, and they were anxious to know whether this was not a most reprehensible practice. In this they were acting upon their totally mistaken supposition that the feelings of a bird in a cage are analogous to those of a human being in solitary confinement, for they are never so pleased as when they can conjure up a vision of "a feathered victim beating out its heart against the bars of its prison."

The Truth of the Matter.

They either do not know, or wilfully ignore, the fact that a cage bird is not a reasoning being. A bird has no recollection of what was happening to it yesterday, nor fear, nor hope, or what may happen to-morrow. It lives for the immediate moment, and, as long as it is provided with sustenance, and reasonable room in which to move, is far happier in a cage or aviary than when faced with the necessity of finding its own food under the varying conditions of nature, and with the ever-present fear of its natural enemies, stoats and other beasts, and birds of prey, not to mention the birdcatcher.

We have had during the past few days a spell of sharp weather; the ground has been frozen hard, and in many parts covered with snow. Many wild birds, misled by the unusually mild weather of January, have already paired up. Nests, many with eggs, and some with young, are in evidence all over the country, and the sufferings inflicted by "kind nature," upon the misguided birds are sufficient to touch the heart of any humane cage bird keeper.

An Object Lesson.

The representatives of the Humanitarian Societies, who were present at the Crystal Palace Show must have had an object-lesson which should stand them in good stead, and which should have some effect in reducing their insensate opposition to the hobby of bird-keeping. They will have seen for themselves that the birds on the benches were in far more perfect plumage than is ever seen in a wild bird. If a bird is not healthy, and happy, the first indication of any trouble is roughness of plumage. By the same reasoning, if a bird is in perfection of plumage it is happy and comfortable, and no sophistry of the humanitarians can get away from this fact.

For a bird to have its seed thrown into the bottom of a perfectly clean show cage, and to have to take its food from this during the show instead of from a seed vessel such as is affixed to its stock cage at home, is no more to the bird than would be felt by a human being who by force of circumstances had to pass a day without washing his hands, and to talk of the practice as being inhumane, and detrimental to the health of the birds, is to talk consummate nonsense.

An Absurd Assertion.

As wild birds, the British birds in the show, and it is these which form the groundwork of most of the diatribes directed against bird-keeping, would be worth a few coppers. Many of them, after being properly tended and cared for during a moult in captivity are worth almost as many sovereigns. £4 was paid for a Bramblefinch during the show, and £2 for a Siskin, and the birds were cheap at the price. These were no fancy prices, for many would have been glad to pay the same amount for the Bramblefinch, and the Siskin was resold at a profit on the same day. Is it within the bounds of reason to suggest that such birds had been cruelly treated? Do they remember anything of the "Joys of Freedom" and "The Blue Canopy of Heaven?" There can be no answer but one, and this is to the utter confusion of all the hysterics launched against our hobby. That the societies are continuing their crusade is evident from recent occurrences. This week a prosecution has been instituted against a long established London bird-dealer, and rumours of further prosecutions are "in the air." The case stands adjourned, so comment must not be made for the present, but it behoves all keepers of bird shops to see not only that their stock is kept under humane and sanitary conditions, but to be prepared with evidence to prove this when confronted with a prosecution instituted upon the information of a paid servant of the professional humanitarians, one who must do something to justify his claim upon a weekly wage.

SHEFFIELD O.S. ANNUAL DINNER.

A Fine Attendance and a Fine Night!

The tit-bit of the birdie world in Sheffield last week was the 2nd annual dinner of the Sheffield O.S., when 91 members, wives and friends partook of the sumptuous repast provided by Messrs. Hudsons, at their Exchange Restaurant, the chairman, Mr. T. Dawn, presiding. Letters of regret at non-attendance were read from Mr. John Robson, London and Mr. J. C. Barnes, Sheffield. Amongst those present we noticed Messrs. Dr. Mylaw, Lane, Rooson, Towers, Hill, Gibbins, Furniss, Davison, Jones, Hobson, [illegible], Tomlinson, Sampson, and many other leading lights of the Fancy in Sheffield and district. The first toast on the list, "King, Queen, and Royal Family," was given by the Chairman. Mr. Low then sang that appropriate song, "Gentlemen, the King," which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The toast, "Sheffield O.S.," was in the hands of Mr. H. H. Towers, Keighley. In his remarks he pointed out the rapid headway the S.O.S. had made since its formation, and was quite sure they could now class themselves as one of the premier societies in England. He was sure they had no equal, in fact, the two lines under the toast: "The second year of life has past; Still making headway very fast," were quite in accordance with the headway made, and if the huge gathering present was anything to go by, they were making headway fast. He also wished to thank the society for altering their show date, and for the support given to the Bradford Cinderella Show. The Yorkshire Fancy was well represented in Sheffield, and they possessed some very good stock. The Sheffield Yorkshires had held their own against the cream of Bradford, and this was a great deal to say, as they at Bradford were of opinion they had the best. He had no doubt we should have as equally good, or even greater support from the Bradford Fanciers as in the past. He could assure them that they had his hearty good wishes for their success in the future.—The Treasurer, Dr. W. Craig, responding on behalf of the society in his usual jovial style, said it was a self-evident fact that our members show, which followed in January, and was a record success in every way, entries were up, receipts were up, support was even greater than ever before at any members' show; if we can achieve such success against adverse conditions, what must we expect when the machinery is tuned to concert pitch, and revolving without the slightest friction. I dare not express an opinion; come and see for yourselves. I can safely venture to say you will not be disappointed. As regards our open show in November, we are going to do what no society has ever done before. As most of you remember, I gave a cup last year for the novice Yorkshire section; I shall not give a cup this year, but an equally valuable and more useful special for the most points in the Novice Yorkshire Section. He was pleased to belong to a society possessing men with such grit and determination as those at the head of the Sheffield O.S. The members ought to be proud of their officials, for they have approved themselves worthy of the confidence placed in them. Dr. Mylaw, in presenting the handsome challenge cups, wished them every success in the future, and said he would always guarantee them his support and patronage. It had not all been smooth sailing with the society, but he sincerely trusted that the stormy days had passed, and that they would now be able to steer a course in calm seas, and always free from storms and trouble. The Norwich cup was the first presented, which was won by Mr. Waters, Dr. [illegible], of Dewsbury, followed with the cup for Crests, Mr. P. Walsh, British (2nd time of winning), and Dr. W. Craig the Yorkshire cup: all these cups have to be won three times, not necessarily in succession. One or two of the winners stated that if they succeeded in winning a cup outright, they would only be too pleased to provide another, so the society would be at no loss. The toast, "Visitors and Kindred Societies," was proposed by the Vice-Chairman, Mr. J. A. T. Woodall, who expressed the pleasure he felt in proposing such a toast. On looking round the table and seeing so many visitors, he considered it the toast of the evening. The Sheffield O.S. had a very great deal to thank the visitors for. It was no doubt due to the splendid support rendered by the public of Sheffield that the society holds the high position it does to-day. We want them with us, he said; want them to visit our shows to see the conditions the birds are kept under, the degree of satisfaction our feathered songsters exhibit, and they will then say to themselves is it true—all this talk of cruelty which the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals puts before us? They can see for themselves that the exhibits at our shows are more cared for than a good many of the poor children in our large towns and cities. A man's birds are his study, his pleasure; for them he denies himself many things, and in a good many cases the birds keep him from surroundings that would not altogether be to his credit.—Mr F. Jones, President Sheffield C.B.S., in responding, said it was indeed very gratifying to see the rapid strides made by the S.O.S., which to a certain extent had been beneficial to all. Competition was a grand thing; it made people take matters seriously, and any laxity was quickly abolished.—The musical programme was in the hands of Mr. Thos. W. Tow, and was thoroughly enjoyed.—A vote of thanks to chairman and artistes concluded one of the best birdie nights ever held in Sheffield.

We have received the balance-sheet of the Sunderland C.B.A., from which we are pleased to note that the balance, £2 11s. 2d., brought forward from last year is increased to a balance in hand of £8 12s. 2d.

I have been elected secretary to the Sandy Lane and Dist. Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. Priestley Drake, 10, Prescott Terrace, Allerton, Bradford, Yorks. All communications should in future be addressed to me.

I wish to thank all those who attended our social and dance, writes Mr. George Broome, sec., Abertillery C.B.S. It proved a fine success and by the way they all looked I took it for granted they all enjoyed themselves.

My win at the Palace is my third 1st prize in the novice section, writes Mr. F. Pepperell (Birmingham). I hope to do as well in champion classes next season. Congratulations on your fine Palace Number.

The monthly meeting of the West Stanley C.B.S., writes Mr. W. Elliott, sec., will not be held on Feb. 22, owing to our neighbours at Beamish having a social on that evening. We wish them a jolly evening.

The Year Book of the L. and P.O.S. is to hand. It contains a list of officers and committee, the rules of the society, syllabus for 1913, a table showing the prize-money paid on the sliding scale, and a list of the members of the society.

I must heartily congratulate you (and Mr. Goodchild) on the admirable presentment of my Aubry's Parrot, which appeared in your fine Palace show issue. Every line is true to nature, and the "tout ensemble" is altogether wonderful.—Rev. G. H. Raynor (Maldon).

We have received a copy of the balance-sheet of the City and Suburban A.C.B., which shows that the cash in hand amounts to £7 6s. 7½d., as against £7 19s. 7d. last year. Besides this, the assets, after allowing for depreciation, are valued at £78 8s. 6d.

I was pleased to see the picture of my Bramble, it having now 44 firsts to its credit, including Palace, Scottish National, City of Glasgow, Glasgow and District, Alnwick, etc. It also won first at the above shows in 1911-12, except Glasgow. I wish Cage Birds every success.—John Sykes (Musselburgh).

I must really thank you for the splendid drawing your artist has made of my yellow Border fancy hen, 1st and special at the Crystal Palace; it is the correct type, and reflects great credit on him. I wish Cage Birds every success. The Palace number was grand.—William Mossie (Annbank).

The balance-sheet of the Bradford National C.B. show in aid of the funds of the Bradford Cinderella Club, shows that the amount handed over to that deserving charity reached the substantial sum of £50, and that there is a balance of £8 15s. 11d. in hand to meet the initial expenses of the 1913 show.

The book of rules of the Hornsey, Wood Green and Dist. C.B.S. is neatly got up. It contains a list of officers and committees, the rules of the society, fixtures for the year, including three shows, and the names of the members. The balance-sheet is a modest one, but shows a satisfactory credit balance of 19s. 7d.

Mr. Wilkins, of Walton, made a very successful debut as an exhibitor at the Aintree Fanciers' Society's recent show, writes a correspondent. He won the 1st special, (presented by Mr. Robinson, fresh from his Palace triumphs) for most points. The number of Norwich Canaries and British showed a vast improvement. Would that the Border fanciers had overcome their shyness!

Liverpool and district fanciers ought not to overlook the fact that a visit to Mr. J. W. Metcalfe's showrooms (68, Brunswick Rd.) is most interesting. Among the unexpected visitors on Saturday night last were Messrs. Battersby, Eaton, and Hales. Cage Birds' illustration of Mr. Metcalfe's Palace diploma winning Norwich was prominently displayed in the shop window, and was inspected by scores of persons.

We are holding our annual tea and social Mar. 1 at Club Room ("Shoulder of Mutton," Girlington), writes Mr. Western, sec. Bradford West C.B.A. We have arranged a splendid programme of good talent, and it is the committee's desire that all members should attend, if possible, to make the evening a success. Tea on table 5.15 prompt. At 2s. 6d. couple. Will those who intend coming please forward their names to sec., The club's prizes will be presented during the evening.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Bernard Gabbitass, secretary Mansfield C.B.S., that I have to announce the death of Mrs. Hare, at the age of 73. She had been always a great help to her husband (Mr. Charles Hare) in looking after the birds. Mr. Hare has been a keen fancier for a great number of years, and I am sure our fellow members will extend their deepest sympathy to him and his family in their sad bereavement.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. W. Elliott, secretary, West Stanley C.B.S., that I have to announce the death of Mr. Peart, the father of our most esteemed treasurer, Mr. R. Peart, whose death occurred very suddenly after a very short illness. I am sure all our members and fanciers of our neighbouring societies will extend their deepest sympathy to Mr. Peart, jun., and family in their sad bereavement.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. A. Hoyle, sec., Musselburgh O.S., that I have to announce the death of a son of Mr. Alex, Fleming, aged three years, after a few days' illness, and I am sure our fellow members and friends will extend their deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Fleming in their sad bereavement.

I got quite a surprise on opening my Cage Birds on Friday to find my White Hedge Sparrow sketched therein. It is a striking likeness, and does your artist credit in catching the characteristic attitude of my bird. I may say he is just under a year old, and when fully adult I expect him to moult snowy white, as some of his flights were knocked out and moulted pure white. I may say I have had several enquiries since the Palace show with a view to purchase.—Dan Hamilton (Hamilton)

The appearance of our winning unflighted marked yellow in the splendid Palace number of your valuable paper, of which we are regular readers, gives us very great pleasure. He has won 1st Plymouth, 2nd Cheltenham, 1st Wimbledon, 1st and bronze medal for second best Norwich, Palace, vhc, L.C.B.A. only times out. We despatched him, with others, to Clapham, but owing to some blunder, he was returned to us without being delivered to the show. We wish Cage Birds every success, which it well deserves.—Gill and Pethick (Plymouth).

In the "Avicultural Magazine," the journal of the Avicultural Society, for February, Mr. H. D. Astley writes of the Mexican Pied Thrush, and Hooded and Golden-shouldered Parrakeets. Mr. Teschemaker gives an account of the singing ability of an aviary-reared Whinchat. Mr F. Finn contributes an article on "Variations in Muscovy Ducks." Mr. T. H. Newman writes of the breeding of the White-throated Pigeon, and Miss Alderson has a most interesting article on "Our Cranes." The rest of the issue is made up of bird notes from the Zoological Gardens by Mr. D. Seth-Smith, Reviews, Correspondence, Notes, etc.

I was surprised to find that I was honoured by Cage Birds with a drawing of my red-collared Whydah, which I think is very good, also the article by Mr. Wesley T. Page. I can add very little to his interesting notes except that these birds enjoy a bath, which is offered every day, and on which I count for keeping my birds in excellent plumage and show form. I also wish to thank you for the excellent coloured plate of Foreign birds given in the birthday number.—J. Chadwick (Bridlington).

Mr. H. Hill, Bradford, asks us to call the attention of members of the Bradford Nat. C.B.S. and the prize distribution committee to the fact that the meetings arranged to take place on Feb. 26 will be held on the following evening, the room being engaged for another purpose on the 26th.

In "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, for February, Mr. Page gives an interesting account of the nesting of the Black-headed Sibia. Mr. E. Hopkinson continues his series "Birds of Gambia." Miss Chawner writes delightfully of the Purple Sunbird. Mr. G. E. Rattigan contributes "Aviary Notes and Episodes, 1912," comprising the breeding of Green Cardinals, Parrot Finches, Cuban Finches, etc. Mr. R. Luggitt recounts the successful rearing of hybrids from the Grey-winged Ousel and the Argentine Blackbird, and Mr. Wesley Page supplements his list of true species which have been bred in captivity with the first instalment of a list of hybrids, British and foreign, which have been bred. Editorial Notes, Correspondence, and a brief report of the foreign birds at the Crystal Palace Show complete an interesting issue.

What About It?

What about a huge show for cage-birds at the forthcoming Liverpool Exhibition? writes "Clear Yorkie." Is any local society moving in this direction?

"Cage Birds" in New Zealand.

I have managed to get up a society at Wanganui since coming to New Zealand, writes Mr A. Malcolmson, late of Glasgow. All our members take Cage Birds.

A White Greenfinch.

I have in my possession a pure white cock Greenfinch, caught a few miles from Wolverhampton, on Feb. 5th, writes Mr. Geo. Osborne (Wolverhampton).

The Abyssinian Lovebird.

In your report of the Palace Show, writes Mr. Wesley T. Page, I am made to say re Abyssinian Lovebirds, "the cock has a rich crimson beak;" it should read crimson crown.

The Future of the Sale O.S.

We understand that Mr. G. F. Hardcastle, the original secretary of the Sale and Dis. C.B.S., has consented to again take the secretaryship, and he sees no reason why this should not be the premier cage-bird society of Cheshire, if the old members will come back to the fold (which is financially sound).

"Cage Birds" at the Ball.

I have much pleasure in informing you that I was awarded first prize as Cage Birds at the Fancy Dress Ball held at East Ham Town Hall on Thursday last, writes Mr. F. C. Ward (Fulham). The birds were much admired, as also were the calendars I distributed. I thank you for your kind help, and will forward you a photograph as soon as they are finished.

Amalgamated Yorkshire Societies Prize Distribution.

May I again remind all fanciers and friends desirous of attending the annual dinner in connection with the above to send in their names to me at the very earliest opportunity, but in no case after March 6, as dinner can be provided only for those notifying before the day mentioned either the sec. or any of the following specialist club secretaries: Messrs. J. Greaves, E. Clegg, R. Garnett, F. Rhodes, J. Lane, and F. Hammond. The following artistes have been engaged for the social: Mr. W. Smith (bass), Mr. M. Speight (tenor), Mr. G. H. Hawley (humorist), Mr. J. E. Priestley (accompanist), along with a "surprise" turn. Dinner will be served punctually at five o'clock on March 8, and the social evening commences at 6.30. Mr. H. H. Towers will again officiate as chairman, and all are looking forward to this year's function eclipsing all previous annual events. A meeting of the Prize Distribution Committee will be held Feb. 27, at 7.15, at the Market Tavern.—H. Hill, sec.

Echoes from the Palace Show.

Captured—but Lost.

The escaped Parrakeet we referred to last week was eventually captured in the monkey house, and duly returned to its owner. Unfortunately, however, it died the day after its arrival.

Quick Work.

We hear that the show manager, Mr. J. W. Ramsden, hopes to have the prize-money sent out this week-end—possibly it will all have been posted before this issue reaches our readers. It is no light task, and he is taking the exhibitors in alphabetical order. The medals and diplomas will be sent out immediately they are received from the makers—probably in from three to four weeks' time.

Unsteady Birds Not Wanted.

Fanciers should use a little discretion with regard to the birds they send to shows. A Cinnamon Lark in the rare-feathered class was so very wild as to be a source of annoyance to both the exhibits near it, and to the visitors. Some of the latter called Mr. Ramsden's attention to the manner in which it was knocking about in its unaccustomed surroundings, and he at once had it removed from the benches.

A S.N.P.C. Breeders' Cup.

After the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club meeting at the Palace, writes "G. G.," I was discussing matters with Mr. F. Cole, and suggested that a cup should be obtained, to be competed for by birds bred by members. Mr. Cole intimated that he would not mind doing a little clerical work for the purpose of obtaining one, if members favoured the idea. Members who are interested might therefore write him, giving their views and promises of support.

The Fog, etc., at Work.

The birds seem to have had good journeys when homeward bound, though all the Isle of Wight exhibits unfortunately were held up at Portsmouth for some little time owing to the dense fog prevailing at the time of their arrival there. Mrs. Tipper, of Mosely, did not receive her birds until the Thursday evening—two days after the close of the show. But they were in excellent condition, having obviously been fed and watered. They went astray on the railway, no doubt.

Corrections in Report.

In the Greenfinch class, the bird referred to at end as being remarkably hot fed, etc., should be 1648 (not 1628). The Ramsden special for hottest-fed Norwich, Mr. Parlett, of Sheffield, writes, was won by his second prize unflighted yellow (not by Mr. Hurst). In the clear or ticked yellow novice Yorks Mr. G. L. Sampson won 5th, not Limbert, as reported; in clear or ticked buff Yorks Mr. F. Dandridge won a "commended," which was omitted from our report. In the foreign section our reporter was made to say that the cock Abyssinian Lovebird has a rich crimson "beak," it should have read "crimson crown."

The Suffragettes' Handiwork.

Although the suffragettes left the birds alone, a raid was made on the local pillar-box, and a number of letters posted by the show manager were very badly damaged by the sulphuric acid which was poured into it, and have been returned to him by the postal authorities. Mr. Ramsden understands, too, that more are to follow. Anyone who should have heard from Mr. Ramsden during the show, but has received no letter, will know the fate of the missive. "J. W. R." showed us a batch of damaged correspondence—in some cases not only was the address rendered undecipherable, but the stamps had been eaten off the envelopes by the acid!

We are pleased to hear from the Hon. Sec., Mr. W. Nichols, that the newly-formed club for Richmond (Surrey) and Dis. is making good progress. Starting on Jan. 9 with a membership of eight, it now numbers over 30. An evening show, with 20 classes, will be held on Feb. 26, particulars of which will be found in the club reports column.

Late Items.

The following items reached us too late to deal with in the usual way. Mr. J. R. Meikle writes asking us to alter the date of the Scottish National C.B.S. meeting from Feb. 22 to March 1. Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. notify a meeting on Feb. 25 at the Reindeer, Rye Lane, show open 9.15 p.m. Glasgow and West of Scotland Club, meeting Feb. 25, at 94, West Regent St., at 8 p.m.; show of pairs.

Owing to severe pressure on our space this week we have been compelled to hold over the publication of the visitors' list at the Palace Show until our next issue.—Editor.

Some Problems of Mule and Hybrid Breeding Unravelled.

A DEEPLY INTERESTING AND INFORMATIVE ARTICLE BY J. STEEL (Dalkeith):

WHAT type of Bullfinch do you prefer for Hybrid breeding?—Much depends on the Finch with which it is proposed to mate her. For Goldfinch, Greenfinch, and Linnet, the northern species, being largest, are the most likely to impart the desirable quality of size to the offspring. While for Redpoll, Twite, or experiments with the Siskin, I should, on the grounds of disparity, favour the British. The hand reared German I have found to be the most reliable breeder, but many of them are far from being robust, a fault which is doubtless responsible for the high percentage of mortalities, both before and after hatching, noticeable in Hybrids bred from them. If the British, I favour the wedge-shaped, or long hen, in preference to the short, thick hen. I can give no reason for such partiality beyond the fact that they seem to be more inclined to breed in captivity. I believe many of those sold as hand-reared Germans are simply finger tame Britishers, and if young and healthy no harm is sustained from the mild deception.

Have you any experience with Canary-Finch Hybrids, i.e., in which the Canary was the male parent?—The few examples I have seen of hybrids so bred, have not impressed me with the advisability of such reversion, being invariably inferior, apart from the increased difficulty of getting a Finch hen to breed with a Canary. Of course, with Canary-Bully we have no alternative, the opposite method having so far resulted in failure.

Why are so many Bullfinch Eggs Unfertile?

Can you explain why, in trying for the Canary-Bullfinch cross, I invariably get unfertile eggs, notwithstanding every indication being favourable to their having been fertilised?

My investigations into this lack of sympathy (so to speak) between the Bullfinch and other members of the Finch family, including the Canary, date prior to the first appearance of the Canary-Bullfinch on the show bench, the possibility of that cross having been demonstrated years previously by the late Mr. J. Noble, of Dalkeith, and verified by a fancier, than whom no man would be less likely to err, Judge Carson. This happening, and the uncertainty which attends the fertilisation of hybrid eggs from the Bullfinch, added to the apparent paradox that, while such may be ensured by using a Lesser Redpoll as the male parent, the possibility of producing the Siskin-Bullfinch remains yet unverified, presents us with what I consider to be the greatest and most important problem of hybridism, and one to which I have given much study in my efforts to provide a solution.

An opinion prevails among breeders that this question has its solution in certain departures discernible during the mating of the Bullfinch with another species, an opinion which I long shared, so I propose dealing with these alleged solutions first, the most prevalent being that the unfertility arises from a difference in the copulative process. That a difference is discernible, I had an opportunity of verifying while watching copulation take place between pure Bullfinches. That the act was more prolonged than in the other Finches I had repeated opportunities of noting, and the question then arose, may this prolongation not be in a degree essential to impregnation?—a question which recurred to me while on another occasion watching a cock Bullfinch trying to effect copulation with a hen Greenfinch with which he was on good terms. Yet I had no difficulty in accounting for his failure, as, though she evinced a desire for his attentions, and he repeatedly responded, the period of concupiscence was too brief for him to effect copulation, and I was not surprised to learn that all eggs from this pair for three seasons had proved unfertile. Anyone who has seen copulation take place between Sparrows will admit that if the prolongation and repetition, which are even more manifest in that species, be essential to fertilisation, we may cease to marvel that all attempts to obtain a cross with a male of any other species have failed.

A LOVER OF THE ROLLER CANARY.

Mr. J. Seddon, of Atherton, Lancs., in his bird-room. He makes all his own cages and has had a good share of success in the hobby.

A breeder with whom I have discussed this subject was so convinced that the infertility arose from such a copulative difference as to say all fertile eggs from the Bullfinch were the result of chance simultaneity. He based his argument on the fact that, though a hen Bullfinch had fertile eggs, this did not favour the assumption that she would have fertile eggs again, even while paired to the same Canary. Another who held similar views instanced a peculiar occurrence in support of this theory, in which a Canary-Bullfinch hybrid was obtained from a Canary, which had invariably failed to fertilise the eggs of its own species, the latter failure being obviously due to defective feet, such difficulty, however, bringing about those conditions favourable to conception with the Bullfinch.

Is Fear a Factor?

Some attribute the infertility to the fear which other members of the Finch family have for the Bullfinch. While I have found the Bully hen less liable to commit "assault and battery" than Greenfinches, I admit that the grimaces in which she is prone to indulge must have a disconcerting effect on a suitor, and a Goldfinch I had which had subdued more than one wicked Greenfinch, never failed to turn a somersault every time a Bullfinch "made a face" at him. My "young hopeful" was sure that his performances were got up for the Bullies' entertainment, and that she was grinning her appreciation! That many unfertile eggs may be attributed to this fear I agree, but we have also an overwhelming majority of unfertile eggs from pairs in which such fear is replaced by real affection, and the claim that Canaries are more timid than Goldfinches, and Redpolls more courageous than Siskins seems rather a feeble argument.

My objection to the copulative theory is based on the fact that fertile eggs frequently result from connections which in no manner differ from that common to the species (Finch or Canary) with which the Bullfinch is mated. My opinion is that the infertility constitutes Nature's manifestation of her abhorrence of a cross between certain species. That this is beyond human understanding I need hardly mention, and the same may be said of the difference in the intensity of such abhorrence. Thus in some crosses it may only reveal itself in the sterility of the hybrid offspring (such sterility coming also under the category of inexplicable phenomena), and in others in a more or less nullifying effect on any attempts to impregnate in the first cross.

BIRD KEEPING IN A NORTHERN AVIARY.

The Interesting Experiences of a Lady Bird-lover in the North of Scotland.

BEING always very much interested in reading other people's experiences with their aviaries which appear from time to time in CAGE BIRDS, I have thought of writing down a few of my own, in the hope that they may likewise be of interest. I had the aviary put up in June, 1911, and so last year was the first whole year that I had had an aviary of my own in this country. To describe it to begin with: There is a wooden shelter-house, 9ft. by 4½ by 7½ high at entrance, sloping back to 5 at far end, lighted by large skylight and window. This has a door leading into the flight, but this I never shut save to enable me to catch a bird inside. The flight is 14½ x 11½ x 6½ feet high, and is all open ½in. mesh netting. The whole is painted green, and is well protected by shrubs.

Over one end, and extending for about a yard and a-half over the top, I keep a green weather-proof tarpaulin, which shelters the birds on windy days, and under which they nearly all roost. I find very few roost in the house, although in very bad weather they use it in the daytime, and I keep the seed inside in winter to encourage them to go in. During the winter I have a piece of jute hessian tacked on the outside of the back of the flight, to protect the birds from the north wind, which is very piercing, even through the shrubs.

Points in which the Bullfinch Excels.

I have kept birds for a long time—although not in an aviary—my favourites for some years back being Bullfinches. I do not think any species can beat them for tameness and confidence, if trouble is taken with them when young. The cock Bullfinch which I have in my aviary now is one which I bought over 7 years ago in nestling plumage. He is still in the best of health and plumage, and readily comes on to my hand in the aviary to feed. Six summers ago I kept him with a hand-reared hen in a large box cage, 64 inches long, in which I placed two small shrubs in pots. They had already paired and nested (before being placed in this large cage) in an ordinary breeding cage, but as we were moving at the time the eggs were not incubated. On being turned into the large cage, however, the hen built a nest on one of the pots, in which she laid 4 eggs, and sat her full time. The young died in the shell.

She went to work again and built a very good nest, this time in one of the shrubs, as she was meant to do. She laid 5 eggs, and hatched one bird which both parents fed assiduously for ten days, and then they deserted it, much to my disappointment. I did not realise it soon enough to save it, or I might have managed to rear it or put it in some nest out of doors. The hen laid two more clutches after that, but did not sit them out. She laid in all 26 eggs that season, with both the first and last of which she was badly egg-bound. To my knowledge quite half of these eggs were fertile, including the whole of the last clutch. She became impatient with these and broke them up. This was in August.

Later on—in winter, indeed—I foolishly enough let the couple fly out of the window, thinking they would return in the evening when hungry, as they were accustomed to flying about the room every day. When evening came the cock went into a cage at once when I went up to him, but the hen had flown to the top of a very high beech tree, and though she answered the cock when he called, she did not come down. That night came hard frost, and a fall of snow, and I never saw her nor heard of her again. I have often regretted her.

What Happened in the Far East.

To account for my action in letting the pair out for a fly in the open, I may say that I once took a pair out east with me. I kept them for a few months in an ordinary breeding cage and used to let them out for a fly now and again. They never went far from the bungalow, and always came back to their cage when hungry. I must say, however, that I was not given to letting the two out together often. but I had no hesitation in letting out one at a time—and they did so enjoy it. Later on I kept them in an outdoor aviary (the regular temperature of which must have averaged 78 deg.) along with such things as Grey and White Java Sparrows and various Munias (Mannikins), natives of the country. One unfortunate day I imprisoned our pet Mynah in the aviary (probably I was driven to desperation by his repeated attacks on the butter or the fruit on the dining-room table), but alas! he retaliated by killing my dear cock Bullie. The hen lived for several years, though not in my possession, as I gave her away when I came home. She was killed by a Hawk, much to the grief of her then owner.

But this is a diversion, and I must return to my present-day aviary, and the cock Bullfinch which I originally bred with in the cage 6 summers ago. Since that I have tried him with Canary hens, but have hitherto been most unfortunate, as the hens have always proved failures. The first Canary I tried he paired up with and became most devoted to; but the summer was well nigh wasted before I discovered that the hen was really barren. She built nests and sat on them, but nothing further happened. One day I got two nearly fledged Greenfinches and put them in her nest to see what she would do, and both she and the Bullie were delighted, and fed them diligently! I did not leave them long, however; I was leaving home, so I put them back in their own nest. I got another Canary hen for the Bullfinch, but he would have nothing to do with her that year.

A Love Affair 'twixt Goldie and Bullie.

I will skip a year or two and come to the spring of 1912. I started in my aviary with the above-noted cock Bullfinch and two hens, one cock Goldie (a dear little chap with no tail), 3 Twite-Canary hybrids of my own breeding (all cocks), one cock Linnet, one Redpoll hen, two or three hen Canaries, one pair Spice Birds, one cock Zebra Finch, and one pair Ribbon Finches. The Zebra Finch has been in the aviary for over 16 months, and has never cast a feather to my knowledge. I caged up one of the hen Bullies with the cock Linnet, thinking the two hens would fight if left at large when pairing time came. Later on I noticed that the Goldfinch, who was now in full song, seemed to be following all over the place the hen Bullfinch which was at liberty, and singing at her, and he kept on driving the cock Bullie away whenever he ventured to her side. I also observed that she did not seem to mind this, but on the other hand looked rather pleased.

A Great Disappointment.

The cock Bullie, after repeated attempts to attract her, gave her up as a bad job, and began to make up to the one that was caged in the shelter. Seeing this, I thought the best plan was to catch him and take him out of the aviary, which I did, and placed him in a very large cage in my bedroom, in which there was a sib-bred Norwich hen Canary. That afternoon I saw them quarrelling, and I thought to myself, we are in for a period of unrest. What, therefore, was my surprise the very next morning on beholding the Bullie feeding the Canary. I thought at first that I must be mistaken, but subsequent watching proved them to be genuinely friendly, and very soon the hen built a nest and was about to lay when, alas! she died of egg-binding, and nothing I could do would save her. It was a great disappointment.

I had to give him another Canary hen after that, which had already had three nests with a cock Canary. She took a long time to pair up with the Bullfinch, and in the end nothing came of it. This year I intend to start him fairly with a really healthy young hen Canary which has been wintered out of doors. I fancy it may be his last attempt, as he is getting on in years now.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

[For Rules see page 138 last week.]

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

A NON-BREEDER (Tubley).—Considering the bird's previous history, I would advise you to discard her allogether for stock purposes, unless there is some particular inducement, apart from mere size, to continue attempts to breed from her, such, for instance, as super-excellence of type, quality, colour, and markings. It is doubtful if she will ever do you any good at all. If you wish to persevere longer with her, turn her into a large aviary if possible, and limit the quantity as well as the quality of her diet, giving only a small teaspoonful of solid food per day, and plenty of green food.

A WHEEZY COUGH (J.C.)—Keep the bird in a fairly comfortable temperature for a week—not necessarily very warm, nor yet quite cold, and in addition to the usual seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and springled with maw seed, every second day for a week. On the alternating days, add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuhana wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. Continue treatment, if necessary, for a fortnight.

PLUCKS HIS FEATHERS (C.I.C.).—Examine the bird to see if it is troubled with grey lice, and the cage, especially in any cracks or joints, to see if red mites are in evidence. In either case eradicate these pests, as frequently described in these replics the last few weeks. Give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of scalded rape and either a morsel of banana, or a spray of green food—dandelion for preference, if obtainable. On the alternate days give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, dusted with flour of sulphur, and finally sprinkled with maw seed. A mealworm a day, if available, would also be beneficial. In the drinking water add as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece, and the same quantity of sulphate of soda every second day for a week. Continue the above dietary for a mouth.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A BREEDING TRIO (Taffy).—Yes, as you intend running two hens and one cock together in a large cage, you should leave the three together permanently for the remainder of the season, after mating them at the proper time. There will be no necessity to remove the cock whilst the hens are sitting, and he will doubtless share in the task of rearing the young. Put in four nests, and do not hang one materially higher than the rest. It will be advisable to remove the young as soon as they are well able to feed themselves, to prevent their disturbing the hens with their second nests.

IS IT TOO SOON? (Gould).—Certainly, it is quite a month too early to mate birds yet. Still, there are many who take a premature plunge in spite of all advice to the contrary, and though the bulk regret doing so in the end, there are a few fortunate ones, who get through all right. Let us hope you will be one of the lucky ones. If the birds show signs of beginning to nest you had best let things take their course now, and aim at keeping the birds in a fairly comfortable temperature, and as free as possible from sudden and extreme fluctuations.

EXCESSIVE LOOSENESS (T.S.).—Are you giving any green food or fruit of any kind? If so, stop it for a time. See that the seed and water vessels are quite clean, and the water itself pure and fresh, and keep cage and perches as clean as possible. In addition to the staple diet give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts rape, hemp, teazle, and maw every second day for a week, and on the alternate days a morsel of bread and milk dusted over with carbonate of bismuth. If this does not stop the looseness in a few days, add six drops of tincture of gentian, and three of tincture of opium to the water daily, until the droppings become of a normal consistency.

BAD FOOT (A.H.).—When the wound next breaks out well bathe foot and leg for a few minutes daily in a warm solution of Wych Hazel—a small teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water—and cleanse the wound of any pus as thoroughly as possible, without pressure. Dry gently, and anoint with lanocyllin. When wound is quite clean, dry with boracic powder, but continue the bathing in the solution, using it cold now, until the swollen veins have subsided. Add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece to the water every second day for a week, and give a fair proportion of green food in the dietary. Keep cage floor well strewn with pine sawdust to absorb moisture from droppings as quickly as possible, and keep perches as clean as possible.

A DIFFERENT BIRD (H.L.H.).—Thanks for your letter. It is always interesting to learn result of treatment. Am glad the bird is so much better. You may continue to give a little of the paste previously advised in the wires for bird to peck at for a few weeks longer, if necessary. Stop it when the voice is strong and clear. The song will undoubtedly gain rapidly in volume and quantity now the bird has made a start.

AN EARLY STARTER (F.E.N.).—By the time the eggs are hatched the daylight will be nicely "drawing out." But still, if the hen will feed by artificial light, it will be a good plan to place a light near the cage for an hour or two early mornings and in the evenings until the young are beginning to fledge, as you propose doing. The chief point, however, will be to protect the birds from feeling the effects of very cold snaps of weather. See reply to "Gould."

A SIX-YEAR-OLD WHEEZER (L.M.N.).—My advice is to drop the idea of breeding with the bird altogether. Its progeny, if it had any, would in all probability, be a source of endless trouble and anxiety to you in future seasons. Get a vigorous 1912 bred cock in good song to replace him. If you wish to try any treatment follow advice given in last issue to "W.P." and let the staple diet be plain canary only, with a pinch of rape given separately every second day.

MATE FOR DARK CREST (S. Goodyear).—Yes, if suited in other features, such as size, substance, shape, and quality, and length of feather, the yellow Crestbred hen would make a suitable mate for the clear body buff dark Crested cock. These features are indeed of even greater importance than colour and marking if you wish to breed good typical Crests and Cresthreds. The hen should have as long, broad, and profuse head feather as possible; a good broad and nicely arched skull, and a short stout beak. All these are essential points in a good stock bird.

RESULT OF CROSS (Lyndhurst).—No, if a Norwich of good type is mated to a Lancashire, and the progeny from this pair of the opposite sex mated back to the Norwich parents, the produce of this second mating will not be birds of the true Norwich type. A small proportion of them might possibly be of fair type, but even this is a rather doubtful speculation. The bulk of them would still be a decidedly bad type of Norwich, and such faults as drop-tail, flat skull, eyebrows and too much feather would not be wanting among them. It would probably take you three or four seasons to breed out the faults such a cross would introduce. You should find plenty of suitable material for improving size in the pure Norwich, without resorting to an outside cross.

BEST FOOD (Thos. Gandion).—I take it you mean the best for rearing young, and in these days with so many to choose from, and each claimed to be the best, it must be rather invidious to single out one. The old-fashioned fresh hard boiled egg and twice its bulk of bread crumb is still, however, very hard to beat. The bread crumb may be substituted by an equal quantity of crushed plain biscuits—Osborne, Arrowroot, or Maizena—if one prefers doing so; and for fickle feeders, one-half bread crumb and one-half crushed sponge cake may be used. One or other of these foods, if not actually the very best, is, at least, not easily equalled. For a full list of other foods, and details which cannot be given here, see "Our Canaries," Part V., or "Canary Breeding for Beginners," mentioned in inset advert.

SEX AND PREPARING FOR BREEDING (H.L.W.).—(1) For an inexperienced novice like yourself, there is no really reliable way of distinguishing the sex of a given bird save by its song, which should be loud, full, and rendered in fairly long unbroken trills, quite distinct from the more or less sustained twittering of some hens. When singing the throat should be inflated and throb very plainly. You will find more detailed instructions in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which you should obtain before the season begins. (2) To prepare for breeding, in addition to the staple of plain canary give, separately, every second day, half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a similar quantity of egg food or crushed sponge cake sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, and on the alternate days give the same quantity of the seed mixture advised "Novice" on Feb. 8th, and one or two crisp young leaves of dandelion. Mate birds at end of March or first week in April, if both are in good forward condition, and the cock singing well.

SONG "ON TAP" (Very Anxious).—It requires a little management to get birds to sing freely at a particular time and place, and you will always find a few shy singers which will not be induced to sing much, if at all, during a few hours' visit to a strange place. In your case, to get a fair amount of song on Saturdays, you should cover over the cages of the birds you wish for that day all day on the previous Thursday, except for a couple of hours in the evening. On the Friday uncover them for two or three hours in the early morning and again in the evening, keeping them covered during the rest of the day. On each of these days give each bird a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and black rape, with a slight sprinkling of mustard seed, and a small spray of watercress or a crisp young dandelion leaf. On the Saturday morning uncover the cages for two hours before breakfast, and give birds a small teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake well sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed. Then cover over again and keep covered until ready to take them to market. Give only the ordinary seed when taking them on this journey, and at the market shield the birds by a sheet of canvas, or something similar, or arrange the cages in such a way as to shield the birds from the main distractions of traffic, etc. This should bring about the effect you desire.

VARIED (Crest).—(1) Continue the spare diet for a few weeks longer, and now that green food will be getting more abundant, limit the seed diet more stringently, and give a more liberal allowance of greenstuff. Do not return them to aviary until they are well reduced in body. Upon the whole, I think you would do well not to return them to aviary unless you can reduce the dietary offered to its inmates. Dot not mate them for about another month. (2) Only patience, gentleness, and tactful treatment. Let the wild unsteady birds see that your attention to the cages means the appearance of some especial dainty which they never get enough of to satisfy them. To avoid putting hand in cage when cleaning, you should get a narrow scraper and brush with long handles to pass in through the slot where the front of sand-drawer fits. You can get these from any large dealer for a few pence. (3) I do not approve of removing cock permanently when the first egg is laid. It would answer all right in some cases, but it would fail in many more. (4) For ordinary use, when giving only pure plain water, zinc drinkers are perfectly harmless. It is only when adding drugs and chemicals to the water as medicines that they are apt to become very dangerous.

CROSS-WINGED YORKSHIRE (A Novice).—If you can easily obtain another suitable cock without this fault, it is, of course, unwise to breed with this one. If, however, you were compelled to use this one, there is no reason why you should not get some young with much better wing carriage than the parent, providing the hens are both suited to him for correcting this defect. Let them have well-braced wings, carried neatly and well against the sides, and the tips just meeting, or not quite meeting, over base of tail. Neither of the parents of the hens should have had this defect, and you will find your most suitable material among moderate-sized birds rather than very long ones.

CRESTED YORKSHIRE (Enquirer).—(1) There is no recognised variety of Crested Yorkshire, and your bird is doubtless either a sport from some previous cross, or perhaps a small slim coppy. Crested specimens were not unknown in the early stages of evolution of the breed, as was to be expected when it is remembered that the Lancashire and Belgian both played a large part in making the breed, and of these the Lancashire was cultivated with a crest, and in its most flourishing days the Belgian was also found with a crest, but the crest was not cultivated. I do not think your bird is of any particular value. A crested variety of Yorkshire might certainly be evolved by grafting, as it were, the crest from the Crested Canary, but the fact that the primitive crest was weeded out so thoroughly points to the fact that Yorkshire fanciers did not want such a variety. And, indeed, a decent crest would ill-become the slender, aristocratic Yorkshire. (2) This question scarcely admits of a definite reply. An ordinary breeding cage might be put outdoors and termed a small flight, or one might even reduce this to get the "smallest possible outdoor flight." Looking at the question from a hygienic standpoint, if you are about making an outdoor flight you should consider the average number of birds you wish to keep, and then allow one square foot of floor space for each bird.

NIGER OR INGA (Arthur).—This is one and the same seed, which custom has endowed with two names, both of which are largely employed. I am quite aware that there are diametrically opposed opinions concerning its value for feeding birds—the late Dr. W. T. Greene even went so far as to call it poison and the writer of the paragraph you enclose is evidently one of these "whole hoggers." In my opinion such statements can only arise from ignorance, or, perhaps, an indiscreet and injudicious use of the seed. It is the abuse, and not the use, of niger that is harmful to birds. Used in moderation as an ingredient in a seed mixture for occasional use it is not only quite harmless, but highly beneficial, and acts as a natural and mild stimulent, or pick-me-up, and appetiser. A pinch given to hens two or three times a week during the early spring is also an excellent preventive of egg-binding with the first round of eggs. If used in any considerable proportion as part of the regular diet, the birds, being excessively partial to it, would be apt to subsist almost exclusively upon it for a time, and waste the other seeds, and in that case it might easily prove harmful, but even then would not be any more harmful than the same proportion of hemp given in the same unwise manner.

GREY MITES (M.L.B.).—These insects are grey lice and are quite distinct from mites. For details of manner of eradicating them, see reply to "Tom" last week. They not infrequently attack weakly birds, on which they are parasitic, but I cannot give you the reason for their existence—I fail to see any reason myself.

SWELLING ON BACK (W.G.C.).—You should have sent a rough sketch showing approximately the position of the swelling, which, from your remarks, I imagine is on the shoulder, and not the back. From your description it appears to be a small encysted tumour, which could doubtless be quite easily removed by a simple operation. If the bird is a valuable one, ask a veterinary to remove it. Amateur attempts at surgery I cannot recommend, especially in the case of valuable birds, although, of course, the commonest specimen deserves the same consideration as its more valued cousin.

ARE THEY COCKS? (W. G. G., Grantham).—It is quite possible for the two birds which have begun to warble now they are caged separately are cocks. Keeping them caged together for the winter would have the effect of keeping them out of song until too late. If they are really cocks they will develop their song very quickly now, and probably be in good song by the time this appears. Give a small teaspoonful of egg food sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure every second day, and a pinch of mixed seed on the alternate days. This will soon bring them out.

MOULTING AND PANTING (B.F.).—You have probably moved bird to a box cage too late—the mischief may be done now. Keep bird now in a comfortable temperature, quite free from cold draughts, and impure heated air. Give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of scalded rape and a morsel of banana or dandelion leaf, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of mixed seed. Add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day until the feathers cease dropping. If panting does not cease by that time treat for a week or two as advised to "Hawarden" last week.

YOUNG BIRD PANTING (J. C.).—Continue the course of treatment you have begun for two or three weeks, and if the bird shows distinct signs of improvement go on with it as long as seems necessary. On the other hand, if there is no progress under that treatment, give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw and a morsel of banana or green food. In the drinking water add 20 drops of the following mixture, which any chemist will mix for you, every second day for a fortnight. Mixture: Two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of ipecac. wine and chlorodyne, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. See that the bird is kept quite free from cold draughts and heated impure air.

WASTED EGG FOOD (M. G. C.).—When only one or two pairs of birds have to be catered for, the best way to prevent excessive waste of egg food is to arrange, if possible, to get a supply of common Bantam or Pigeon eggs, and use the yolk only. One Pigeon egg would serve two pairs of birds with broods of young very nicely for one day, and there would be no waste—except perhaps a little when the broods were very young, which could be very largely prevented by using a smaller proportion of bread or biscuit, and yet quite enough for the actual needs of the birds. This I have proved by practical tests. You might make a large Bantam's, or very small fowl's, egg serve for two days by removing only half the shell the first day, then cutting the egg in half with a clean cut, and burying the one half with the shell still on it, in finely ground meal—oatmeal, for instance and using the yolk from this the next day. This method is practically safe, but still more risky than using a fresh pigeon's egg each day. As a substitution for egg food, see reply to "A. H." last week, and mix together a quarter-pound of desiccated egg yolk, and three-quarters of a pound of maizena wafer biscuits, finely crushed, and keep stored in a tin. Take the required quantity for use at each "meal," and slightly moisten with a drop or two of water. Yes, a bird hatched last July will be fit for breeding at the beginning of April. I would not advise mating it earlier if you can avoid it.

A GIDDY SCION (Constant Reader).—The bird was, I think, simply overdone in getting it into condition for the show. The way you say it behaves is just what one might expect of a rather highly-strung bird in too high condition. As you say, the bird seems in the pink of condition. I do not suppose it betrays any physical defect which would warrant you in discarding it for breeding, and if there were any latent defect it could only be suspected by an intimate knowledge of its ancestry. Even then it would not be safe to say the bird had inherited any such defect as long as it remained in sound health and condition. Thus you see in purchasing a bird for stock in the way you did, you can only take it on health matters, at its face value, so to speak. I see no reason why you should not breed with him. The peculiar behaviour will soon pass off if you put the bird on a diet of plain canary for a few days, with a liberal supply of green food, and add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the water every second day for a week.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

LARK FOOD (H. Bromley).—The Lark food seems to be very good of its kind. In use it should be varied with the food recommended in the reply given "B.H." this week (or even used mixed amongst it).

THE TINIEST WALKER (Coopers Arms).—The smallest British bird that walks is generally held to be the Yellow Wagtail.

BUFF OR YELLOW (Enquirer).—A buff hen can most certainly be used for dark Mule breeding; why not? A good thick-set yellow is better, of course, because the progeny are likely to be better in colour—such hens, however, are difficult to lay hands on, except at long prices. A big buff hen, of good quality and colour, often throws grand Mules.

SEXING A THRUSH (P. F.).—The only reliable method of sexing a Song Thrush is by the song. I should think your bird a cock, kept back from singing by its low condition. If in a cold room now, change its cage into a warm corner of a heated living room; this should have the desired effect. Get a bottle of Parrish's chemical food from a chemist and mix nine or ten drops daily amongst its soft-food, keeping this up for at least a fortnight, and then continue giving it for another fortnight on alternate days. By the way, you give me very few helpful particulars, and say nothing as to how you are feeding the bird.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

"FEEDING UP" A GOLDFINCH (E. W. J.).—I dealt at length with this question a week or so ago, and, of course, cannot possibly keep repeating the same answer. Look up your back numbers. The "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch also gives full information on the point. Your present method of feeding is fairly good. Egg-food is not necessary. As your bird is so steady, and is singing so well, I should think him certain to turn out a good breeder.

REARING AND FEEDING A STARLING (M.H.).—You want to get "Nutshell" booklet No. 26 (only 2½d. post free), in which you will find full particulars concerning the feeding of the Starling and the hand-rearing of the young.

A SEED MIXTURE (F. Wood).—The seed mixture is very comprehensive, and should answer well. The only change I advise is the leaving out of the niger and the increase of the teazle to two pints. Niger is not good for all birds as a regular item in the diet. I presume you know that seed-mixtures are very wasteful in aviaries? Where the aviary is of any size, it is by far the more economical to give the principal seeds in separate vessels.

VALUE OF HYBRIDS (T.H.N.K.).—Your question is an awkward one to answer, as genuine Chaffinch-Bullfinch and Chaffinch-Canary hybrids have never been seen as yet on the show-bench—so far as my own opinion goes, that is. I can only say that if cock birds and in good condition, their value could hardly be less than £10, and might easily be more, this depending upon how many specimens were in existence at the time. The Greenfinch-Chaffinch hybrid at present doing so much winning was sold on the show-bench for £10, being claimed at catalogue price by me.

A TRIO (Early Bird).—(1) I have never heard of them being dangerous. (2) I answered a question about sexing Redpolls only last week. I should say your moulted bird is a cock (haven't you heard it sing?), and if the field-plumaged bird shows any trace of red on the breast it is a sure cock. (3) Feed Redpolls as advised "A. T. Penny" last week. Greenfinches, ditto, except that one pint of sunflower seed should be added to the stock seed mixture. Don't forget the green food for this latter bird, when obtainable untouched by frost, especially the early seeding groundsel tops. You would find the "Nutshells" on Redpolls and Greenfinches exceedingly helpful.

PLUMAGE OF LINNET MULES (Mrs. Maunsell yre).—I do not find anything out of the ordinary i the description of your dark Linnet Mules. They lways resemble, in the main, their father in colour, he cocks usually showing only a faint yellowish flush t the throat and on the breast, this, of course, eing less pronounced in buffs than in jonques. I m speaking of non-coloured Mules. What the lule fancier you refer to considers "most unusual" am at a loss to imagine.

LARK CAGES AND FOOD (H.R.).—The door at he end of the "runner" type of cage is very handy hen changing a bird from one cage to another, also hen inserting a turf, as the bird can retire to the ar end of the cage, and there is little danger of it ccidentally getting out—of course, I am assuming hat a good sized "runner" is indicated (18ins. is ery fair), not the cramped little things one sometimes sees. If protection of the end be desired, hen a removable cover is easily contrived. I do not hink much of the food sample you send; the base ooks more like very fine sawdust than good nourishing meal. Try the following recipe: Crushed "Melox" (or any similar high-class dog meal) 6 arts, meat meal 2 parts, ground silkworm pupæ and good ants' eggs 1 part each. Moisten with hot water; add vegetable ingredients frequently; give seed separately (mainly canary, crushed hemp, oarse oatmeal, and maw).

A QUARTETTE (J.E.W.).—(1) Follow the method advised an enquirer on the Linnet last week (note reply to A. I. Penny); it applies precisely to a Lesser Redpoll. (2) The brand you mention is very expensive in actual use, though, of course, very good. Go to a high-class paint (oil and colour) shop and ask for a few pounds—I don't know, of course, exactly how much you require—of washable sanitary distemper. You will find it perfectly satisfactory. There are many good brands—"Duresco" is one of them. I must candidly say that I do not think any of them stand much washing. (3) Half-inch mesh wire netting is the best, and keeps out mice. The same remark applies to wire fronts. If the aviary is to be double-netted (always the best) it is cheaper to use half-inch mesh for the inner, and three-quarter (or five-eight) mesh for the outer, and equally efficacious. (4) It is not a recipe given by me, but is very good, I should think, and I should not hesitate to utilise it.

A HYBRID AVIARY (H. A. J.).—(1) I do not know anything about the composition of colour-washes. You should go to a good paint-shop and get 2 or 3 lbs. of washable sanitary distemper (or "water-paint"). It is the best covering for aviaries (equally good for cages), can be obtained in any desired shade—I recommend very light blue—does not rub off, keeps down parasites, is harmless to the birds, and is inexpensive. (2) It is not desirable, strictly speaking, but usually matters very little, much, however, depending on the size of the aviary. I knew of an instance (to give you an example) where one hen Bullfinch was in a smallish aviary with four cocks. One of the cocks, by virtue of his strong right arm, so to speak, won the hen to wife, and then proceeded to render his possible rivals as little attractive as possible by stripping them of their plumage. I shall never forget the sorry sight they looked when the owner of the aviary called me in to explain the mystery of their lost clothing. (3) Try Goldfinch, Siskin, Greenfinch, Redpoll, Linnet, Twite, Chaffinch, and Yellowhammer (the two latter are doubtful hybrid breeders, but well worth trying). (4) All the hardy evergreens are useful—privet, holly, rhododendron, ivy, laurel, fir, euonymus, etc. Bundles of loosely arranged pea-sticks, fir branches, and the like, are also very much favoured. Note the article dealing with an aviary in this issue.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

ZEBRA FINCHES (P. A. Rainbird).—You should have given size of your cage, then I could have given you a more helpful reply; large or small are merely comparative, and give no information. According to space you can keep Cutthroats, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Silverbills, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Common and Green Avadavats, Golden-breasted and Orange-cheeked Waxbills with your Zebra Finches, and if space and other accommodation is sufficient, most of them should breed.

PARRAKEETS AND FINCHES (Querist, F.P.C.).—(1) In an aviary this size, once the small birds had got accustomed to the large birds in their midst, I do not think you need fear actual damage to the other birds, but the Rosellas would be a disturbing influence; they would nibble nests and nest receptacle, and thus scare sitting birds off their eggs, and lessen your breeding results: also would play havoc with any growing trees or bushes the aviary contained. (2) There would be no risk in such an aviary, but I must warn you I have watched a Budgerigar commence at the bottom of the stem of a living gooseberry bush and nip every leaf off to the top (not eating a single leaf), then pass to the next stem and do likewise—quite too much method about them for the lover of a natural aviary. (3) I have kept Black, Blue, Archbishop and Maroon Tanagers with Finches, Buntings, etc., in natural aviary with plenty of cover, and had no trouble with them; in fact, in a roomy aviary the full range of dietary is an advantage, and neither hard nor soft bills take harm from helping themselves to what is to hand. The Scarlet Tanager has proved aggressive in many aviaries, and the Black also sometimes, but I have kept those named above for several years, as stated.

GOULDIAN FINCHES (Gould).—In various aviaries, if there were records, you would hear of Gouldians nesting almost all the year round, but the more usual period is late spring and right through the summer up to the moult. It will be better to defer pairing the birds till next month. The instance you refer to from "B.N." refers to a pair which had been out of doors the previous year, and would be already paired when brought in. Re the bird in bad feather, you must continue to treat it as per earlier reply, and as soon as the weather permits, give it almost outdoor treatment, and let it have a supply of seeding (flowering) grass twice daily. If you have an aviary, turning it out of doors in mid-May should effect a cure. Only really perfect and healthy birds should be put up for breeding, or both parents, and any progeny there may be, suffer. Give your breeding pair as large a cage as your convenience permits.

COCKATOO AND BUDGERIGARS (K.K.).—I am afraid scattering the food out of the tin to get at the favourite items in a vice most of the Parrot tribe are heir to, and it cannot be entirely checked. Diet: Seed mixture—one quart each canary, white millet and oats; one pint each maize, sunflower, paddy rice and hemp; half-pint nuts and a handful of chilies; well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply such ripe fruit and green food as it will take; it can also have stale crusts and plain biscuit—grit, cuttlebone and water must be regularly supplied. Re Budgerigars, put up the husks or barrels at the end of the month, you need not interfere with them as Budgerigars keep their house (nesting apartment) very clean.

EGYPTIAN QUAIL (G. Platt).—Yes, but usually are rather wild when first obtained, and it is better to cut one wing a little before turning them into the aviary, to prevent their bashing their heads against top of aviary. The wing feathers need not be cut again afterwards. They soon settle down and scuttle away to cover when disturbed, instead of rising. There should be some grass in the aviary in irregular tussocks, to induce them to nest. For obvious reasons I cannot recommend individual traders, but an inquiry to the principal dealers, or an advert., would soon procure you a pair—often offered as low as 2s. 6d. a pair. They are brought over in quantities alive for table use. I am assuming that you refer to the migratory Quail (Coturnix coturnix).

COMMENCING AN AVIARY (W. H. B.).—I should put in another pair of Budgerigars, and pairs each of Rosella Parrakeets, Cockatiels, Black-checked and Madagascar Lovebirds, which will about fill you up. I do not advise keeping Parrakeets and Finches together, and in a moderate-sized aviary do not advise you to attempt it. I should use gravel for the floors and sprinkle it with gritty sand regularly. Fruit tree branches are always safe, and are excellent for the purpose. You can also use branches of fir trees, hazel, beech, chestnut, etc.

BREEDING BUDGERIGARS (O. B.).—(1) This is really a matter for yourself; usually two pairs together settle down to nesting quicker than do a single pair kept separately, but single pairs in cages will ultimately do so. (2) I am ignorant; I do not know the dimensions of a Quaker oat box. For two pairs you must give a fair space, as there must be room to hang up four husks, each of which should be one foot distant from the other husks. I consider a minimum for two pairs should be 3ft. long, 1½ft. deep, and 2ft. high. Why not have a small aviary even in a small back yard? Your birds will be more prolific and healthy than indoors in cages. If you send me a rough plan per Editor of your back premises, I shall be pleased to advise you what to do. It will cost no more than a number of cages, while the cleaning and attendance will not be a tithe of that required by birds in cages. (3) If you sell them yourself, see our advertisement columns, which will give you present price, and you should obtain this; but if you sell wholesale, then about half the price. Get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars."

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

RED-RUMPS, ROSELLAS, AND FINCHES (A. S. E.).—Redrumps and Rosellas do not always agree together, and it is always more or less dangerous to keep either large or small Parrakeets with Finches. Of course, if the aviary is a large one, there will only be occasional mishap, but if space is at all restricted, mishaps among the Finches may be fairly numerous. Red Rosellas would be the safest; these and Cockatiels are about the most harmless species I know of for your purpose, and if they are not crowded you should be fairly safe. It will be when you have young ones that the main risk will come in, and you must watch them closely at that period. Even Budgerigars are not safe with Finches when the former become at all numerous. Parrakeets take some time to settle down to nesting, and when you buy a pair which have nested, you may have to wait a year or even two for them to settle down; moreover, Parrots and Parrakeets mature slowly, and young birds would certainly take one or two years to settle down and mature.

GREY PARROT (S.H.).—I really cannot give you a satisfactory reply from the details you supply. Unless it is really an overgrowth of beak, an accident or some tumour must have pushed one of the mandibles on one side; if it is the former the overgrown portions must be trimmed to normal size and shape, and if it is the latter only a vet. can tell you whether anything can be done for it. If it is a case of only trimming the beak you had better get some experienced fancier or a vet. to trim it for you; there are veins in the mandibles which if cut into bleed rather badly, but you are safe if you do not cut back beyond normal size. Of course, if there has been an accident or tumour and the vet. says nothing can be done to put it straight, then it is kinder to have it painlessly destroyed than to leave it to slowly starve and waste away. While in a tender state, boiled maize pulped may be given, also stale bread into which about 20 drops of hypo-phosphates have been allowed to soak, then thoroughly moisten with boiling water; the bird should be able to eat this, also banana, while it is under treatment.

JAVA SPARROWS NOT BATHING (W. E. R.).—The better bath would be of the type which can be hung over the open cage door, and I advise you to get one of these; you need be under no misconception on this matter; as soon as they feels equal to it, the Javas will take their "tub," and no half one either. But I rather doubt their using a small round vessel; they need a shallow dish, such as they can stand and splash about in and if you procure one of those referred to above, they can do this without materially damping the interior of the cage. Yes, they should breed, hang up in one of the back corners of the cage, right against the top, a chip Hartz travelling cage, after removing all fittings and perches, and cut away two of the bars for the birds to get in and out by. Supply hay and green grass stems as nesting material, a little of which may be pushed into the little nest cage, and more strewn about cage bottom.

SHELL GRAVEL (E. A. B.N.).—I have used similar shell gravel for a long period without mishap, but any good sharp sand—river sand, etc., which is mostly minute pebbles—will answer the purpose, and the crushed shells of eggs from your table will be beneficial to the birds—the shell gravel which is condemned is similar to that which is strewn over the surface of park and garden paths. Any of our large advertisers would send you a peck or bushel of gravel without shell (as aforementioned, this should consist mainly of minute pebbles), or, if you live in the country there is plenty of good, well-washed gritty sand to be got from the gutterways of lanes, or the bed of some shallow-running stream or spring.

BUDGERIGAR AVIARY (Enquirer).—(1) Give the largest space your means and space will permit. You must, of course, have a shelter for them as well as the flight. It is rather difficult to answer you as you give me no idea of how many you wish to keep. I cannot conceive an aviary being of much use less than 10ft. by 6ft. by 5ft. or 6ft. high; 6ft. of the roof to be boards and felt, and the other part half-inch mesh wire netting; 6ft. of the front and the one end also to be netting, the other 4ft. of front and end (under boarded roof) to be felt and boards, with a square of glass in the end as window. Budgies need good wing exercise to keep them fit, and as they do not bathe in the ordinary manner there should be a small portion, as above, which is open to rain, this part to be planted with grass, cereals, and any herbage the birds will let grow. In such an aviary you could have 3 pairs Budgies, 1 pair Cockatiels, 1 pair each Madagascar and Blue-wing Lovebirds. If you are tied for space, make it one-third smaller. (2) Nest-boxes must have concave bottoms or half the eggs will be spoiled, and either coco-nut husks or small barrels make the best nest receptacles for these birds

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

J. Seddon.—Thanks for the photograph, which we will publish in due course.

W. H. Hamlyn.—We will endeavour to deal with your nest in our next issue.

C. I. Young.—Thanks for the photo, which shall be reproduced in due course.

A Member.—These matters of a few shillings difference in the balance sheet are surely best brought up and thrashed out at the meetings of the society. They are of practically no public interest, and we are very pressed for space at the moment.

Miss Bidwell. — Your question will be found answered by Mr. St. John in the query pages this week.

A. E. Fenn.—We think your eye deceives you. The birds on the plate were only 6¼ inches long, whereas the standard length of the exhibition Yorkshire is 6¾ inches. We will undertake to say that Mr. Kiesel's first prize White Canary exceeds, if anything, 6¼ inches in length. Of course, the so-called Border type of White Canary is smaller, we freely admit.

J. Loveday.—We have previously dealt with this idea.

W. Dunlop.—Thanks for your contribution, which we shall hope to utilise in a week or so.

Joe West.—Your letter is libellous, as surely you must know. How would you prove your allegations if we published it and an action at law were commenced against you? How did the other fanciers get their information? Did the owner tell them he had obtained the birds "on hire," or did the dealer let them know that he had sent them "on hire?" We notice that this kind of allegation generally rests upon what "somebody else" says.

Lover of Justice.—We are quite sure that amateurs generally do not endorse your views that "injustice is quite common at local shows." Be a sportsman.

The Date of the Palace Show.

An Alteration for 1914.

Sir,—I find that it will be impossible to alter the date to Wednesday to Saturday, as the railway companies refuse to handle the birds on the Sunday. It is proposed, therefore, to alter the days to Thursday to Monday; this should meet the wishes of those living in towns or districts where early closing is in force on the Thursday. The birds will have a day's rest on the Sunday, and will be returned at the usual time on Monday evening.

Nantwich Show Report.

Alleged Errors in the Catalogue.

Sir,—Your report of Nantwich show in your last issue credits me with 1, 2, and 3 in the Norwich class; this is incorrect, as I only had one entry in this class, which was awarded 2nd; also in the Yorks class I am reported as being 3, vhc, and hc; this again is incorrect, as I had no entry in Yorks. I find, on referring to the catalogue, that it is no error on the part of your representative, but in the compiling of the catalogue. Why my name should be attached to these entries—especially in the Yorks., where I had no entry—I cannot understand. Perhaps the secretary will kindly say to whom these awards rightly belong.

The Scottish National C.B.S. New Year Show.

Sir,—It is now some considerable time since this society held their annual show, and up till time of writing (Feb. 17th) I have not received a balance sheet. Seeing that the annual general meeting should be held on the last Saturday of February, namely the 22nd, I should like to know when same is to be issued (if not out before this appears in print)? Are we to receive same so as to give it a little consideration previous to the meeting, or is it to be as in the year when an official issued the balance-sheet in the middle of the week and called the general meeting on the Saturday of the same week? That treatment was spoken against at the meeting so I hope present secretary will not do likewise. The last balance-sheet, issued by the late secretary (Mr. Watson) if I remember right, was issued on 6th, and meeting on 24th. I thought this year great things were to be done.

Sir,—I promised to give my ideas on the above subject. Before doing so, I would like to say that I noticed in your last issue of Cage Birds, a letter from "Lover of Justice." He has unmasked himself by the tone of his letter. I am afraid he has been connected in a clique about Dysart, hence his screaming for justice. But I am glad to see he has come to himself and put on a brave heart to show his old friends he can do without them. I can't blame "Clique" judging alone for short entries. Committees are more to blame. They appoint many times the wrong party for a secretary. Now a secretary is the mainspring of the committee, and he has often to work "on his own"—he can't always be calling a meeting of committee. Should the business come off, it is all right; if not, then he gets abused. To make a good secretary you must get a man with good business ability and tact, and one who commands the confidence of the Fancy. To prevent "clique" judging, there is only one remedy I can see, and that is double judging. It might cost a little more to have two judges, but it would be made up by a larger entry. The Scotch Fancies are always double judged. I think the B.F.C. Club might take notice how their medals are awarded. I think they are a very listless body; you never hear of them. Why don't they have a club show along with the Scottish National at the New Year holiday, when every fancier would see the best birds judged according to merit?

Wm. M. Hastings.

Sir,—It is amusing to read these jealous epistles from various correspondents who can see no other cause for short entries at our shows than clique judges. "Lover of Justice" wants a boycott of all the leading Scottish judges who through his imagination run in a clique. He wants judges who may make a mistake, yet assures us we will get justice, as it will be their "honest opinion." How shall we know it is, should we see an inferior bird sitting first? Now, by his way of reasoning it could only be a "mistake" should any of the present so-called "clique" win! There would be no mistake should this gentleman, who claims to love justice, win and win often. It was hard lines that he suffered so badly this last year with Borders, even at his own little show. Let me say to "Breeder of Even marks" that I am certain that if all fanciers of the wee gems visited the shows as little as he has done, or exhibited as few birds, there would shortly be no shows in Scotland. Let me also say that there has always been a "clique" (in his opinion) when he could not get a ticket. No committee ever did give encouragement to those outsiders he refers to, unless through specials. I am amused at his remarks. Why do they trot out such paltry excuses? he asks, viz. your bird crosses its wings, drops it tail, etc., to sensible men—men who know a bird as well as they do. All his experience has been gained at small club shows, and he could never see a Border worth £1 and as yet he has never purchased one at even the half of a £1. Does a sensible man expect a bird to win in open competition that crosses its wings, drops its tail, etc.? Surely not. I am pleased to agree with your correspondent "Disgusted" that he has had good cause to be so since he has tried all makes of cages, imitated all spars, drinkers, etc., with very little recompense for this trouble in seeking to win by imitation of others. He may yet see it is better to have better birds and a uniform cage. The very doubtful test "Disgusted" refers to was not mentioned with the view of increasing entries at our shows—to be brief, it is simply disgusting. I am pleased to see Mr. Logan drawn out, his withdrawals of most of his former statements, and his admission that he is the "Fortune Teller." But even with this ability he is guessing wrong this time, as I never had a conversation about "clique" judges with him in all my life. He gives me credit of winning a 2nd in a classe of five entries. Previously he declared he accepted my first entry. Now he is "not aware I had started Plainheads." It is nineteen years since I started this variety, James. Knowing you as I do, with all the success you have had, and further, deserve, I truly believe there is not one of the few judges you would try to damage, but won more prizes before officiating as a judge than you are likely to do in a life-time. I have noticed for about the time you refer to, viz., two years, that you have been annoyed at some of your neighbouring fanciers, with a shorter experience than you, because they are reaping their just reward, and long may they bring honour to Fife. I am very sorry to hear of the disappointment of Mr. Hastings, but say to him that I have no desire to burden the Fancy with my troubles, but to point out a few troubles of the Fancy that I know are imposed at some shows on other good fanciers less able to bear them than I am in many ways. But I will with patience wait on the promised ideas of Mr. Hastings, and hope they will help to increase the entries at our Scottish shows. As you know, sir, bare insinuations or outbursts of imagination are no argument. I am pleased your correspondents all admit the supposed "clique" is a small one. I also believe that fanciers such as your correspondents are very few. And neither the alleged clique nor the clique-makers would be much missed.

Plainhead.

Sir,—With reference to Messrs. Godley's and Nason's letters: Notwithstanding the fact that the closing date was well advertised these gentlemen sent their entries late. Mr. Godley's arrived on the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 28th, while your representative was going through the catalogue, which was then completed and numbered. Your representative will be able to corroborate this. Mr. Nason's entries were posted in Northampton on Tuesday, 28th, at 3 p.m. I hold the envelope to prove this. I was, with very great regret, compelled to return the entries of eight would-be exhibitors. Their entry fees, with one exception, would have been extra profit to the show. I had to supply the Press representative of the Crystal Palace with a full summary of the entries on the 28th, so that preliminary notices could be sent to the Press; also supply the railway companies with a copy of the index on the 29th, so that they could make suitable arrangements for the carriage of the birds. After numbering entry forms and posting tickets, I was under contract to hand the catalogue to the printer at 9 a.m. Monday, Feb. 3. Considering that there were 2,468 entries to deal with, there was no time to spare, I mention these facts simply to satisfy your correspondents that I did not deal harshly with them. I might add that I expressed regret, etc., when returning the entries. Mr. Nason's subscription was returned. It seemed to me so much like sharp practice to stick to the subscription and return the entrance fees, that I returned the remittance as received.

Proposed C.B.S. for Redcar and District, Yorks.

Sir,—It has been suggested by several local fanciers that a society should be formed as above. Will all those who are willing to join such a society, or help toward same in any way, please let me have their names and addresses as early as possible, so that a meeting can be called and officials elected. I think there is plenty of room for a society here, and there is no reason why it should not prove successful. Hoping you will insert this in your esteemed journal, which I think is the best means by which fanciers can be informed.

Prize-money at Liverpool (Anfield, Everton) Show.

Sir,—I am not one to grumble about my prize money when a show is hit, but as you published a letter from the secretary of the above society that the show was a great success, I think it's time to ask for my prize money. I entered three birds at 1s. 6d. each entry. I got two firsts and one second prizes, which entitled me to 22s. 6d. Imagine my surprise to receive on Feb. 1 the sum of 3s. 2d. for the two firsts and one second prizes. The secretary sent a note (which I enclose) saying I was to be paid out on members' sliding scale. It does not state in schedule that prize-money would be paid out on sliding scale, so I think I am entitled to my full money after paying open entry fee. If this letter should catch the eye of any of the committee will they please explain. Also has anybody else been paid out on sliding scale?

R. E. Griffith.

A Novice's Good Progress in Four Years.

Sir,—I was pleased to see you had honoured my yellow cock by placing a sketch of same on the front of yur valuable paper. One of the most gratifying features about it is that it has been bred by myself. I may say he has not had many chances of showing himself, except at members' shows. All the same he has won 8 firsts in these classes, second at Sale, and fifth at the Palace, 1913, and now a 1st at the Palace, 1913. Seeing that I got a first and a fifth at the Palace last year I think I am doing very well, as I have only been in the hobby four years. But who can go wrong when we have such a splendid paper as Cage Birds to fall back on, and also have the help of such splendid fanciers as we have in Manchester? I may say it has alway been my ambition since I started in the Fancy to gain both a novice and an open medal at the Palace; so I hope, with a little luck, to try for the greater honour next year? I cannot close my letter without thanking your artist on his work, and also for the splendid plates he gives us from time to time. I am sure the latest of them, "The White Canary," is a masterpiece.

The Keeping and Feeding of Goldfinches.

Sir,—I have read "Goldfinch Fancier's" letter in this week's Cage Birds, and no doubt he is referring to my letter of some time ago as to how I feed my Finches. A few years ago I was at a loss to understand why my birds would not live. I was treating them with mixed seeds. I was told by a very old fancier that I had better not be so kind to my birds, that I was feeding them far too well, and that death was the result of this so-called kindness. This seemed strange to me. At the time I was suffering from a bad attack of indigestion, and I was told by the doctor to eat plain food and drink no alcohol. I found by this treatment that I was feeling better; too many kinds of food were harmful to me. This told me that too many kinds of seed must be harmful to my birds; why not try them on a plain diet? I did so, and I have been most pleased to this day. I now have very little trouble with them. I wish to say that I collect wild seeds in season, and now and again I give them a feed. I use rain water when I can get it fresh, and supply it in glass fountains (zinc is dangerous). Hundreds of our pets die yearly with indigestion brought on by over feeding. Take the Siskin, he is a gorger; give him mixed seed and he will pick out all hemp, and in a cage he will soon die. I have a pair in my aviary; they get canary seed only, and I have had them three years. I have Goldfinches, Bullfinches, Linnets, Redpolls and Norwich Canaries in my garden aviary, 12x8, with house attached. I breed in cages in the house, and it is seldom I get a dead bird. If one should go thick I bring him indoors and give a pinch of salts in the water, or one drop of oil, and take away the dry seed and scald canary and German rape seeds and well dry before giving to bird (fresh every day). Then when you see the bird showing signs of recovery, give wild seeds free from dirt, and your birds will soon be ready for the plain diet again. I have had fanciers tell me that you cannot get your bird into show condition by feeding on plain seed. I wish all to understand this is not so, for I have shown all over England and Scotland and have done well. I do not agree with artificial heat. I have seen good birds at shows on the second day without a card and was at a loss to understand why. On enquiring I have been told that while judging these birds were "thick." Taken from a warm room and put into cold railway vans, the birds get chilled, and the poor judge gets called over the coals when he has only done his duty, for we all know that a "thick" bird is a poor specimen.

F. Balcombe.

Sir,—Seeing in your valuable paper, Cage Birds, that a fancier wants to know how to keep Goldfinches, I may ask him what kind of cage does he keep them in? The best cage is a stock cage. In a wild state the Goldfinch feeds principally upon the seeds of the thistle, dandelion, button weed, plantain, teazle, groundsel, grass, etc. In captivity its staple food should consist of hemp, linseed, teazle, canary and maw seeds. The Goldfinch is a bird that requires considerable change of diet; also never forget to give him plenty of clean water. This fancier would know how to keep the Goldfinch by getting the "British Bird Manual" from Cage Birds (post free 1s. 1d. I have a Goldfinch, and find no trouble to keep him in good health. I give him green food, but do not give him too much rich seed, such as hemp and linseed, which makes him go light (thin).

Scotch Fancies at the Ulster O.A. (Belfast) Show.

Sir,—I had no intention of entering into a correspondence on the above subject, as at the annual meeting of the above association it seemed to be a sore point with some present, and for peace sake I took no part in the controversy, but seeing your correspondent, Mr. Wm. H. Gillespie (at one time a very prominent member of the Scotch Fancy fraternity) has taken up the cudgels on behalf of his favourite, perhaps I may be allowed to contribute a share to the subject in question. The only reason for my doing so is that your correspondent's figures and statements are a mass of inaccuracies. His first objection is to the statement of your reporter (whoever he was) as to the Scotch Fancy section always being a loss. Well, in my humble opinion, if your reporter did not make a bull's-eye, he certainly scored an inner. In the first instance, Mr. Gillespie stated the Scotch Fancy were up 22 on the previous year's show. He didn't tell your readers that an additional class (Selling) was added, containing 10 entries. These classes I intend leaving out as they don't materially affect the issue, or, if so, it would be to the advantage of the Norwich section. His next objection is to the statement of your reporter affecting the specials placed on the Scotch Fancy section. Perhaps he will tell me if 12 classes get 15 specials, how many should 21 classes get? This is a sum in simple proportion, and can easily be arrived at. He also states that amongst these specials were two given by a club run by Scotch Fancy men, and all the others, he believes, were allocated by admirers of the Bird of Circle. Both statements I emphatically deny, as the club he refers to contains Norwich breeders also, and I question whether amongst the twelve donors even half of them definitely placed their specials where stated. He omits to tell us that two specials are also allocated by a club where Norwich and Yorkshires are the only breeds the members fancy. I now come to his financial statements, in which he has got utterly befogged. (These were dealt with by other correspondents last week—Editor). If I am wrong, I am open to correction. He might perhaps answer this very pertinent question: Seeing there was a loss of 6s. on his eleven classes and a fee of £2 2s. had to be paid for a judge (who also judged British) where does the profit come in? According to my catalogue, there are fifty-eight members, and out of these there are twenty-nine Norwich men, leaving the balance to be divided between Yorks., British, etc. Mr. Gillespie charges your reporter with unfairness towards the "Bird of Circle," and goes on to state that the pioneers of the Fancy were Scotch Fancy men. I grant him that, and if they had the power to-day, as then, the Norwich Canary would take a back seat. Even to-day they cannot speak of them without a sneer, and stigmatise them as "White Mice." I cannot see the logic of Mr. Gillespie that because the Scotch Fancy ran the shows in the days of our grandfathers, they should still be allowed to rule the roost.

Walkden Roller Society.

Sir,—A meeting will be held in connection with the above society on Tuesday next at 7.30 at the Stocks Hotel, Assembly Rooms, all who propose to join, and also all fanciers interested will be welcome to the meeting. Full particulars from—

HY. HOWARTH, Sec. (pro. tem.),

The Thirsk and District C.B.S.

Sir,—It would be interesting to know what has become of this society. It is common knowledge that a committee was appointed and a set of rules drawn up, but since that time nothing more has been heard of it by many of the committee, though rumour is current that the society has fallen through. What is the secretary doing in the matter? Surely the committee have a right to know.

INTERESTED.

The Date of Alnwick Show.

Sir,—I see that other societies are encroaching on our date, Nov. 12, which I think is very hard, especially when they ask other secretaries to note and not clash. I think it is about time something was done to put a stop to this sort of work, as about five years ago in the Cage Bird Union days, we had to stand by for South Shields, and take the second Wednesday in November. This we have stuck to ever since, and now, because we have held some very successful shows that week, both South Shields and Blaydon want it for theirs; why don't they stick to their old dates, as others do?

The Southern Norwich P.C. £10 10s. Challenge Cup.

Sir,—In the report of the annual meeting of the S.N.P.C., which appears in this week's CAGE BIRDS, Mr. Baker stated that the conditions under which the £10 10s. cup had been competed for could not be altered until it was won outright. Now I would like Mr. Baker to state through your valuable paper, for the information of all members of the S.N.P.C., what is the exact position of the £10 10s. cup to-day? If what Mr. Baker states is legally correct, that the rules under which the cup is once competed for cannot be altered until the cup is won outright, then I maintain that the rules which were made and printed in the S.N.P.C. rule book for 1908-9 are binding, and the alterations that have been made since are not legal. Mr. Baker held the same position in the S.N.P.C. in 1908-9 as he did on Feb. 8th, 1913.

Rollers at the International Exhibition.

Why were some of the birds poor?

Sir,—According to the eminent German judge at the above show, some of our birds are of very poor quality. I can't see why this should be. The situation is this: There have been for a great many years hundreds of thousands of German Canaries imported into this country besides those brought over privately. We have paid top prices for these birds, allowed them to teach us the song of the pure Roller, and now, after all these years of hard work and immense trouble, we are told we don't know the song of the bird we are cultivating. It is quite true we don't know the song as it is being sung at the present time from a German standpoint. The song is being altered too much by the German experts for us English to keep up with the times. There is only one cure for this complaint, and it is this: Now that we have their best birds and I say we have their best strains, we ought to lay down a standard of our own, and ignore the changing of the song, and the introduction of bad tours. (I will not have the Glucken Tour in my birds at any price, it is too desperately near a chop for my liking), and get back some of the rising and falling warbling water tours that used to be a feature of the Trute bird of years ago. Now we will take the birds on their merits, and see whether the British amateurs and novices know anything about the song of the Roller. In the International Team Class where four birds formed a team, the points registered were 105 won by Mr. Kremner with what I take the cream of German birds. In the amateur class for single birds won by Britishers the first four birds total 100 points. In the novice section the first four birds totalled 97 points, only eight points short of the International 1st prize team class, this team being beaten by the Britishers in the champion any age class where they totalled 112 points for the first four birds. The above facts should need some explaining, seeing that some of the latter exhibitors had to be told a Schnatter from a Water Roll. The German songster is getting too much of a bandmaster for my liking, the piccolo, flute, and bell notes being used too much to the detriment of other good tours that used to be a feature of this sweet singing bird. We are trying to start a club at Leigh, so Mr. Macallister, the former energetic secretary of the Leigh Linnet Club, tells me, and fanciers wishing to join in this district should send their names to Harry Brown, Globe Inn, Bradshawgate, Leigh, and we will see what can be done. Hoping that fanciers will have a successful breeding season.

The Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—"Semper Idem's" letter on the above was really amusing, but why he should reply I fail to see. A Roller in a shutter-cage at his own society's show is about the height of his ambition, and so far as exhibiting at outside shows, he has yet to make his debut. I'll lift my hat to "Semper Idem," or any member of Holywood C.B.S., who can say he has exhibited a bird in open competition at Holywood show. As for fixing the date of their show, "Semper Idem" intimates they are fixing it to suit themselves and not exhibitors. Let's hope they get the support they deserve. In reference to the delay in the return of Mr. Morgan's birds from Holywood show, I think the secretary certainly should have given some explanation and not left "Semper Idem" (who is not now in secretarial harness) to attempt it. "Semper Idem," says Mr. Morgan, never complained to "us." I think it immaterial. He has complained through the columns of our valuable journal, CAGE BIRDS. If he had written to the secretary, perhaps he would have been answered by "Semper Idem," who evidently runs the show.

WIDE AWAKE.

Arranging Perches in Box Cages.

Sir,—In reply to Miss Ruby, as regards arranging perches in box cages, I find the best way is to have three perches in each cage, and the seed-box and drinking fountain outside. My birds' feet are always clean as they do not get on the floor of cage to eat or drink but stand on the front perch. The way I do it is to have two perches on the cross-bar, a suitable distance from the sides of the cage, and running from front to back and a perch running lengthways from side to side, opposite the seed and drinking holes, and one inch and a half away from the front (bottom rail).

R. HAKESLEY.

Sir,—In reply to Miss S. G. Ruby's letter in your issue of the 15th inst., I beg to describe my own method of keeping birds' feet clean in box cages. In each cage a cross bar (or perch) is placed from right to left to enable the bird to feed and drink. This is placed level with the feeder and drinker about an inch or half from the front of the cage. The perches from front to back are placed immediately above this, but I fix on the top of each piece of bent wire, the ends of which are driven into the top of the perch, and this will prevent the bird from resting on that part of the perch. I use pitch pine sawdust, and my birds seldom have dirty or soiled feet, but, of course, in each cage a dish of gritty sand is placed exactly in the centre between the perches. I believe in keeping perches low, not only for Crests but for Yorkshires, as this prevents the latter from "stooping." Besides, I think it is quite a mistake to allow the birds to "jump" from high perches. In fact, I know from experience they often hurt and sometimes damage their feet by so doing. If Miss Ruby would adopt the cross bar perch, wire on the other perches, and sawdust as suggested, she will have very little trouble with birds having dirty feet. New clean sawdust and a fresh supply of sand (with powdered egg shells on the surface of same) once a week is quite often enough in my opinion for cleaning cages. After drawing the tray I find a goose wing very useful to clean out the waste sawdust from the corners, and the birds are not unnecessarily disturbed.

The Great Tit as a Cannibal.

Sir,—I see your correspondent, Mr. A. F. Bell, makes a charge of cannibalism against the Great-Tit, in the issue of the 15th inst., of your valuable paper. I had the same thing told me at the Palace show, while I had my eyes fixed on the only Great-Tit there. I told my informer that I had kept and sold Tits for the past 20 years, and only once did I find a Great-Tit making a meal of another Tit. The same informer told me that Robins were unlucky to keep, and Sparrows would die if caged. If the same food as mentioned by your subscriber be used in the aviaries, and plenty of it, then there will not be any lust for blood or brains by the Great-Tit.

OKEYH.

Lancashires at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—I should be very much obliged if you would allow me a little space in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, to ask Mr. John Robson his reason for putting the buff Plainhead in class 46, number 553, "h.c." The same bird has only been beaten once, and that was at Rochdale by Mr. Barrass' buff Plainhead. It stood first this season under Mr. Robson at the Horticultural Hall, and last year he gave it the diploma. I also stood 2nd at this last show with a yellow Plainhead; but I notice in CAGE BIRDS that all the first four birds in this class were yellows, so where do the buffs come in when in a mixed class? I can safely say that my father and I are no novices, when he has kept this variety for forty years without a break. I show all in my name, because I can get about better than him; but still, he is my tutor. I can safely say that when the birds went away they looked "in the pink," and also when they returned home. I have been asked several times which bird it was that stood h.c., and how it was, but I can't answer; so I would like Mr. Robson to do so for me through CAGE BIRDS.

GEORGE FITTON.

The Norwich Plainhead Club Competitions.

Sir,—I noticed a letter last week in regard to the N.P.C. special winners by a person who signed himself "A Member." In regards to the winners, their names were put in CAGE BIRDS, and the number of points they scored throughout the show season. If he will go back to December he will find it. I see in his letter he states that he heard a report about Mr. Davies asking, what became of the novices after they got three firsts? It was not Mr. Davies who asked the question. It is all very well for members to find fault with the secretaries; there is a saying that all secretaries should be thick-skinned, and if we had to take notice of every member we should not know whether we stood on our feet or our heads.

F. CUNLIFFE, Sec.

Sir,—In your issue of Feb. 15th under the above heading, "Member" gives the N.P.C. a suggestion for amateur classes. If "Member" will look up the back numbers of CAGE BIRDS I think he will find a list of winners of the N.P.C. specials for the last show season. "Member" goes on to say that Mr. Davis asked at the N.P.C. dinner what becomes of the novices. It was not Mr. Davis that asked the above question; it was a representative of the press, when replying to the toast of the press. Had he been a member of the club, he would not need to have asked what became of the novices, simply because there are only two grades in the N.P.C., viz., amateur and champion. If "Member" will look up his last year book he will find a good number of past amateurs winning in the champion classes of last season. Then "Member" seems to get his back up about the well-lined pockets. It has been a good thing for not a few of the members of the N.P.C. that there are a few well-lined pockets in the Fancy. Yes, "Member," it is a well-known fact that a good many exhibitors run away to some show when they think, as he says, "Messrs. Champion and Co." will not be there. He is expecting to have it all his own way, but, alas! his hopes are shattered. He finds others at the same game, and his birds are not quite good enough. Then his sword's unsheathed and he rushes at the man who has a good team and says, away with you, I want my turn. Have patience "Member," and your turn will come; all the good birds are not in the hands of one man. I agree with "Member" that the classification is a large one—too large for most societies to take on—and the committee have evidence of this year after year, and I may tell "Member" it is a tough job sometimes to get the five shows in. Then he comes on to the natural colour classes. Again I agree. I say sweep the lot off. They are no good, and do not pay, and the N.P.C. have no right to expect societies to give classes that do not pay. "Member" is expecting a host of the "pros." on his track. Don't be alarmed; I don't think they will attack you vindictively. I hope "Member's" letter will be the means of getting the classification of the N.P.C. shows serious consideration, with a view to making the patronage more acceptable to societies. "Member" may not be aware that some three years ago there was a loud cry for the amateurs to be represented on the N.P.C. Committee, so that they could look to the interests of the amateur classes, etc. Each year since then there have been elected three amateurs on the committee. We expect in a short time to be voting for a new committee. "Member" will then have a chance, when he receives his voting paper, to see how those amateur committee-men have attended to their duties in looking after the interests of amateur members of the N.P.C.

OLD PRO.

Catching Birds at Night.

Sir,—As no one has given "Old Reader" any advice upon how to catch Linnets at night in hedges, etc., perhaps my advice will not be out of place. "Old Reader" must select a dark night for the purpose, approach the spot very quietly, and open his bird batting net to the full extent. He must have two others besides himself, one to shine the gas lamp in the net, while the others must be on the opposite side of the hedge with a long pole, and beat the bush, gently at first, or he will disturb the whole lot. I have been several times myself but have had disappointment on every occasion, catching perhaps four or five. I am always pleased when my mates come round to ask me if I am going out, though we have tramped miles sometimes and have only brought home a few birds. I shall be pleased to answer any questions "Old Reader" likes to ask me, and shall be pleased to hear how he has got on since he started.

SOUTH SOMERSET.

New Society for Glasgow: The North West C.B.C.

Sir,—A meeting was held in Blythswood Halls, 236, Great Western Road, on Feb. 13, for the purpose of starting a new Cage Bird Club. There was a fair turn out of fanciers, over 20 being present, Mr. Phillips, in the chair, said he thought that there was room for such a club in the north western district; a show of hands was asked from those in favour of having a club, and all present were unanimous, so decided to have same. The club to be called "North West Glasgow Cage Bird Club," and catering for all varieties. The following office bearers were then elected:—President, Mr. Phillips; vice-presidents, Messrs. P. Houston, E. Taylor; sec. and trea., Wm. Loan, 101, Kirkland Street; committee, Messrs. Thom, Gibb, Findlay, Pollock, Brown, Paterson, Graham; auditors, A. Crawford, A. Wilson. During the evening 28 members were accepted, and as several other fanciers, unable to attend, sent applications for membership, we have made a fair start. Next meeting will be held on Friday, Feb. 28, at 8 p.m., in above named halls, and we shall be glad to welcome any other fanciers who would like to become members.

The Date of Hartlepools Show.

Sir,—I noticed in last week's CAGE BIRDS, letters about the date of Hartlepool show, and our members consider it very unfair for them to accept that date for their show when they know that there are two shows on the same date, close together. How can shows be made to pay if they keep altering their dates like this and claiming other shows dates? I might say this has been our show date since the commencement of our society seven years ago, and we intend to still keep this date.

J. H. ELWELL.
Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.S.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Elwell, the Hartlepools Society are not to blame for the date upon which they are holding their show. It was allotted them by the North Yorkshire and South Durham Federation of C.B.S. I do not want the members of Old Shildon Society to think I am dictating to them what to do; far from it, but I am sure if Old Shildon care to join the Federation they will have a date that will suit them, and I could almost assure them they would double their entries. If my memory carries me right, I believe they have had two open shows, and the first was held on Darlington and Blackhill's date, all three shows being only a few miles apart, so we all make mistakes sometimes. I hope the members of the Old Shildon Society will take this answer in the good spirit that it is given.

DUBMIRE C.B.S. (Fence House.

Very successful table show held Feb. 8, in the large room above the Britannia Hotel—a place well adapted for a show, every comfort being provided for the welfare of the birds. Five classes were provided, and these brought forth an entry of fifty-one, which may be considered very satisfactory. Quality was well to the fore, each class containing birds of outstanding merit, the Norwich class in particular being a stormer. The show was splendidly managed by a grand body of fanciers, headed by the genial and hard-working chairman, Mr. J. Fenton, who was well supported by a fine committee, consisting of Mr. G. Lynn, treas., and Messrs. W. Holton, R. Liddle, W. Hedley, W. Finlay, R. H. Dixon, M. Dixon, J. Atkinson, D. Hann, L. Moffatt, F. Bilton, R. Gowland, and M. Bissett. In Mr. Barrass Robinson the society possesses a very capable and efficient sec., who gets through his duties in grand order, and for the show under notice his arrangements were again complete, everything passing off without the slightest hitch. The show was well patronised during the afternoon and evening, and we understand will prove a financial success. Mr. W. Reid, Sunderland, judged.

DARVEL C.B.C.

Monthly meeting Feb. 11. Mr. N. Hopkins in the chair. The attendance of the members up till the present at these meetings has been very encouraging, and it is hoped this enthusiasm augurs well for the future prosperity of this newly-formed C.B.C. The Secretary read over a list of rules, which he had drawn up for the government of the Club, and these, with a few alterations and additions, were approved of. The following members, along with the office bearers, were appointed a committee for the management of club affairs:—Messrs. H. Allan, J. Brown, J. Morton, J. Bennet, W. Murdoch, A. Beaton. The first three are appointed for two years, and the last three for one year; but all shall be eligible for re-election. Mr. D. Hopkins tabled a motion for consideration at next meeting that we hold a club show. It was left in the hands of the committee to arrange one or two rambles during the summer months. Table show as arranged was then proceeded with, Messrs. J. Morton and N. Hopkins placing the awards. The most interesting class was that provided for Hybrid or Muling pairs. Six members, with a total entry of thirteen pairs, competed in this class. GREENF.: 1, Hopkins; 2 4, Morton; 3, Robertson. VARIETY, BRIT.: 1, 2, 4, Anderson; 3, Murdoch. FOR.: 1, 2, 4, Robertson; 3, Murdoch. HYB. or MULING PAIRS: 1, Robertson; 2, Allan; 3, Murdoch; 4, Hopkins. Robertson, Sec.

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

A Very Successful Concert.

First annual Bohemian concert held in the Library Hall, Church Street, February 8th, and proved a successful and very enjoyable entertainment. In spite of the fact of the date being the Saturday of the National Bird Show at the Crystal Palace, the hall was well filled with an appreciative audience. One regretted the fact that Mr. Raymond Green, M.P., was unable to be present, but in his absence the Society's genial chairman, Mr. G. Mortlock presided, and during the interval distributed the various cups and trophies won by successful members. In a short speech he invited anyone who had the care and welfare of our feathered friends at heart to join the Society, which he considered was one of the finest in the Fancy. The entertainment was left in the capable hands of Mr. "Archie Boyd" (better known to the Society as Mr. H. R. Mortlock), to whom the Society's thanks are largely due. Miss Winifred Timms gave skilful renderings of "My Dear Soul" and "Il Bacio," and Miss May Caley proved equally acceptable in other encored items. Mr. Algernon Fox mystified his audience with some exceedingly clever conjuring, and, later, gave some skilful impersonations with the aid of a piece of felt, viz., Chapeaugraphy. Mr. Gilbert Chester scored heavily with his humorous songs at the piano, being repeatedly encored, and Mr. Percy Mortlock also hit the taste with some fine renderings of "The Blue Dragoons," "Bashful Tom," and other baritone items. Mr. Egbert Hayden had to respond to encores for a series of enjoyable tenor songs. Mr. Herbert Purcell also held the company with his songs. "The Sea Road." and "The Voice of the Storm," and Mr. Archie Boyd caused considerable amusement with various numerous items, which were emphatically encored. There was all through the evening an inviting air of joviality, and the Society may well pride itself upon the undoubted success of this function, which we can only hope will be repeated at an early date. The proceedings terminated with the singing of the National Anthem.

PARTICK C.B.C.

Held their second annual Burns' night in the Bank Restaurant, Queen Street, on January 28, Mr. Fraser presiding over a large turnout of fanciers and friends. Mr. Sinclair led off with a tune on the bagpipes, which seemed to be very much enjoyed by all present. We then tackled on to our Haggis and Tatties, which everyone seemed to relish by the look of their faces. Mr. Park proposed the Royal Family, Navy, and Army, the company singing "Rule, Britannia." Mr. Sinclair suitably replied. Mr. Muir proposed Partick Club. Mr. Maxwell replying to same. A vote of thanks to our visitors, proposed by Mr. Laidlaw, seconded by Mr. McCullock, Mr. McCraig responded. Mr. Park proposed the immortal memory of our National Bard, Burns, the company drinking to his memory in silence. The following artistes contributed to a delightful programme of music and song:—Jolly Jumbo (comedian), Mr. Glennie (actor), Mr. Fallon (baritone), Mr. Nisbet (pianist). Songs were sung by the following gentlemen:—Messrs. Laidlow, Muir, McCullock, Priest, McKay, Maxwell, Dykes, Sinclair, Henderson, McInnay, and Mr. Murray. The evening terminated by the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

BOLTON AND DIS. ROLLER C.S.

Annual meeting, February 11th, at headquarters, the Joiner's Arms Hotel, Mr. Hulock in the chair. There was a good meeting and eight new members were made. Mr. Massey, the Sec., intimated his wish to resign owing to increased pressure in his business not leaving him any time to devote to secretarial duties; in fact, he has repeatedly wished to resign, but the members would not listen to it. This time, however, they could not persuade him to take it on again, and Mr. R. Eastham was selected for the office. His address is 3, Anson Street, Bolton. Roller fanciers please note. Mr. Massey hopes that all Roller fanciers will accord Mr. Eastham the same support in the future that they have accorded to him in the past. The past show was not a financial success owing to less entries and increased prize-money. The club, however, starts the new year with a balance in hand of nearly £5.—Jos. Kilshaw, Corresponding Sec. pro. tem.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

The competition results are as follows:—Open: 1, Allen, 124 points; 2, Morrison, 85; 3, Bailey, 76; 4, Ogden Bros., 76; H. H. Towers, 66; the first four are prize winners; Ramsden's special, C. A committee meeting was held Feb. 15, present Mr. P. Drake, vice-pres., chair, Messrs. Towers, Bailey, Allen, Grayshon, L. Ogden, Snead, Whitley, Greaves, Clegg, Cooper, along with the Sec. After routine business a discussion arose whether we should continue as a separate club or amalgamate with the Y.C.C. It was decided to go on as at present, and, as last year we were short of shows at which to give our patronage, it was recommended to the general meeting to provide a trophy to run more than one year along with other competition prizes, and the secretary would see what promises he could get towards the trophy before the general meeting. The club is prepared to give its patronage to shows that will give four classes for Cin. marks, and I would like societies to apply to me for patronage before our general meeting in April. Any member having business for general meeting, if he will send same on to the Secretary he will be certain to have it brought before the meeting. I shall be very pleased to hear from any member who is willing to give toward the trophy. Novices and breeders will all be helping the variety by helping towards the cost of the trophy. There are a number of subs. still owing; will members please send them on; it will save expense in postage. Should any member compute the competition points different from me, if he will write and point out any error, it can be remedied before the prize distribution, which takes place in March, at [illegible] Tavern; see announcement by Mr. H. Hill in CAGE BIRDS. Members, please attend in full force.—R. Garnett, Hon. Sec.

NOTTINGHAM AND NOTTS O.S.

Postponed annual meeting held at Mechanics' Institute, Feb. 11, when a good muster of members were present. Mr. R. Rhodes occupied the chair. The Secretary presented the annual balance-sheet, and in spite of a loss of over £3 incurred on the open show a credit balance of over £2 was shown on the year's accounts. This was considered to be a very satisfactory result, and the committee hope to be favoured with the support of all the fanciers in the district, and with their help make the society financially stronger, and so be able to encourage the members with more special prizes and other benefits which would be bound to follow if the membership of the society is numerically strengthened. After some discussion it was decided to hold the open show on Nov. 14 and 15, providing we can arrange for the use of the New Hall that is being built. We gather from the plans inspected that the hall will be something like 14ft. longer, and 8ft wider than the one we have previously held the show in; an abundance of natural light in the daytime, and special electrical appliances at night; well ventilated, yet absolutely draught proof. It will be one of the finest halls in the kingdom, and we hope to fill it with at least two thousand exhibits at our first venture in new quarters. The following officers for 1913 were elected:—Chairman, Mr. R. Rhodes; vice-chair, G. C. Ley; treas., R. Rhodes; hon. solicitor, F. Berryman; hon. auctioneer, G. H. Scottorn; auditors, Messrs. White and Wolff; hon. sec., G. E. Wilkinson; hon. asst. sec., J. G. Royce; committee, Messrs. Bowler, Bown, Cottingham, Clark, Hill, Hodkinson, Hayter, Sharpe, Saywell, Tranter, Woolfe, and White. Decided to have a table show of matched pairs for breeding. A class each for Norwich, Crests and C.P. and Mules and Hybrids, at our next monthly meeting on March 11.—J. G. Royce, Hon. Asst. Sec.

Monthly meeting, held at headquarters, the Feathers Hotel, Westminster, February 12. Mr. W. Shephard was in the chair. Amongst those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Thynne, Messrs. Matchman, Offord, Wright, Waddington, and Boxall. The business portion of the meeting having been concluded, questions were passed round concerning the Norwich Canary. A particularly animated and instructive debate followed the points of inbreeding and breeding for colour receiving special attention, the lady member present proving to be quite an adept in the manipulation of the Norwich type of Canaries. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded a most interesting and enjoyable meeting.—F. Boxall, Dep. Assist. Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

The Council met at the Market Tavern, Bradford, February 15th, Mr. F. Armstrong (President) occupying the chair. There was not a long agenda of business, the main item being the selection of Union medals. The business transacted by the sub-committee appointed to deal with recommendations and new rules for the ballot papers was unanimously confirmed. After due consideration had been given to the samples submitted by three firms of the six which had been invited to send, decided to accept the estimate of Messrs. Fattorini and Son, Bradford. Keighley and Dis. C.B.S. applied for admission as members of the Union, and this was unanimously granted by the Council, their entrance to take effect as from April 1st. A recommendation from the Council to the specialist clubs in Yorkshire, asking them if possible to grant their patronage to Union societies applying for same as soon as possible, in order that the said societies can then arrange their classification for inclusion in the handbook, so that the handbook can be circulated to Union members about the end of July at latest. Last year the printing of same was delayed, with the result that the members did not obtain these until September. Union members, who have competed in CAGE BIRDS Prizes Competition, will find published this week the results in each competition as sent by the Secretary, Mr. F. Hammond.—H. Hill, Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

I am more than delighted with the society's past year's work. The bank pass book shows reserve funds of £16, and we have no liabilities. We are very much alive, and for two years have never missed making members at our monthly meetings. Loud applause greeted this statement by Chairman Willmott at the February meeting, a record gathering being present. Messrs. P. Lane (Worcester) and C. Stevens (Small Heath) were elected members. The auditors, Messrs. Perks and Hall, found everything in perfect order. Over 500 birds have been shown by members during 1912, and we have given away more specials in our two years' existence than most societies have in 20 years. So continued the Chairman, who also remarked that he had made a promise that when £20 was in the bank he should be pleased to consider an open show. The following resignations were accepted, Messrs. J. H. de Mailett, and F. Derry, while Messrs. Stevenson and Gosling are no longer members. Several members requested that the committee should try new quarters, and thought a move to the large rooms now finished at the Malt Shovel would suit us very well; this matter was left to the committee. A hearty vote of thanks was given the secretary for his splendid effort in securing so many fine specials during the past year. A debate then followed for two very handsome specials, and we were compelled to hold a draw for same, which resulted in Mr. Wright being first and Mr. West second.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

READING C.B.S.

This month's meeting, held Feb. 5th, took the form of a pair show and lecture by Mr. Geo. Gardner. There was a good attendance, and 52 pairs turned up, an increase of 20 over last year. Amateur and novice classes had some really good birds amongst them, also muling pairs, of which there were nine in their class. While judging was going on four new members were elected, viz., Mrs. Radford, G. E. P. Hunt, W. Kerry, and Mr. Bateman. The question of guarantee for advertising was brought forward, and it was decided to have the same as last year. The society has at last found an assistant sec. in Mr. O. C. Smith, who was unanimously elected. Mr. Smith is a chemist, and is making a special study of birdy ailments and their cure, and his acceptance of office should prove a valuable asset, especially as he is also an enthusiastic fancier. The secretary then mentioned that Mr. Brooker is giving a washing exhibition at next meeting, and requested members to bring a bird each and try their hands. Then the lecturer claimed the attention of those present, after which questions were asked and answered until the close of meeting. The entries at the show were numerous, and the quality very high-class, particularly in Norwich and Yorks. Birds were staged equal to holding their own in keen open competition. The winners of the point specials were Messrs. F. Dearlove, W. H. Pyke, W. Hayward, G. Munday, F. T. L. Avis, and T. W. Wren. There was a good muster of members of the society, which has a large membership roll, and is steadily adding to it. The room in which the show was held is in every way suitable for the purpose, and the hon. secretary is an efficient and able officer. He seems to enjoy the confidence of one and all of the members, who helped him in every way possible. Mr. G. Gardner judged, and afterwards delivered an address on cage bird subjects. He claimed that the more experienced members of the society should take a delight in instructing the novices in the arts of selection and mating; and spoke at some length upon the value of a study of antecedents in breeding operations. The show, he said, was a credit to the society. The following were the winners:—CHAMPION NOR.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, hc, Dearlove; c, J. Brooker. CRESTS: 1, 2, 3, S. Pyke. YORKS.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, Avis; hc, c, Giles. AMAT. NOR.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, hc, c, Hayward. NOV. NOR.: 1, Munday; 2, 3, vhc, O. C. Smith; hc, Mrs. Bardett; c, Mrs. Wright. MULING PAIRS: 1, Pyke; 2, R. J. Smith; 3, Vince; vhc, O. C. Smith; hc, Munday; c, Frewin. HYB. PAIRS: 1, 2, vhc, T. W. Wren; 3, O. C. Smith.

SANDY LANE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held at headquarters, Feb. 11. The retiring secretary, Mr. S. Radcliffe, read the report, which showed the society to be in a sound financial position. After the adoption of the report and balance sheet, the meeting proceeded to the election of officers for coming year, which resulted in our old fancier friend, Mr. Jonas Knight, being elected as president. Afterwards the several proposed new rules and amended rules, which had been forwarded by the Y.U. Secretary for adoption or otherwise were thoroughly discussed and voted on.—P. Douke, Hon. Sec.

BROUGHTY FERRY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Victoria Cottage, February 6. Mr. Carmyllie, president, occupied the chair. Mr. Carmyllie moved that they obtain a local man if possible, as judge for annual show, which was agreed to. Mr. Whitton proposed that the Broughty Ferry Town Council be approached with a view to obtaining a subscription for show, or that they recognise the society in some form by presenting a trophy to be competed for at annual show, and the motion was carried unanimously by the meeting. It was agreed, as proposed by the president, R. Carmyllie, that judges for annual show be elected at next meeting.—J. F. Langlands, Sec.

CHESTER-LE-STREET C.B.S.

A very successful table show of pairs was held February 15, when Mr. R. S. Bewick kindly placed the awards, and gave every satisfaction. 1, R. Ward, pair Yorks; 2, W. Davidson, Goldie and Canary; 3, Davidson, Linnet and Canary; vhc, Ward; hc, Willford; c, J. Hedley. 30 birds were staged. Meeting held same night, Mr. Lindsay in chair (pro. tem.). It was decided to hold N.F.S. on July 5th; also an open show on November 22nd. It was also decided to hold table show British. Class 1, Hardbills; class 2, Softbills. Next meeting night, birds on table 7 p.m., March 1st. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Bewick for his services as judge.—R. Ward, Hon. Sec.

HALTWHISTLE C.B.C.

Annual meeting held Feb. 3, Mr. G. H. Bowerbank in the chair. The balance sheet, showing a balance of £8 15s. 11½d., was considered very satisfactory, and unanimously adopted. Date of annual open show was fixed for Nov. 21 and 22, and members' Nest Feather show June 21. Decided to write several prominent judges for terms, to be submitted at next meeting. Also to provide a cup for members' competition at the annual show for most points with three nominated young birds in open and open novice classes, to be won twice in succession or thrice in all. We are hoping this will stimulate the interest of our members for next year's competitions. Practically all the officials were re-elected, except that Mr. J. Nicholson resigned the position of joint sec. owing to not having had good health this last year, but his colleague, Mr. W. Tallantyre, accepting the post, we feel sure that the secretarial reins will be in safe and enthusiastic hands. Officials:—Pres., Mr. R. B. Webster, and a number of influential gentlemen as vice-presidents; chair, Mr. W. Pape; vice-chair, Mr. G. H. Bowerbank; treas., Mr. F. Saint; sec., Mr. W. Tallantyre; show manager, Mr. J. Nicholson, and a strong and enthusiastic committee. We hope to see a further increase in membership, and make this one of the most successful societies in the North.—J. Nicholson.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held February 13, at the Duke of York Hotel (which had been postponed owing to the members final cup show being held on Jan. 15), when Mr. F. J. Weaver presided over a good attendance. A letter was read from the Birmingham society re the cup competition, to the effect that, although Birmingham have won it three times in succession, they do not wish to claim it. Balance sheet was unanimously adopted, although it showed an adverse balance, the Secretary pointing out in his books several items which would wipe off the loss when paid up. The officers were again elected en bloc: President, Mrs. Staveley Hill; vice-presidents, Messrs. A. Bird, M.P., J. A. Tonks, S. R. Rhodes, A. Cupiss, Morris, Christopher, J. Baker, D. Tonks, J. MacDougall; chair, F. J. Weaver; vice-chair, R. Willoughby; treas., F. Garfield. Mr. J. A. Tonks then made the presentation of a good cash honorarium to the secretary for his sterling work to the society in the past. The Secretary, in his response, said he was pleased to think how grateful the members were towards him. Mr. Tonks next made the presentation of the society's cup to winner, Mr. E. Hall, who most heartily responded. The meeting then broke up into a jollification, each member making a good speech before raising the cup. Eleven o'clock brought a good meeting to a close.—J. Gibbons, Hon. Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

BURNLEY O.S.

Meeting held February 13, at the Star Inn, Church Street, Mr. Barwise in the chair. Decided to hold young bird show, June 28, at the above place. Also decided to raise funds for a special trophy, not to be won outright. On February 27 we are holding a judging competition for novices, entry fee, 6d., winner to have a medal. Mr. T. Edwards will lecture on colour feeding at the next meeting. Now champions and novices, come and give us your support, and make this society a big success.—W. Redman, Sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Fortnightly meeting, held February 15, at Berni's Rooms, Cwm Street, Mr. J. Hillman in the chair. Was decided to write to six judges for terms for our open show. Also to Mr. J. R. Leach to judge our first feather show, June 14. Will secretaries around Monmouthshire please note that we have fixed our date for open show for October 22nd, and try not to clash with us? Anyone wishing to join our society can do so at our next meeting, held as above, February 26th, at six, or by applying to the secretary.—George Broome, Sec.

GALASHIELS O.S.

Annual general meeting, held February 8, in Good Templars' Hall, President (Mr. A. Tod) in the chair. Report and balance sheet read and adopted, showing a balance in hand. Morrison; auditor, Messrs. A. Tod and R. Fox. Resignations accepted with regret: Messrs. Jas. Dobson, F. Murray, and J. Melrose. New member proposed, Wm. Murray.—John Brown, Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held February 11, Mr. Jas. Stenhouse (President) in the chair, when a report of the West Fife C.B.S. annual meeting was given by Chairman. The following were appointed delegates for the next twelvemonths: J. Anderson, J. Cordery, G. Malcom, and A. Dickson. On reviewing classes for open show, it was agreed to add a variegated mule class, and amalgamate foreign Goldfinch and Bullfinch; also amalgamate large and small foreign birds. Gentlemen were then nominated to judge at open show. Owing to W. F. L. meeting being on 1st March, it was agreed to drop washing exhibition on that date by Messrs. J. Anderson and A. Dickson. Mr. John Johnstone, Ashfield, Kelty, was elected a member, and a well attended meeting was brought to a close.—A. Dickson, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Annual meeting held February 15, Mr. Farrer presiding over a large attendance. Members' prize-money was paid, and other business transacted. The election of officers was proceeded with. President, Mr. S. Storey, J.P., D.L.; vice-presidents, Messrs. Hamar Greenwood, M.P., F. W. Goldstone, M.P., J. Cobb, C. Grimshaw, W. Hall, G. Bell and J. Keenlyside; committee, Messrs. Elliott, G. Davidson, J. Machin, W. Reid, F. Riseborough, A. Walker, T. Davison, J. Peacock, T. Smith, and T. Gray; chairman, Mr. J. Farrer; vice-chairman, Mr. C. Waters; assist. sec., Mr. J. Peacock; hon. treas., Mr. G. Davidson; auditors, Messrs. T. Davison and J. Copeland; hon. sec., J. Jeffrey. The following were made members: Mr. J. Matthews and Mr. Moore. At the next meeting, March 1, a table show of pairs will be held. Members are requested to bring birds, especially novice members. Members are also reminded that subs. may now be paid, and they should induce fanciers residing in the district to join the Association.—J. Jeffrey, Sec.

AINTREE FAZACKERLEY F.S.

Much of the life of a fanciers' society is sweetened by the generosity of its members. The cage-bird fanciers of the Aintree Society have taken unto heart this dictum, and great is the joy thereof. Mr. George Skilling (Kirkdale) holder of the challenge cup for 1912-13, has very kindly presented a gold medal for the runner-up in the cup competition this season; Mr. E. Battersby (Aintree) a gold-centre medal for 3rd prize; Mr. C. Eaton (Aintree) a pair of vases, value 5s., 4th; and donors of 5th and 6th prizes are forthcoming. Mr. W. C. Robinson (Liverpool) has given a 5s. special for the members' annual Pair Show this month, Mr. T. Handley (Seaforth) a 4s. special, and Mr. G. Skilling (Kirkdale) one of 2s. 6d. These three "specials" are for most points gained at the Pair Show, which will be judged by Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool). Another handsome special is promised the cage-bird section by Vice-President Mr. J. Schorah (Kirkdale) and who can say but what the worthy example of these gentlemen will be speedily followed.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Feb. 6, at the Wentworth Cafe, Mr. F. Jones, president, in the chair; a fairly good attendance of members being present. Several items of correspondence were dealt with. The secretary announced that he had secured Mr. T. Bishop to judge at our next feather show; also Mr. J. C. Barnes as one of the judges at the open show on Oct. 18. Arising out of a letter received from Mr. P. Walsh desiring that he be allowed to keep the British Cup, which he has won so often, and replace it with another of equal value, the secretary wrote Mr. T. Bishop, the donor of the cup, to ask if he was agreeable to the suggestoin. He at once gave his consent, and the meeting granted Mr. Walsh the British Cup on the conditions named. Mr. W. H. Walton, the donor of the Norwich Cup, was also approached, and he kindly left it in the society's hands to do as they thought best. It was eventually decided that the rules relating to the cups be altered, and that from now any member winning them three times the cups become his own property, the cups to be won with birds bred by the exhibitor. After some discussion as to a novice member's chance of winning the cups, Messrs. G. Fletcher, J. Memmott, and A. Hobson each promised a cup for the novice section. This was received with applause, and, further to encourage the novices, Mr. J. G. Cowley promised a pair of champion Norwich to the novice Norwich member who gets the most points at all this season's shows (open show barred), the four highest birds to count. Mr. J. Thorpe promised a pair of champion Yorks to the novice Yorks member on exactly the same terms. Now, novices, take advantage of these generous gifts and make it interesting by showing your birds. It was left to the committee to form rules to govern the novice cups. Our worthy President promised a grand shield to the member getting most points at all the shows, to be won outright this year. An interesting debate has been fixed to take place between Mr. W. Bingham and Mr. J. G. Cowley, Mr. Bingham to take Yorks and Mr. Cowley Nor. Members must not miss this treat; bring your fancier friends with you. The next meeting night, Mar. 6, has been fixed for our annual social, commencing at seven o'clock, at the Wentworth Cafe; charge 1s. each. We desire all members to be present; ladies specially invited; all who have not given in their names and intend being present, kindly let the secretary know as early as possible. A very interesting half-hour was taken up with questions and answers, and some valuable information was given by Mr. Bingham with regard to birds that are out of condition. The following new members were unanimously elected:—Messrs. F. Wakefield, G. H. Cowley, Mr. Fowler, H. Biddle, P. Wingfield, W. Baxby, and G. H. Sampson. The best thanks of the meeting were accorded to the donors of the cups and specials.—J. Woolhouse, assist. sec.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held in Co-operative Hall, as we were unable to get the use of the Club Hall through a misunderstanding. Only a moderate attendance of members, although we had some important business to contend with. Mr. A. Brown, Gateshead, and Mr. J. W. Bruce, Coldstream, were elected to judge our open show in October. The schedule for open show was left over until a future meeting. Now, members, try and get to next meeting, and let us have some arrangements made for first feather show. Next meeting on March 15th.—W. Tomlinson, Sec.

COCKERMOUTH F.S.

Annual meeting Feb. 6, held under the happiest auspices. The decision of last annual meeting to drop the poultry section with its continual losses, had been amply justified, and the show on Nov., held in the Public Hall, was in every way a success. In addition to a record entry, there was a gain of exactly £17 on the show—a result largely due to the energy and tact of the secretary, and the self-denying work of the committee. For 1913 the following appointments were made:—Pres., Mr. E. L. Waugh; chair, Mr. G. Oglethorpe; vice-chair, Mr. J. Simon; hon. treas., Mr. J. Ellwood; sec., Mr. John Jackson. The date of next show was fixed for Nov. 24th.

FENCE HOUSES NEW C.B.S.

First meeting, held in the Station Hotel, February 15. Fanciers came up fairly well, and a good amount of business was got through. Every credit is due towards Mr. B. Robinson, Sec. of the Dubmire C.B.S. for attending our meeting and giving us every assistance in forming our new society. The principal business was fixing a radius; this will be three miles. Entrance fee 2s. 6d. per year. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mr. R. G. Lishman; vice-presidents, Mr. H. Hall and Mr. G. Wood; treas., Mr. H. Hall; secretary, W. Halton; assist. sec., J. Atkinson; chairman, Mr. R. Gowland: committee, R. Liddle, W. Finlay, W. Knighton, W. Moore, D. Hann, H. Fenwick. We have splendid accommodation, and there is every prospect of the club being a success. Next meeting March 8. Hoping all members will attend. Entrance fees can be paid to secretary any time now.—W. Halton, 7, Ewe Hill Terrace, Fence Houses, Co. Durham.

LANCS. AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting, held at the Old Boars Head Hotel, Manchester, Feb. 8, only a poor muster of members being present. Prize-money won at the club show was paid out to the members present; those not present will have their's by the time this is printed. The secretary was also instructed to pay guarantees lost on patronage shows. There was a long discussion on birdy matters, after meeting was over, and some strong remarks were made by those present at the judging the Lancashires and Lizards get at some shows. Members are requested to note that general meeting will be held on March 1st, at the Old Boar's Head, Manchester, and I should esteem it a favour if members will forward me anything they wish discussed at the general meeting, so that I can get the agenda in proper order, and save a lot of time. New members can then be proposed, and I will place any such before the members. I am resigning the secretaryship, and trust our members will consider the matter, and appoint a new one in my place.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

What Do You Know About Cage Birds ?

Do you mean to secure a Prize at the next Crystal Palace Show ?

If you do, be sure of this—it is KNOWLEDGE that will enable you to win it.

If you mean to produce the best Bird in any one Class—YOU MUST KNOW HOW.

The men who won at the recent Show won because they studied their Birds. They knew all about Mating as well as about Pairing; all about Canary Foods as well as about Canary Feeding; all about Breeding as well as about Breeds; all about Results as well as about Possibilities; all about Prevention, as well as about Treatment of Cage Bird Diseases. And last and most important of all, they know all about the points for each breed—THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WERE BREEDING TO. For what is a good point in one species is a defect in another. "CANARIES, HYBRIDS AND BRITISH BIRDS" contains all the knowledge YOU need if you are determined to be on top at the next Show.

Send for our FREE Booklet, which will tell you all about this grand work; what it contains and the popular price and terms on which we supply it. YOU DON'T NEED ANY OTHER BOOK FOR WINNING IF YOU HAVE THIS ONE.

CANARIES:

Hybrids and British Birds,

IN CAGE AND AVIARY.

The Exhibitor's Sure Guide to Success.

"Why ?" "Because"—

Point I.—It covers the whole ground, and is the only book the Fancier needs.

Point II.—It is written by men who are making big money by breeding Cage Birds; every subject is treated by a Specialist.

Point III.—It begins at the beginning; it is equally valuable to the novice as to the practised Fancier.

Point IV.—It embodies the results of years of patient experiment and enables its owner to profit by the wisdom and experience of the most famous breeders.

Point V.—It is practically Illustrated in every department; and the Coloured Plates are exactly true to nature, enabling the Breeder to see what he is breeding to.

Point VI.—It has an Index of over 600 items, so that every point of doubt or difficulty can be turned up in an instant. And the various sections are written by such genuine Bird-lovers that the delighted Fancier is captivated. He reads right on !

Point VII.—It is absolutely up-to-date in every department. It gives the latest authoritative information on Shows, Exhibiting, and the Standard points, defects, etc., of every recognised breed of Canary and Cage Bird and Hybrid.

Point VIII.—Its contents are highly stimulative and suggestive to the intelligent Breeder. This is especially true of the section on the breeding of Hybrids in which is embodied much information that has never before been tabulated on this fascinating subject. Here, too, the breeder is informed of these Crosses that have not as yet been achieved.

Point IX.—It is the latest, the best, the most complete book on everything concerning Canaries, Cage-birds and British Birds of every description. Send for The Free Book to-day, and you will see that it is the ONE BOOK YOU NEED—if you mean to win at the next Show, or if you are just a Bird-lover who does not go in for Exhibitions at all; or if you keep Birds and want to know more about them.

NOTE WHAT OUR BUYERS SAY—

Mr. L. ENYON, Clydach, Rhondda Valley:—

"I have no hesitation in recommending it to young breeders as essential. Without doubt the most complete work of its kind."

Mr. H. HANCOCK, Burslem:—

"I think the book a great help and well worth the money."

Mr. RALPH HARRISON, Whitley Bay:—

"The book to make Breeding a success—complete in every department."

Mrs. BERTRAM, Christchurch, Hants:—

"I have found it of the greatest use, while the Illustrations are of value to the novice and the expert alike. The sections dealing with Hybrids are especially commendable, and should prove of service to fanciers."

From the Harz Mountains of Germany.

At the prices quoted below. Have on approval, and test the bona-fides of this statement. Never excelled at prices, if ever equalled, which I believe they have not. A good singing cock for 6/-. Don't be "gulled" by purchasing mongrels sold as Hartz Rollers at lower prices. They have never seen Germany, and to sell as such is an impertinent lie. Specially selected. Why, one of my Norwich or Yorkshire songsters is worth half-a-dozen of these insignificant birds with really no breed in them. Hartz cocks, 6/6, and 7/6. Hens, 2/-; Genuine Seiferts, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- 20/-. Pairs, 10/6, 15/6, 21/-, 25/- upwards. Hens, 3/6. Pairs, 7/6, 8/6. Cages, 3d. extra. A few exceptional birds, 30/-, and 40/- each. An exceptional lot of good hens, and now is the time to purchase them. All kinds of cages for same. Pairs, ditto, for breeding, 12/6, 15/- 20/-, 25/-. If you desire to know all about these interesting little birds, you should send for "Profitable Canary Breeding as Practised in Germany," by Albert Retch. This is, in my opinion, the best and most reliable little work ever published on Hartz Mountain Rollers, and can only be purchased from me (copyright), price, paper cover, 9d.; cloth gilt, 1/3.

BEFORE YOU DECIDE

to purchase a Roller from anywhere, just read the unsolicited testimonials given below, and when it is taken into consideration that these letters are written by persons whose only motive is to tell the truth and express their appreciation of the Rollers I have sold them, I think even the most sceptical person will admit that there really must be something special about my Leipzig Rollers, and that what I claim for them is correct. I have repeatedly said that the Leipzig Rollers are far and away better singers than the ordinary Rollers and that they have a much more pleasant song and a greater variety of changes than any other Roller on the market. To test the truth of this statement, I ask you to have a Leipzig Roller on a week's trial from me and an ordinary Roller at any higher price on similar conditions from elsewhere, test them side by side, and if in your honest opinion and the opinion of any Roller judge you can call upon, mine is not by far the better bird, return it to me, and I will instantly refund the whole of your out-of-pocket expenses. I now have about 1,600 (one thousand six hundred) of these Leipzig Rollers in stock, all cocks guaranteed in full song day and gas light, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, water bubble runs, soft roulades, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., etc. and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or discordant notes whatever price; 7/6 and 8/6 each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/6 and 12/0 each (the latter at 12/6 are specially good value). Hens, guaranteed same strain as above cocks, 3/- each; two, 5/6. I also have a magnificent stock of genuine Glucke-bred contest Rollers at 15/- and 21/- each; hens, 4/- each. These contest Rollers have a wonderful range of soft mellow tours, and are of bluest blood Germany can boast of, just the birds for anyone starting to breed contest birds or for improving their stock. I also have a splendid lot of loud, free singing Hartz cocks in full vigorous song, day and gas light, at 5/6 each; three, 15/6; seven, 33/-. Hartz hens, 2/3 each; 4/- couple. All birds are safely and warmly packed (no matter how cold the weather) in special travelling cages free of extra cost, and are sent on full week's approval solely at my own risk during whole time either on receipt of cash or if same is deposited with Editor, and unless perfect satisfaction is given and your every expectation realised, the whole of your money is promptly returned without question or comment. Note, full name and address, also date, given with each letter below:—"Longley House, Rochester, Feb. 1st. Sir,—Bird arrived safe and I am very pleased. He is a splendid free singer, at it nearly all day. Thanking you for your honest dealing.—Yours, etc., Conway Gordon." "24, Park View, Nantwich, Feb. 1st. Sir,—Received birds on Wednesday, and have great pleasure in stating that they quite surpassed expectation.—Yours, T. Heap." "10, Rossall Road, Chorley, Feb. 1st. Sir,—Received Roller in splendid condition and was soon singing when put in fresh cage. I am more than pleased with your selection. He is a lovely songster. Yours, T. Blackburn." "Shakespeare Street, Cardiff, Feb. 5th. Sir,—Received Bandmaster safe, and must say he is a champion. He sang beautifully one hour after arrival.—Yours, S Watkins." "6, Filman Road, Fulham, London, Feb. 10th. Sir,—Please send me a Leipzig Bandmaster. The one I purchased from you last year still sings as well as ever and gives every satisfaction to the friend I gave it to.—Yours, H. Brown." On Feb. 16th Mr. Brown again writes: "Sir,—Roller arrived quite safe on Thursday and started singing when caged and still keeping it up. Your advt. is not misleading; they are, as you say, reliable songsters, free from harsh notes, etc. Thanking you most sincerely for such a good bird.—Yours, H. Brown." "10, Queen Street, Ashby, Doncaster, Feb. 10th. Sir,—Please send Roller hen. The cock you sent is singing splendidly, and started before being taken out of travelling cage.—Yours, F. Mumby." "The Intake, Glenlea Foyers, Inverness-shire, Feb. 11th. Sir,—Roller arrived here safe after being 21 hours on the road. I must say I am more than satisfied with him. Your advt. does not give your Leipzig Rollers half credit enough for their beautiful notes at such a reasonable price, and I think there is nothing to equal them.—Yours, J. McMillan." "125, Windsor Road, Penarth, Feb. 11th. Sir,—Received bird in pink of condition. Am very pleased with your choice. Thanking you for prompt despatch.—Yours, G. Mounter." "Netherton Colliery, Feb. 11th. Sir,—Roller arrived safely and gave us a few tours three hours after arrival. He is a beautiful singer; his song is enchanting. I thank you very much for sending such a nice bird. The other bird I have is not in it with yours.—Yours, J. Wood." "11, School Street, Williamstown, Penygraig, Feb. 12th. Sir,—Please send Leipzig hen to match the cock. He is a little marvel and seems to get better every day.—Yours, J. Williams." "41, Kilmailing Road, Cathcart, Glasgow, Feb. 14th. Sir,—Roller hen arrived safe, and am pleased with same; also cock doing well and singing fine. They are a well-matched pair. Thanks for prompt attention.—Yours, J. McGilp." "Barrington Park, Burford, Oxon, Feb. 16th. Sir,—Many thanks for Roller received on 11th. He is a perfect gem, and was quite lively after travelling 24 hours. Shall recommend you to my friends.—Yours, R. Burden." Please note, as this is most probably the last consignment of Leipzig Rollers I shall receive this season, it behoves all intending purchasers to send their orders early as possible to avoid disappointment. The above is the record achieved by my birds during the present show season. I have not shown a single bird at members' or club shows where the competition is limited. Every bird has been shown in hottest competition at champion shows, open to all comers. Amongst my wins are: Firsts and Specials at all the leading shows in the Kingdom, including the Bradford National, Scottish National, and Crystal Palace. Also numerous Challenge Cups, Gold and Silver Medals, and other trophies. I am now in a position to offer marvellous value in Norwich, Yorkshires, Borders, Scotch Fancies, Crests, Mules, Lancashires, etc., as follows:—

My files are open to all visitors who wish to inspect Testimonials, which I have received from fanciers during the last few months. These prove to all that birds supplied by me have been winning all through the season, both Norwich, Yorkshires, and Borders; also that many of this season's winners have been bred from stock supplied by me. If you cannot pay me a visit, however, don't forget that I send every bird on seven days' approval at my sole risk. I guarantee absolute satisfaction to every customer, or cash returned in full. Easy payments can be arranged to suit the convenience of Genuine Fanciers. NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

How the Humanitarian Societies Conduct Prosecutions.

The cases reported in another column throw a light upon the methods adopted by the two societies, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, and the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and illustrate the rivalry which exists between them in the struggle for notoriety, and in their endeavours to satisfy the kind-hearted but mistaken subscribers to their funds.

When the R.S.P.C.A. recently brought an action against a Kentish Town dealer, an officer of the R.S.P.B. gave evidence for the defence, and in the first of the two cases reported this week the same inspector was contradicted point blank by a constable, whom he called in support of his own case. The magistrate's opinion of this inspector may be gathered from the remarks he felt himself bound to make as a dispenser of justice.

In the case against Mr. Luer the R.S.P.C.A. was the prosecuting society, and all that they could allege was that among some 200 birds in the stock, 12 Jackdaws were dirty, and four Linnets were affected with diarrhoea. The evidence of the inspector had for corroboration, so far as the Linnets were concerned, the opinion of Mr. Piesse, the veterinary surgeon to the society, a gentleman who in this case, as in others in which he has appeared, admitted that he knew little or nothing about birds. The Linnets were dirty, and he thought it better to chloroform them!

Of the Jackdaws all that Inspector Buller of the society could say was that there were 12 in two cages, and they were dirty. Inspector Hawkins, who had been with Buller on his visit, saw the Jackdaws again on the following day, when their cages had been cleaned out, and "the birds appeared lively and happy." Anyone who has ever kept a Jackdaw knows quite well what the cage of this filthy bird gets like in a day, and it would be absolutely impossible to keep 12 Jackdaws in two cages, even for the few hours during which they would be in the hands of such a wholesale dealer as Mr. Luer without their cage showing conditions which could be magnified by an imaginative inspector into a pretext for a charge.

I have on many occasions exposed the methods of these societies, and their inspectors, and it is gratifying to find magistrates of such eminence as Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Plowden agreeing with the views so often expressed.

An Association of Bird Traders.

In our correspondence columns appears a letter from Mr. Pearson, of Woolwich, suggesting the establishing of an association of bird-traders in defence of their members. Such an association has long been badly needed, and Mr. Trower, the well-known seed merchant, long ago spent time, energy, and money in his endeavours to get the bird-dealers of London to combine together in their own protection. I think I am correct in stating that Mr. Trower found the individual traders very indifferent in the matter, and the movement, I believe, ultimately came to nothing. If the bird dealers are at last awake to the danger of the position so much the better, and if CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE can do anything to assist in the movement, its services will freely be given. Perhaps Mr. Trower will kindly give us his views on the matter in the light of the experience he has gained.

We have already a register containing the names of a number of dealers throughout the country, whose shops have been open to the visits of voluntary inspectors, appointed by CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and if action were taken against these dealers they would have the opportunity of calling upon our inspectors to state the results of their visits. After six months of such inspection, providing, of course, that the reports are favourable, certificates are granted to the shop-keepers, and these certificates would be very valuable in rebutting any of the wild charges which are so wantonly made in many cases by the paid officials of the professional Humanitarian Societies. Whether or not there be established the organisation now suggested by Mr. Pearson, a shopkeeper has only to become a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, express his willingness to submit his stock and his methods to the inspection at odd times of a member of the League, appointed officially, conduct his business in such a way as to warrant a favourable report, and in due time he wil be furnished with a signed certificate setting forth the results of the inspection.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting and table show, held Feb. 18th, at the Onward Hall. Mr. Robinson in the chair. The attendance being a good one. Several items were gone through, such as arranging for a list of table shows, lectures, and washing competitions, etc., etc. We have a good syllabus for the occasion, including several rambles, and we are in for a good time, especially if we all pull together. We are also making new members at a fair rate, which speaks well for the coming season. The table show was well patronised, when we consider that several of our members live a good distance off, and that several are on night work. Norwich open and amateur classes were well filled, several good birds being shown, and Mr. Boothman, who judged, had a fairly hard task, all the same he came through the ordeal with credit, and gave satisfaction all round. NOR. PAIRS (12): 1, 4, Booth; 2, vhc, hc, c, Rev. C. E. Gaul; 3, Buckley. Several first class pairs had to stand out of the cards. COCKS: 1, Booth; 2, Buckley; 3, Spencer; 4, Holland. HEN: 1, Spencer; 2, Holland; 3, Buckley; 4, Booth. NOV. PAIRS: 1, 2, Thorpe; 3, 4, Thomas. HEN: 1, Thorpe; 2, Thomas. COCK: 1, 2, Thorpe; 3, Thomas. YORKS.: 1, Downing; 2, Thorpe. Next meeting table show of Brit. and Muling pairs, when we hope for a good entry.—J. Spencer, Sec., R. Booth, reporter.

PROSECUTION OR PERSECUTION?

STRONG COMMENTS BY MAGISTRATES.

THE R.S.P.C.A. AND THE R.S.P.B. BOTH MULCTED IN COSTS.

Strange Conflict of Evidence.

"This case ought never to have been brought into court," said Mr. Plowden, at the Marylebone Police-court, on Feb. 21, in dismissing, with three guineas costs, a summons taken out by William Thomas Moxey, an inspector of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, of 23, Queen Anne's Gate, Westminster, against David Jenkins, of Sclater-street, Club-row, Bethnal Green, for causing unnecessary suffering to a number of birds. Mr. Harry Wilson, solicitor, appeared for the society; and Mr. C. V. Young, solicitor, defended. The birds were exposed for sale on a stall in the market place at Queen's Crescent, Kentish Town, and according to Inspector Moxey 19 of them were confined in a small cage without food or water, or even the receptacles for it, and one was in a dying condition. Mr. Plowden recalled that he was the same officer who some weeks ago, in a similar prosecution by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, gave evidence for the defence. What he thought then, however, he did not think now, apparently.—Police-constable M'Coy, 687 Y, was then called by the prosecution, and created a sensation by flatly contradicting Inspector Moxey's evidence. "There was a good supply of water in the cage and food as well," added the officer.—Mr. Plowden: That puts an end to the case.—Mr. Harry Wilson agreed.—Mr. Plowden: The same officer tells one story in one case and a totally different one in another, just as it suits his purpose to get a conviction or an acquittal.—Mr. Wilson said that had he known of the constable's evidence, he would never have appeared in the case.—Mr. Plowden replied that no blame attached to the society, but he hoped that those who employed the inspector would reconsider his position. He dismissed the summons (with three guineas cost against the prosecuting society) as stated above.

Flimsy Allegations.

At Lambeth Police Court on February 20, Charles Luer, a bird dealer, of East Street, Walworth, was summoned before Mr. Hopkins by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals for unreasonably causing unnecessary suffering to 12 Jackdaws and four Linnets by omitting to give them proper and necessary care and attention.—Mr. S. G. Polhill supported the summons on behalf of the society, and Mr. Percy Robinson, instructed by Messrs. Ody and Wilmot, defended.—Mr. Polhill said that on February 7 an officer of the society went to the defendant's shop, in which there were some 200 English and foreign birds in cages. The 12 Jackdaws were in two cages, which were extremely dirty; there was no water in the troughs, and the eating tins were in a very dirty state, in fact, the cages were stinking. As regards the four Linnets he made no complaint about their cages, although they were not so clean as they might have been, but the feathers of the birds were in an extremely dirty state. The inspector bought the four Linnets, and took them to the offices of the society at Jermyn Street, where they were examined by a veterinary surgeon, and subsequently destroyed.—Inspector Buller, an officer of the society, gave evidence in support of their case, and said that the birds were undoubtedly suffering.—Mr. Robinson (to the witness): What were the symptoms that led you to believe that the Jackdaws were in pain and suffering?—Because the cages and the feathers of the birds were dirty. There was no water, but the Jackdaws did not appear to be thirsty.

The Happy (?) Release.

Inspector Hawkins, another officer of the society, gave further evidence.—Answering the magistrate, the witness said that he visited the shop again on the 8th. The Jackdaws' cages had been cleaned out, and the birds appeared to be lively and happy.—Mr. Hopkins: Then the Jackdaws got cleaned out, and lived happily ever afterwards, and the Linnets were taken away and killed!

Mr. Alexander Piesse, veterinary surgeon, said that the four Linnets were examined by him. He thought it better to chloroform them all.—Mr. Robinson mentioned that the birds had a few days previously come over from Antwerp, and asked the witness whether birds did not often suffer from scouring as the result of a sea voyage.—Mr. Piesse replied that he did not see signs of scouring.

Professor Wooldridge, F.R.C.V.S., consulting veterinary surgeon to the Zoological Society and the Agricultural Society, was called for the defence. He said he did not see the Linnets. It was not an uncommon thing for birds which had undergone a sea voyage to suffer from what was called scour. It was a derangement of the alimentary tract associated with diarrhoea. It was contributed to, also, by change of food. The conditions which had been described in this case were consistent with the birds suffering from scour.—Cross-examined by Mr. Polhill, the witness said that birds did not necessarily suffer from scouring because of a sea voyage.—Mr. Polhill: If these birds had been properly looked after, would you have expected to find them in the state in which Mr. Piesse found them?—The Witness: Yes, with this condition of scour.—The further hearing of the case was adjourned.

At the adjourned hearing, February 27, the defendant was examined, and said he had carried on business as a bird dealer for 25 years, and had never had any previous complaint made against him. The cages in his shop were cleaned every Wednesday and Saturday. Sawdust and fibre were put at the bottom of the Jackdaws' cages. He had since sold some of the Jackdaws at the average price for such birds. The four Linnets which were taken away by the inspectors came with 100 or more from Antwerp. They arrived on the 4th. He formed the opinion that one or two had diarrhoea, but they were not in such a condition as to render it necessary to destroy them. He saw the birds on the morning the inspectors called. They did not appear to be in pain. They had been supplied with food.

What the Magistrate Thought.

Mr. Hopkins, in giving his decision, said: "Two inspectors enter a bird shop, and out of a stock of some hundreds of birds buy and bring away four Linnets in four cages. They take the birds to the society's premises and call a veterinary surgeon, who finds that two of the birds were suffering from some intestinal inflammation, is of opinion that the other two look miserable, and kills all four. The only allegation made against the defendant is that the birds and cages were dirty by reason of an undue collection of excretal dirt. Supposing that allegation to be proved, I think that it would be quite impossible to convict the defendant upon that bare fact. I find, without hesitation, that nothing was done or omitted to be done by the defendant or his servants whereby any unnecessary suffering was caused to any of these birds. In my opinion this is an ill-advised prosecution, and I wish that I had had the courage of my first opinion, and refused process altogether. I should have saved the society from wasting its funds, and prevented energetic inspectors from making it appear almost ridiculous. The real background of such a case as this is to be found in the idea that it ought to be unlawful and is cruel to keep wild birds in cages, and that idea gives birth to another idea, that almost any trifling evidence will induce a magistrate to convict an owner of cruelty to his caged wild birds. I dismiss the summons, and allow the defendant £5 5s. costs."

OBITUARY.

Mr. W. E. Demain.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Southworth, Clitheroe, that I have to announce the death of Mr. W. E. Demain, at the age of 62. He was one of the oldest members of the Clitheroe C.B.S., and one who was always ready to give a helping hand, and I feel sure that all our members will extend their deepest sympathy to Mrs. Demain and family in their sad bereavement.

Many of your readers, writes Mr. T. Robson, will be glad to learn that Mr. J. G. Hutchinson, the highly-esteemed sec. of the Northern Crest Club, has gone a step higher in the force. Inspector Hutchinson has done good work in the Fancy, and has always stood for what is just and straightforward. May his jovial smile linger long.

Our annual social, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, assist. sec., Sheffield C.B.S., will be held at the Wentworth Cafe, March 6th, we have secured some good talent, and the committee desire to see all members present, ladies specially invited, concert commences at 7, refreshments during the evening, price 1s. each; points special prizes will be presented during the evening.

Allow me, through your excellent weekly, to thank Mr. Canning for the very helpful advice contained in this letter, which appeared in last week's Cage Birds, writes Miss S. G. Ruby (Cork). It is a good thing to know that simple remedies (such as Mr. Canning advises) would prove efficacious in bronchial troubles. I shall certainly try them if I have another case.

I have just received word, writes Mr. J. W. Bruce, of Coldstream, from Mr. R. Watt, Tuffontein, South Africa, of the safe arrival of a consignment of birds, 30 in all, 18 Canaries and 12 Finches I sent to him lately, this being the second lot I have sent this year. The last consignment was under the care of Mr. J. R. Cox, of Newcastle, to whom I am greatly indebted for the care he bestowed them on their long journey, as they arrived in tip-top form. I may say it was through your valuable journal I received the order from Mr. Watt, as he noticed my name in your judges' cards. Cage Birds seems to be read far afield.

Good Business.

We hear that Mr. Joe Thomas, the well-known dealer, of Amblerthorn, has already booked a stall for the next Crystal Palace show (1914).

"Punch" and the Lesser Redpoll.

A reader sends us a poetical extract from that most excellent of humorous journals, "Punch," which deals with the Lesser Redpoll. We append a few verses:—

You least of Linnets with your crimson crest
And rosy flush across a little breast
That holds—let one admirer now aver—
The cheerful heart of a philosopher,

Never a day beneath our changing sky
But sees your small form lightly flitting by,
Nor English common gay with gorse or broom
But hears you calling from some golden bloom;

And never, alas! a bird-shop in the land
But sets you, for a penny, in one's hand,
Although of window-starers, more's our shame,
Not one in fifty knows your jolly name.

And yet, fresh-torn from liberty and mate,
We find you cheerly settling to your fate;
Opening a seed-box in your prison cell
And drawing water from a mimic well.

Kindly allow me space in "CAGE BIRDS" to thank all those who replied to my advertisement, for they were too many to answer singly. "CAGE BIRDS" is the paper to advertise in.—G. A. Buck, Richmond.

Re my advt. in "CAGE BIRDS," wanted a massive Buff Norwich cock, will you please thank all fanciers who wrote offering same. I had so many offers I am unable to write to all; I am suited with bird.—G. W. Saunders, Sutton.

Kindly thank the numerous applicants through "CAGE BIRDS" for Yorkshire Hens, which I advertised last week. I could have disposed of 100 birds, which says a lot for your valuable paper, and I wish it all success.—J. Duncan (Inverness).

Having sent out all our stock of breeding cages, we should be greatly obliged if fanciers will keep their orders back till next week, when we shall have replaced our stock. Fanciers that have not received their breeding cages yet will receive same this week.—The Metallic Cage Works, Birmingham.

My Stanley Parrakeets advertised last week were sold by telegram before noon on Friday, and I have had so many enquiries that I have not replied to them all. The last time I advertised some Stanley's it was the same—two telegrams before noon. I gave it to the first opened.—J. Smith, Kendal.

You will be interested to know, through the advt. in "CAGE BIRDS," which cost me 6d., I have sold out, and also have had numerous replies which I cannot answer. Those sending stamp I replied to. This is proof that "CAGE BIRDS" is a good medium for advertising in.—Alfred C. Fletcher (Bedford).

In reply to my advt. in "CAGE BIRDS" of the 8th inst. I had over 40 applications, some coming in up to Friday last. Mr. J. Jenkins, Neath, called to view them on Tuesday last, and was so pleased with them that he took them back with him, 39 birds in all, with cages. It has been more than I can do to reply to all.—E. H. Williams, Llanelly.

League of Foreign Bird Exhibitors.

It is proposed to form a league of Foreign bird exhibitors, to advance the exhibiting of foreign birds, and especially the commoner kinds, by endeavouring to get a wider classification at the shows. Those interested should note the letter in our correspondence columns this week.

A Pathetic Incident.

We regret to hear of a pathetic incident in connection with the last Palace show, Mr. C. R. Taylor, of Dewsbury, unfortunately departing this life before the news of the success of his birds could reach him. The late Mr. Taylor exhibited Roller Canaries, and won 2nd prize in the champion class for young birds.

All Settled Up.

We are informed by the manager of the Crystal Palace show, Mr. J. W. Ramsden, that all matters in connection therewith have been settled up—prize-money paid and medals and diplomas dispatched—and that the accounts will be audited this week. Anyone inadvertently overlooked should communicate with Mr. Ramsden at 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, S.W.

A Social at Manchester.

The dates of the next Manchester and N.C.O.S. show are October 24 and 25, writes Mr. H. Boothman, hon. sec. Will secretaries please note so not to clash. We are holding our social on Saturday, March 1st at the Clarion Cafe, Market Street, Manchester, when we are making a presentation to our president, Mr. W. A. Bladon. Friends will be made welcome.

No! No!

"Sub Rosa," writes:—A correspondent when discussing a colossal show for the Manchester area, suggested that all the fanciers in the district should put their heads together. He evidently thought they were short of staging. (In case some horrible joke lies concealed in the above paragraph, we hereby notify any finders that we disclaim all responsibility.—Ed.)

Always Ready to Oblige.

At Crystal Palace bird show please arrange at every refreshment stall at all times a full supply of warm milk, tea, cocoa, at a penny a cup and a teapot of tea at threepence—same as we get anywhere in the City. The Palace is a cold place in winter, and visitors require something warm and cheap, not public-house intoxicants, which have been to the front so many years at the Palace show.—The above is an exact copy of a post-card sent to Mr. Ramsden, just before the show, from Charlton, Kent. It surely evidences the unlimited confidence one and all place in J.W.R.'s ability to satisfy every possible want! During the show a scrap of paper was pushed under the door of the manager's office, on which was written in the same handwriting as appears on the postcard:—"This year we have been able to get tea, coffee, and cocoa all the day; thanks to Mr. Ramsden for same—A Many Years' Visitor."

SHOW DATES FIXED.

To secure insertion in this column, a guarantee that the show will be advertised in "C.B." to the extent of at least 25/- must be sent to our manager.

The Big Wood Owl.

Owls are birds that are not much molested near large towns, where, no doubt, they do good, as rats and mice are generally found around buildings, and form the principal diet of these birds of the night. Among the commoner kinds the Tawny or Wood Owl is, perhaps, the most interesting, in consequence of its colour and size. The eyes are large, and have a somewhat fierce expression, especially when seen in the twilight, or when the bird is seizing its prey.

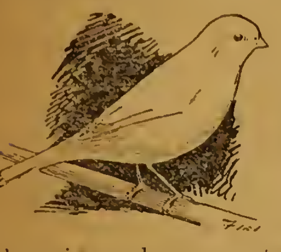
A Wingless Canary.

"Peter," who lives in a cage at Barnsbury County Council School, is looked upon as the most wonderful Canary in London. He has no wings. "No one will believe that he is naturally wingless," said Mrs. Adams, his guardian, to a representative of the "Daily Citizen," "until they see him. He was hatched like it. He is now two years old, and, as you can see, is a healthy, fine bird." "Peter" is a cross between a Yorkshire and a Norwich. As he hops from perch to perch it is easy to see how great is his handicap, for he frequently fails to get a footing and falls. He is not the least depressed, however. He eats well, drinks well, sleeps well, and sings beautifully; in fact, he is as happy as the day is long.

AMONG THE NORWICH PLAINHEADS AT THE PALACE.

A FEW NOTES AND SKETCHES FOR THE NOVICES: BY H. NORMAN.

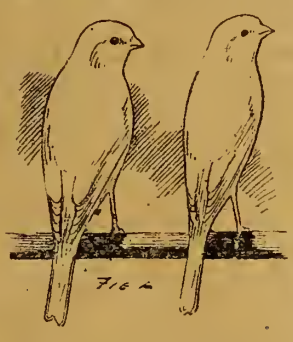
ALTHOUGH the graceful Yorkshire Canary has attained world-wide popularity, it has never been able to quite push the chubby Norwich out of the position it has always held with the fanciers of this country, and even during the last few years the Norwich birds have quite held their own. At the Scottish National was one of the finest gatherings ever seen in the North, and at the recent Palace Show, although somewhat deficient in numbers, the section contained some of the best exhibition birds of the day. While looking round the show it occurred to me that a few notes and rough sketches upon some of the exhibits would be acceptable to the many thousands of readers of CAGE BIRDS who were unable to visit the annual carnival.



The first thing that forced itself upon me was the superior type of the hens, as a whole, to that of the cock birds. Long-bodied, long-winged hens were hardly to be found; short, thick-set birds were in every class, not only leading, but well down into the tickets. This matter of superiority of type in hens is perhaps pretty general in the variety, and one pauses to enquire why it should be so. In the Norwich there is, perhaps, a greater disparity in size between the sexes than in any other variety, and we all know the difficulty in getting birds of size with reasonable type, and this fact may alone be sufficient to account for the chubbiness of the hens.

One Harmonious Whole.

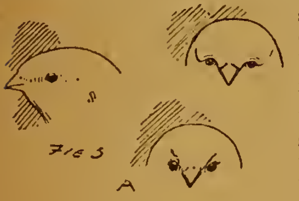
What is type? A blending of all the parts into one harmonious whole; the bird perfectly proportioned, perfect in outline, and graceful in carriage. Among the cock birds the trio that struck me as being nearest to the ideal in type were Mr. Baker's first prize buff cock, Mr. Joe Thomas's third prize buff cock, and Messrs. Gill and Pethick's first prize unflighted yellow. There may quite likely have been others equally as typical, but this trio I take to illustrate my meaning, and to convey to the novice in a rough manner some idea of a typical specimen. They possessed good heads, full without flatness, well-filled bodies, and an easy, graceful curve from chin to underflue, with well-carried wings and a perfect tail. In Fig. 1 I give some idea of the type of these specimens, allowing, of course, something for the difference in size and feather, one being a young yellow, and the others mature buffs.



A bird, however, may be quite a typical specimen when taking a side view of him, but may lack the width of shoulder and chest that is necessary to give the "wedge-shape" required in a good Norwich. In Fig. 2 I have endeavoured to illustrate my meaning. In profile these birds might be almost identical, but when looking down upon them the difference would be at once apparent. Out of this arises the question: Are our Norwich show cages quite suitable to the Norwich birds? Would a cage partly open at the top allow the bird to be seen with more advantage, and, consequently, materially assist the judge in making his awards? We have gone on from generation to generation without any change, although the bird has advanced considerably in bulk and genuine Norwich properties.

Where we Shine To-day.

Letting the memory run back a few years, it seems to me that the heads have very much improved in shape, and that the objectionable heavy brows are not seen so frequently, although I must admit that flat skulls and heavy brows are by no means quite bred out. In Fig. 3 I give a couple of sketches taken from birds on the bench to-day, one showing the flat skull and the other an abundance of heavy brow. When put in this bald way the novice may wonder that such birds were ever exhibited, but they both of them were so superior in other properties that this took them well to the front. I think, when recalling the birds exhibited during the past show season, one can complain more of lack of shape in the head than lack of width of skull and entrance; and even if a head is somewhat small, if it is nicely domed I think it is to be preferred to one possessing a wide flat skull. Now, if we were to take a pair of scissors and cut off the overhanging feather on the brow of some specimens we should, in many cases, shear the bird of his (apparent) width of skull. The head in Fig. 3 (marked A) shows a bird dealt with in this manner. These browy birds are certainly very deceptive and misleading, and many times appear to have a wider skull than a clean-headed bird, although, as a matter of fact, inferior to them.

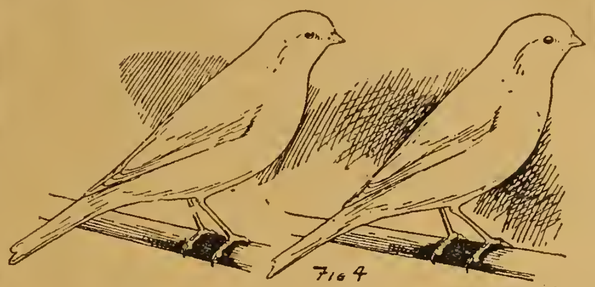


The standard of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club gives fifteen points for head, not an excessive number considering the difficulty of dealing with them in the breeding room, and getting good ones upon exhibition specimens. How seldom we see a bad-headed specimen winning, but we frequently see good-bodied birds with rather small heads standing lower down in the class. For the novice to pay particular attention to head properties exclusive of all others is, of course, wrong, but at the same time to breed with bad or weak headed specimens year after year is to make it impossible to get higher in the prize list than formerly.

The value of a good head I have tried to illustrate in Fig. 4. One is a sketch of a bird shown at the Palace, with a typical body, but failing a bit in the size of head. The other is a sketch of the same bird with a good head put on it. Of course, I quite know it is impossible to ensure having the birds exactly as we want them, but as the pairing-up time is now upon us we should give our earnest attention to the mating and strive to get as near the ideal as possible.

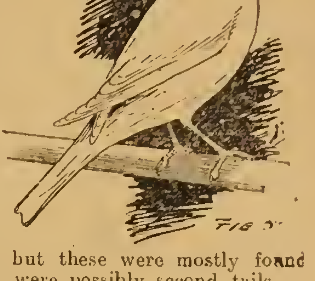
A Long Neck a bad Blemish.

A short or a long neck on a bird makes almost as much difference in the general appearance as does the head. Some of our present-day birds are quite ideal in this respect, and I found it difficult while looking through the birds to find a long-necked bird to illustrate. Buffs are naturally shorter-necked than yellows; therefore one can easily understand why double buffing improves this point.



A few years ago bad wing carriage was common, but recently it has been much improved, and we frequently see birds quite ideal, with wings tightly braced to the sides, and meeting feather for feather. There is a diversity of opinion respecting what constitutes bad carriage of flights. Nearly all birds occasionally cross the tips of the wings, but one can hardly call that "bad carriage." In my humble opinion what constitutes bad wing carriage is when the flights are badly crossed, and remain so while the bird is at rest or moving from perch to perch. Some birds, I find, seldom cross their wings excepting when on the move. I have endeavoured in Fig. 5 to illustrate a bird possessing really bad wing carriage; some are even worse than this, and quite useless for exhibition. Good wings should be striven for, as nothing gives a more finished appearance to a show bird than tightly-braced flights.

When writing upon carriage one must not forget the carriage of the tail. This, to my mind, is of equal importance to that of the wings, although the standard gives ten points for good wings and five for the tail; but then, as someone may say, a bird has two wings and only one tail, so possibly that accounts for it. Anyway, dropped tails are an abomination, and not to be tolerated in an otherwise good specimen. The proper, or, I might say, the most graceful, carriage of the tail is above the line of the back, that is, slightly "cock tailed" (as in Fig. 6), something after the manner of our friend the Sparrow. Many birds drop the tail when at rest, but carry it well when on the move; one can hardly call this bad carriage. I must say that bad tails were not very plentiful at the Palace. Here and there one found birds with rather long ones, but these were mostly found in the unflighted classes, and were possibly second tails.



Something Novices are Apt to Overlook.

I feel I cannot close these notes without reference to quality of feather, as it is a point frequently overlooked by novices, although it plays such an important part in the race for premier honours. The standard allows fifteen points for quality, equal number with that of the head. Now, although this seems to be a heavy percentage of the hundred points required to make up the ideal show bird, I venture to say it is none too many. In nineteen cases out of twenty our winners are birds of good quality—they may fail in some other point, but do not in quality—and good quality will frequently bring a bird well to the front (especially when combined with high condition) even although it may be somewhat lacking in other properties. Therefore I would advise novices in their mating for the coming season not to neglect this valuable point. Birds possessing good quality of feather are always a source of pleasure to their owners, while the coarse, and ofttimes loose-feathered, birds are frequently hidden away in a corner of the bird room, out of sight.

I might possibly have made these notes somewhat more interesting had I taken certain birds and given their positions and the owners' names, but I refrained from doing so, as we cannot all see eye to eye when looking at live birds, and my views would probably have not quite agreed with those of the owners.

By J. STEEL (Dalkeith).

DO your views on proximity apply to the Bullfinch, as I am told that keeping a male Bullfinch within hearing of a hen is fatal to your chances of getting her to accept the attentions of a male of any other species?

I have myself found the monotonous calling of two separated Bullfinches rather more than my better half would tolerate, and till last year always adopted the isolation system. On this occasion I persuaded a lady who had the previous season bred pure Bullfinches to allow me to substitute a Goldfinch for the cock Bully, and notwithstanding the presence of the latter in an adjoining aviary, unpaired and only separated from her by a wire division, she had Hybrids to the Goldfinch, incubating and rearing them unaided, this being the only instance I have recorded of a hen Bully doing so. Yet, despite this instance, I favour isolation of Finches from sight or hearing of the opposite sex of their own species.

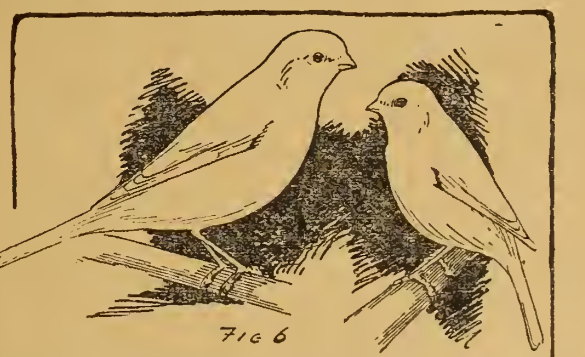
To what do you attribute the high percentage of deaths in nesting Hybrids?

When "The Good Die Young."

I have failed to find the breeding of dark Finch-Canary Hybrids attended with an abnormally high mortality. With light varieties, however, I have experienced myself, and heard many corroborate the truth of the saying, that the "good die young." A comparison with the mortalities in breeding Darks strengthens my convictions that this is in a measure due to weakness inherited from the Canary parent, such a state being very common in light Muling stock. In Hybrids between two Finches, and in particular those which have the Bullfinch as the maternal parent, the death rate is indeed very high. Two reasons may be assigned for this, the first being that Hybrids have a lower standard of vitality than a pure stock. The abnormal number of Hybrid eggs which, though fertile, fail to hatch out, proves this. The second is the change in the composition of the food supplied to the nestling from that which is supplied in a state of nature. Some breeders attribute the failure in rearing Hybrids to the difficulty the foster parents have in feeding, by reason of the "wobbling" of Hybrid nestlings. Anyone who has hand-reared nestlings can hardly have failed to notice that an inability to hold the head up, or steady, for the period necessary for feeding is the first sign of debility in a nestling. I therefore look on this as an effect rather than a cause, and it is cause I am asked to deal with.

What method would you recommend as most likely to rear Hybrids?

Transferring the eggs or young to the nest of one or other of the species from which they have been bred, and allowing the wild foster-parents to rear them in the open. No doubt many breeders lack facilities to adopt this course, though for my part I would rather entrust them to the care of another who had, than risk losing them. The other course is to supply an abundance of such succulent seeds as the species are known to favour, and a supply of green-fly, or blight, to such as can be induced to partake of it. I have had hen Canaries which were very fond of green-fly, and such are very valuable as fosters for Hybrids. I have known breeders who eked out the ordinary food supplied by the Canary with a supply of green-fly and squeezed-out mealworms, administered by hand, two or three times daily.



Live ants' eggs are also very useful; some Canaries can be induced to partake of these, in fact, I believe they could accommodate themselves to a diet consisting largely of certain insects, and have no doubt that such hens would be very good feeders for Hybrids.

What species have you found most reliable in parental duties?

Greenfinch, Siskin, and Linnet. I have known a Canary breeder rear hen Greenfinches for use as feeders, and he averred that they were better and more reliable than Canaries. I have repeatedly put Canary eggs into Greenfinches' nests, and I never failed to get strong, healthy youngsters by so doing.

What sort of nest do you advise for hen Bullfinches, and what do you supply as building material?

I favour a rather antiquated pattern, of which I learned from that grand old Hybrid breeder, Mr. Mann, of Kirriemuir, many years ago. It is made by hammering a depression in a turf and cutting out to about six inches square (or diameter, if preferred round), and inserting sprays of box, palm or yew round three sides of same. These, when hung up on the ordinary nest boards, are greatly appreciated by Bullies, and the green sprays provide her with privacy. As the nest of the Bully is a rather coarse affair, I provide her with the foundations of such nests as Greenfinches and Hedge Sparrows; as a lining she is very pleased with short lengths of bass, such as gardeners use for tying up flowers.

CANARY QUERIES.

THE NORWICH SHOW CAGE (W. V.).—The size of a standard show cage for Norwich is 12in. long, 11in. high, 5in. deep. In colour the inside should be a light blue—a Hedge Sparrow egg blue, or a sky blue. The latter is called a blue-grey by many painters and colourmen. The outsides and the wires should be painted black.

GIVING COLOUR FOOD (F. B. C.).—(1) It is quite useless giving colour food to Canaries at this season. It is only effective whilst the birds are moulting. At that season you give the colour agent in egg food, or any other soft food you use in place of egg food. To get a good, sound knowledge of the subject, send 3½d. to our manager for the booklet on "Colour Feeding," which gives much more detailed information than it is possible to do here. (2) About the end of July or August is the time to begin giving colour food; that is, just before the birds start to moult.

BREEDING OUTDOORS (E. T. W.).—You give me no idea at all what sort of convenience you have outdoors, nor of the nature of the locality. If your idea is to simply hang the breeding cage outdoors exposed to the weather, and endeavour to breed Canaries in this way, then I say without hesitation wait until next year when the indoor convenience will be at your service. On the other hand, if you have a dry and fairly well lit outhouse, an open shed, or even a snug corner well sheltered from wind and rain, there is no reason why you should not succeed in breeding with a pair of common birds which have been kept hitherto under quite normal conditions of temperature. This would give you a little practical experience to start with next season. If you attempt this, do not place the birds out until the weather gets mild and settled at end of March. You would find particulars about outdoor breeding in Part III. of "Our Canaries."

CANARY QUERISTS

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

TO GET CRESTBREDS (F. Wood).—You say you mated a Crest cock last season with a Norwich plainhead, hoping to get some Crest-breds from them. Was this because you were under the impression that it is necessary to mate thus to breed Crest-breds? If so, you are mistaken, as the Crest-bred is bred intimately with the Crested variety, and has, in fact, as much Crest blood in its veins as the Crested birds. A crest and a crest-bred is the usual mating, and from these birds you get both Crests and Crest-breds, and as a rule some of each in every blood, although exceptions occur and you may get a brood consisting of all crested birds, or one with all crest-breds. The two young you have are really cross-breds, and it is scarcely possible to advise you how to mate them this season, without a very full description of them. If they are small in size, as is to be expected, you should mate them to birds with plenty of size which have been bred from double-buffs. If one has a neat and well shaped crest, with no bareness or roughness at back, mate it again to a crest also having a nice-shaped crest, free from splits, bare places and roughness, and the other mate with a crest-bred of good size and substance, and as much headgear as possible. The head-feather should be long and broad, protruding over eyebrows, and should reach the end of the beak when turned back from just behind nostrils. A broad, arched skull, and a short stout beak are advisable.

SIZE OF PERCH (A Constant Reader).—The sample of perch you sent is of the correct shape for the comfort of the birds which have to use them. In size they would be very suitable for the larger breeds such as Lancashires, Crests, etc., but for medium and small breeds, say, from Norwich downwards, I should prefer having them a trifle smaller. Even with the larger breeds, where two or more perches are in each cage, I should prefer having one of the thinner perches, to give the birds variety of "grip." You can buy perches ready made, save for cutting to proper lengths, of most large dealers, if it is worth while. Surely you could easily whittle perches out of the timber from grocers' discarded packing boxes.

SONGLESS ROLLER (Southport).—(1) You will get the powdered grain of paradise from any good chemist. (2) I'm afraid the prospects of this bird are not very rosy. Give a diet of plain canary only with a liberal supply of green food for one week, and every second day add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea, and six drops of syrup of rhubarb to the drinking water. After this go on feeding as advised in last reply for three or four weeks, and keep a little of the paste as previously advised in the wires for him to peck at. A mealworm a day would do good also, if available, either killed and fixed on the end of a perch, or minced and mixed in the soft food.

LOST VOICE AND FAINTING (H. W.).—If the bird only ceased singing when its companion was removed from the room, it is more in the nature of an idiosyncracy than actual loss of voice. It would begin again if its companion were returned to the room, or, probably, if any other singer were in the room, and it may also begin again in a week or two hence without either of these inducements. See that it is kept quite free from cold draughts and damp, and you may try adding twenty drops of whisky, six of glycerine, and a small chlorate of potash lozenge to its drinking water daily for a week. The fainting is the result of a highly-strung nervous system. It is, however, strange that it should faint when it has a bath. Does it bathe voluntarily, or do you mean that you spray it, or otherwise force the bathing process upon it? If you do, you must cease doing so, and let it bathe voluntarily or not at all. Only studied kind and gentle treatment are likely to be of any avail in assisting it to overcome this nervousness. When cleaning the cage, or doing anything about it, go about the work quietly and methodically, making as little disturbance as possible, and always leave some choice tit-bit of food or greenstuff behind so that the bird will grow to associate the work with some coming luxury, and forget to faint.

MEDICINES FOR HEALTH (J. S. G.).—When you have a Canary in good general health and condition the best kinds of medicines to give it to keep it in health are none at all. You appear to be under the impression that Canaries can be preserved in health only by constant dosage with drugs and nostrums. There is no greater error, and no more certain way of ruining the health of any Canary than to be continually pouring drugs down its throat. A plain, wholesome diet, pure fresh water, absolute cleanliness, and healthful surroundings—not hanging a bird in a window, near to, or over, burning lights in the evenings, or in cold cutting draughts—and a supply of clean gritty sand in the cages, are all that are really essential to keep Canaries in good health and condition, and if you fail to preserve their health on these lines, it is due to some error of management. You should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from our manager. This should enable you to keep them in perfect health without constantly resorting to drugs.

MEDICINE OR FOOD? (T. E. W.).—I do not regard the seeds you name as having any medicinal properties at all, properly speaking, for Canaries. They are nothing more than different items of food, and can no more be termed medicinal in the proper sense than bread and cheese and beef can be termed medicinal for humans. Considered as foods, maw is full of a bland oil which seems to have a soothing effect on the stomach and intestines, and is useful to help to correct looseness of bowels. Teazle is an oily seed with a slightly bitter principle, of which the birds are fond, and which acts as a mild appetiser. Niger is a very oily seed which is peculiarly attractive to the birds, and tempts appetite. If given in excess, it is often accused of "rotting the liver," etc.—the rot! See reply to "Arthur" last week. Gold of pleasure is another very oily and stimulating seed useful for bringing backward birds into condition. German rape is rich in fats and heat-forming qualities, which makes it an ideal staple in combination with canary to counteract the starchy nature of the latter. Millet is of little feeding value, and therefore useful to help to reduce birds in too fat condition. Linseed is another very oily and fattening seed, which should be used in very small quantities only at any time, and is chiefly useful at the end of the moult, when the oil imparts a finish and bloom to the new plumage.

MOVING BREEDING CAGE, and DANDELION (E. W. U.).—(1) It depends very largely upon the temperament of the birds whether it would be wise to turn the cage into a brighter position on dull days when the birds are going to nest. Some birds would be put backwards for a day or two by doing so; others would not notice it at all. If the birds seem quite steady and tractable, you might try it. When they have young, however, as long as all is going well and the parent feeding, leave well alone. (2) If the birds are disturbed and keep "on the go" as long as the lights are lit in the evenings, you might throw a cover over cage front, say at about 9 p.m. When doing so, and also when putting lights out, be careful to see that the birds are in their usual places—at roost on nest or perches, as the case may be. This precaution may prevent a casualty when young or eggs are in the nest. (3) If you have a small garden, the wonder is that you should wish to buy dandelion seed to cultivate. It grows uncultivated almost everywhere. Your best plan is to take a little expedition into the nearest field, lane, or hedgerow, where you cannot fail to find plenty of roots just beginning to throw out leaves and buds. Dig up one or two of these roots bodily and transplant them in a sheltered sunny corner of your garden, and you will soon have sufficient leaves to last you until the growing season generally is a little more advanced.

YORKS-ROLLER CROSS (P.H.M.).—Undoubtedly the young from a Yorkshire cock and a Roller hen will give you a better singing bird than the pure Yorkshire if—and this is an "if" that counts—the hen is from a good singing strain, and the young cocks are trained under a Roller cock which is a good singer and free from glaring faults. As you do not wish to go in for trained Rollers you would find pure Rollers, untrained, or Border Fancies the next best thing.

RAPE SEED (G.B.B.).—No. 1 is a very nice sample of the rape used for high-class Roller contest singers, and is suitable for the best trained and valuable Rollers. No. 2 is a good sample of ordinary summer rape and quite suitable for any class of canaries. Where price is an object it would form a good substitute for No. 1 for feeding Rollers, and, of course, if price no consideration, No. 1 may be used for common or ordinary canaries. Both samples are quite reasonable in price.

DOES NOT SING (Constant Reader, Worcester).—It may be simply an idiosyncrasy, as there are many cocks which depart from the general rule and stop singing when placed near a hen at this season. If the bird appears sound and well in health you need not worry about him, as he will doubtless breed all right at the proper season, though it is doubtful if you will get any song worth mentioning from him. Treat him for the next month as advised to "N.L.W. (2)" last week. By the bye, placing a lighted candle in the aviary may be an excellent method of testing it for draughts. But remember that such a test only applies to the moment, so to speak, and may not reveal temporary and occasional draughts, which are the most dangerous, and which may only occur when certain doors or windows are open, or even when the wind blows in a certain direction.

TYPE OF ROLLER (A.B.C.).—The best type of song is very largely a matter of individual taste, so I cannot presume to select any particular type as IT. But as a rule the so-called Siefert or St. Andreasberg type, which has a good variety of "changes," gives the most popular satisfaction. It is very late now for buying songsters. The type of the bird varies from a rather slim bird to a neat chubby little fellow similar to a miniature Norwich. They are quite small, much smaller than Norwich, and of a very pale washed-out colour. Type, colour and markings are not studied in this breed; singing abilities are everything. I have not used the particular food you name, so cannot dogmatise about it. I should prefer to limit its use to substituting is for egg-food out of the breeding season.

OUT OF SORTS (W.P.).—I'm rather afraid this bird is "breaking up," and you will have to keep it in a fairly comfortable place to pull round. Do not overheat it, but still keep quite off the chilly cold side. Do not expose it to heated impure air, nor to sudden extreme fluctuations. Give a staple diet of plain canary only, and every second day half a teaspoonful of scalded rape. On the alternating days give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a morsel of green food four times a week. Limit the diet to this for three or four weeks, as may appear necessary from the condition of the bird. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, six of glycerine, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a three-penny piece every second day for a week. Afterwards give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

BEFORE AND AFTER (A. Bowell).—I can gather nothing definite from the very meagre details you give. You merely say the hen showed fight when putting her with the cock, and now seems thick and ill. Presumably you mated the hen a little over a week ago, and considering the weather we have had since then, and the fact that the hen seems to have been in forward condition it is not unreasonable to assume the slight "illness" may be due to the hen being near laying. If this is the case matters will have righted themselves by now, or the hen will be beyond the reach of help. Your impatience in mating the birds at this early period is partly responsible for the trouble. In case the hen is still alive and not nesting keep her in a comfortable temperature, free from cold draughts, add 30 drops of whisky to the drinking water for a few days, and give a morsel of bread and milk, sprinkled with niger seed each day for a week, and meantime write again and give more particulars about your feeding and management, and symptoms shown by hen. Also say how far she has progressed with nesting operations. You would be well advised to invest in a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our manager would send you for 7d. post free, before the season gets more advanced.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT BIRD? (D.P.H.).—Mr. Page regrets delay in giving you a full reply, but it has been unavoidable. A definite reply will be given you in our next issue.

BIRDS FOR SMALL AVIARY (A. Bowell).—It all depends on the space. The birds you name should agree together fairly well if the aviary is not overcrowded, but Budgerigars can never be reckoned safe company for Finch-like birds. Sooner or later mishaps occur and maimed birds are found about. You had better send me the size of the aviary and state whether it is an indoor or outdoor one; also do you want the birds to breed, or merely as a few pets? On receiving these details I can give you a definite reply.

WILL THEY AGREE? (C.B.).—Budgerigars are never safe company for long together with Waxbills and the small ornamental Finches. The other birds will agree well together, and you could put with them into the large cage one pair each of Zebra Finches, Orange-cheeked and Golden-breasted Waxbills and Silverbills, some of which should breed if you put up one or two rush nests, a Hartz travelling cage, and a cokernut shell nest or two. The same dietary will suffice for all. Our Nutshell, "Waxbills," would assist you and supply many details space does not permit of here. (2½d. post free from our Manager.)

GLASSHOUSE AVIARY (Ragtime, Bolton).—A glasshouse cannot have an even temperature, this being as variable as the weather! Still, you can successfully use it for the purpose, but you must line all uncovered glass on the inside with half-inch mesh wire netting. One end of the roof should be covered with felt over the glass; choose the part which gets least of the sun. Under the glass portion plants (in the ground, not pots) some half-hardy evergreens, which creeps up the wall if there is one, but if there is glass all round the house then the north or east side should be covered with felt. Very little moisture would be required for the plants, planted in the ground and they could be regularly sprayed during the summer to keep them clean, at such periods as they did not contain nests. Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Java Sparrows, Bib Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Spice Birds, Silverbills, Bengalese, Common and Green Avadavats, Golden-breasted and Orange-cheek Waxbills, would form an interesting series, with some nice range of colour. Napoleon and Madagascar Weavers would give a little extra brilliance. I expect the Budgies helped themselves too freely of the fattening seeds supplied for mules, etc., and that they were over fat and appoplexy or something similar carried them off.

PRICE FOR PARROT (K.W.).—You do not say what kind of Parrot, so how can I answer you? A newly imported Grey Parrot, 15/- to 25/-; one that is in good plumage and been in England a year or more, 50/- upwards; one that has been in England a few years and is talking, £5 upwards, according to its vocabulary. As a rule Parrots soon begin to try to say words, and then go on adding to their vocabulary continually. I can tell you nothing about your bird till you tell me what kind it is.

BREEDING JAVA SPARROWS (D.A.).—The Grey Java Sparrows are very irregular in the way they go to nest in captivity, some pairs doing so readily and other occupying an aviary for years without attempting to nest, so that you see it all depends on the individual pair you get hold of. Most certainly your success is probable as Grey Javas have been bred in cages. I should advise you to give them the larger case and put a coco-nut husk at one corner, and a small box, about six inches square, with an oval hole in the front for entrance, at the other corner, and leave the birds to themselves. Hay, long grass and a little moss will suffice for nesting material. From your details you evidently have a true pair, and your dietary is about right, but some individuals are fond of a few crushed oats and a little paddy rice. Green food, grit and cuttlebone to be regularly supplied.

LOVEBIRDS (A Novice).—The bird you describe is the cock Madagascar or Grey-headed Lovebird; the hen is all green, without any grey on the head. They breed in captivity in the aviary, but are not likely breeders for a cage. Diet: Canary and white millet, a millet spray and a few oats occasionally; green food, grit, cuttlebone, and water must be regularly supplied. When they show signs of going to nest, if you put in a branch with leaves on, they will cut up the leaves, strip off the bark, and carry into the log or box, and construct a nest therein. Do not meddle with them during incubation or while they are feeding the young; it will be quite time enough to clean out the nest after the young have flown.

BUDGERIGARS (Ada Jones).—I take it your birds are quite fit and in good plumage, but you are disappointed at their not breeding. You give me no idea of the size of your cage, nor yet whether it contains only one or both pairs. Certainly a cage which you cannot get a husk into gives one an idea as being too small, and if you have two pairs you must have two husks, or both pairs will fight for the husk, and there will be no breeding husk. It is quite possible to cut a hole in the end of the cage, push the end of the husk through, and secure it there; but Budgies often eat their way through the bottom of the husk, and you may ultimately find them loose in your room unless you cover the husks with netting. I think you had better get our "Nutshell Budgerigars," 2½d. post free from our Manager. This describes suitable cages and tells you all about them. They should certainly breed this spring if you can give them a sufficiently roomy cage. Under the conditions of cage life they sometimes take a full season to settle down. This has evidently been the case with your pair.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

WHAT TO KEEP (Tobacco).—(1) I would like a little more information as to your locality, size of aviary, etc., before replying fully, but I will name a few:—Long-tail Grassfinches, Alario Finches, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Bib Finches, Cape Canaries, Combassous, Diamond Finches, Cuttharoats, Zebra Finches, Silverbills, White and Grey Java Sparrows, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins Spice Birds, Pekin Robins, Common and Green Avadavats, Grey, St. Helena, Orange-cheek, and Golden-breasted Waxbills, Napoleon, Red-billed and Madagascar Weavers, Paradise and Queen Whydahs; the Pin-tailed Whydah is usually very pugnacious in captivity. (2) In the south yes, but in the north their surviving the cold, fog, and wet of our winters is very problematical. (3) Usually three to five months, but the period varies somewhat with the respective species.

GREY PARROT (H.B.T.).—The tincture of opium is quite in order as you have been giving it, and I should continue it at intervals. I should also give, say, three doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in the usual supply of drinking water—with three days between each dose. I should also advise moistening its biscuit with a mixture of Parish's Chemical Food and sweetened with water in equal parts; also keep a supply of cuttlebone in the cage. Is this bird getting grit? If not, give it a pinch daily, but give it cautiously at first, as if a bird has been deprived of it for some time it is apt to take more than is good for it at first. If the bird is drinking abnormally do not leave the water in the cage, but permit it to satisfy its thirst, say three times a day. Report progress a fortnight hence.

YOUNG BLUE-FRONTED AMAZON (J. Reid).—Do not give any more magnesia for a time; also do not leave the drinking water in the cage, but permit the bird to satisfy its thirst three times a day. Dissolve 5 drops of tincture of opium in a tablespoonful of sweetened water. Keep this tightly corked in a bottle and put one teaspoonful of it in the bird's drinking water (only use 2ozs.) daily so long as it lasts. It should be well shaken before taking out the required quantity—and the drinking water should be well stirred up each time you offer it to the bird. When you have used up the opium mixture resume the hypo-phosphates. Keep a piece of cuttlebone in the cage. Diet and general treatment to remain as per our last reply. Report progress in another three weeks.

TO GO WITH ZEBRA FINCHES (P. A. Rainbird).—I do not advise any of the birds you name. Budgerigars are not merely "spiteful," but dangerous to small Finches in a limited space. If you hang up a coconut husk or a Hartz travelling cage, after removing all fittings and perches, and cutting away two of the bars to form an entrance hole, the Zebra Finches should breed. Pairs each of Avadavats, Orange-cheek and Golden-breasted Waxbills, would not only look charming, and agree with the Zebra Finches, but would probably breed if several rush nests were put up for them. I fear both the Goldfinches and Pekin Robin would interfere with the Zebra Finches' eggs if you included them. All the birds I have named should thrive on the same diet.

WHEN TO PUT OUT OF DOORS (G.H.L.).—If your aviary is fairly well sheltered, the birds can go out the first week in April, as they have been kept in so low a temperature, but you must be guided by the weather. Further, whether your county is a northern or southern one might make a little difference one way or the other, but, given an ordinary spring, for birds kept as yours have been, it should be safe to put them out about the first week in April. The Whydahs and Saffron Finches will be better in the Weaver aviary. The Paradise Whydah is to be trusted with Finches if put in before it dons the long tail plumes, but both the Pintail Whydah and Saffron Finches are reputably pugnacious birds, though amicable individuals do occur, but these are not the rule.

HILL MYNAH (C. Cooper).—These birds are almost omnivorous, but must have a liberal supply of soft ripe fruit (banana, orange, grapes, soft pear, apple, etc.), and some live insects daily, such as mealworms, beetles, spiders, etc. Also a supply of some good insectile mixture. They can also pick over table scraps, vegetables, and finely minced cooked meat—a little sweetened boiled rice, rice pudding, and bread and milk, can all be given to vary the diet. To be quite clear, the regular dietary should be insectile mixture (soft food), ripe fruit and live insects, the other items being supplementary. You will have no difficulty in keeping up a varied dietary. It should have a roomy cage, and the bird being a large eater, its cage needs constant attention to keep it clean and sweet. Water must be continually in the cage, and as soon as it is sufficiently tame it should be encouraged to take its bath out of the cage. You will soon be able to let it go in and out of the cage (of course with room windows and door closed) for exercise, according to convenience, a mealworm or two put in the cage, will cause his return when required. A newly imported bird must be kept for a time in a room having a fairly even temperature, but once established any room will meet its requirements that is light and airy, but not draughty.

EMERALD-SPOTTED DOVES (Emerald).—This species never has been common; in fact, has been very rarely imported, but quite a few have come to hand recently. It has been known for many years as the Emerald Dove (Chalcopelia Afra). In a state of nature it feeds on stone fruits and indigenous seeds, and berries. In captivity it will mostly live on canary and millet seeds, but wheat, dari, and small maize should also be offered. When in season I should offer stone fruit, and also let it have any other fruit it cared for, banana, etc. In a reasonably sheltered aviary, containing a shelter to which it could retire at will, it could be kept out of doors all the year round. Dr. Hopkinson, in his "Birds of Gambia," very properly calls this species the Rufous-winged Dove, and tells us that they are found in the busb, and that their food is mainly grass seeds. During the spring, summer, and autumn I should certainly supply seeding and flowering grasses of all kinds freely.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

THRUSH OUT OF CONDITION (Mansfield).—The only possible explanation is that you are not feeding and managing the bird properly. If you will get the "Nutshell" booklet on the Thrush (only 2½d. post free) this will put you right, and you will soon see an improvement in your bird's condition.

LARK FOOD (D. Mahoney).—You cannot beat the recipe I gave, in my opinion (others, of course, are a little cheaper). I expect you have not inquired at the right shops, for "Melox" is sold at all the corn and seed stores in my neighbourhood, and I am sure there must be hundreds of similar shops in Liverpool which stock it.

A BARE PLACE (M. M.).—It is a curious occurrence. You should anoint the place daily with a tiny smear of carbolic ointment, or, if you can get it, Kerol ointment. Do this for five or six days, then wait results for a fortnight, which I hope will be satisfactory. I think there must be some localised disorder of the skin. Warm the ointment to make it work freely.

LINNET NOT SINGING (H. L. Wray).—You should add gold of pleasure and sesame to the thistle, etc., mixture. You are feeding very well, however. Perhaps the bird is nervous in disposition, and has not settled down yet to cage life—am presuming, of course, that you are quite sure as to its sex. If a hen, that would explain the silence, of course. You can only wait until the early dandelion heads and leaves (I have plenty of the latter now in my garden, by-the-bye) can be obtained, also seeding groundsel tops, shepherd's purse, etc. A daily supply of these should soon bring the bird into stout song.

BREEDING GOLDFINCHES (J. Upton).—I can say with some certainty that the birds you describe would go to nest in your large cage, but it is extremely doubtful whether the hen Goldie would rear her young. A case came under my notice where Goldfinches were bred in a cage less in size than your own, but the eggs were transferred under Canaries, and five young were reared out of two nests, though two of these were only saved by the owner hand-feeding them, as the hen Canary ceased to attend to their wants, possibly owing to the lateness of the season (mid-August). I have found by repeated experiments that hen British Finches are not to be relied upon to rear their young in either cages or indoor aviaries, and I believe this is the general experience. The two remaining Mules must be hens; if cocks they would have been singing long before this.

A VARIED LIST (M. H. Booth).—(1) The Serin is really a foreign bird, and your questions respecting it should have been sent to our Mr. Page. It has a fair song, something like that of the Siskin. Chief seeds, canary and millet. (2) The Buntings care only for canary-seed, eating very, very little of any other kind. A little insectile mixture should be offered now and again, and I have found them relish ants' eggs, moistened with milk. Live food, according to season, is essential. The Reed Bunting does well in confinement, but is not one of the easiest of birds to get steady, as a rule. (3) The sexes are alike in the young. The safe way to tell is to extract one or two of the head feathers and see whether they come black. With regard to the feeding of the Blackcap Warbler, consult Nutshell booklets 25 and 26—they will tell you all about the feeding of Softbills, both large and small. (4) There is no "Nutshell" dealing with the Serin. This bird cannot be shown in British classes. (5) Seed samples (reading from top to bottom) cornflower, sesame, lettuce, and dandelion.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

M.t.R.—Septic fever.

C. Barlow-Massicks.—Acute inflammation of the bowels.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

R. Gilholm.—Sorry, but we cannot open our columns to matters other than those which concern birds. For information on Aquariums consult the "Nutshell" booklet dealing with that subject (post free 2½d.).

J. Miller.—We will write the secretary on your behalf.

T. Cooper.—We have already had long correspondences concerning the "proper" song of the Linnet. You will find it given in the "Nutshell" booklet on this bird (post free 2½d.). Did you overlook the letters when they appeared?

Rock.—It cannot be managed until next autumn, we are afraid. We have from time to time issued a good number of coloured plates depicting the commoner species of foreign birds.

A Victim.—We will give your suggestion full consideration, but cannot quite see how it meets the difficulty of changed addresses. With regard to the last item you mention, why did you not conform to Rule 8 and let us take up the matter for you?

Concerning Net Making.

Sir,—I should be very pleased to have the information Mr. Palfrey is disposed to give concerning net-making in particular, also bird-catching. Hoping I am not trespassing too much on his generosity.

The Alleged Stained Bullfinch at Bathgate Show.

Sir,—Kindly insert the following in your next issue My bird, a Bullfinch, class 26, No. 13 (7s. 6d. selling class) was disqualified at Bathgate show on Saturday. The bird was honestly shown, and I have placed the matter in the hands of my solicitors.

Prize Money at Anfield, Everton Show.

Sir,—At Anfield, Everton, show last Boxing Day, we entered four birds at 1s. 6d. each, and were awarded 1, 2, and hc (the other class was cancelled). We became entitled to 15s. prize-money and 1s. 6d. back for the class cancelled. To our surprise they sent us 2s. 1d. We simply returned the 2s. 1d. and told them we were entitled to 16s. 6d. We had a postcard to say that our case was coming before the committee but up to the time of writing we have received nothing. There is no such thing as a "sliding scale" in their schedule, only "prize-money good; specials are numerous." We think that such rules as these do not encourage fanciers to support shows. Also, it has been reported in your valuable paper that the show was a success; if so, why don't they pay prize-money in full?

EVANS AND ROBERTS.

The Suggested Breeders' Cup for the Southern Norwich P.C.

Sir,—I was agreeably surprised, and also amused on reading "G. G.'s" suggestion in this week's CAGE BIRDS, seeing that both "G. G." and Mr. Cole were opposed to Mr. Garland's motion, which was one and the same as "G. G." now suggests. But I am very pleased that those grave remarks from the Chairman, when he said it would court dishonesty and bring disaster, did not have a very lasting effect on them. However, I hope "G. G.'s" suggestion will prove a great success, and I have to-day sent 5s. to Mr. Cole towards the breeders' cup fund, and I hope to get further donations. I would, however, suggest that the cup or cups should be confined to the unflighted classes, and that two birds only count at each show, and those birds be nominated. That would give the small breeder an equal chance with the large breeder. I maintain it is the small man and the novice that should be encouraged, for they are undoubtedly the backbone of the Fancy.

S. GILL.

The Norwich Plainhead Club Competitions.

Sir,—I thank Mr. Cunliffe for his reply to my letter of last week, stating that the list of winners appeared in one of your December issues. I have since discovered that the report synchronised with the week chosen by me for my annual self-denial period, and as I had to deny myself something, I eschewed all papers and periodicals. However, I am now in possession of the names of the lucky winners, to whom I offer my sincere congratulations. I didn't know that it was essentially a qualification to a successful secretaryship for one to be thick-skinned, and it is an appealing and satisfying thought that our secretary is in no fear of performing the equilibristic feat of "standing on his head," which he mentions at the foot of his letter. I can assure him, from personal experience, that it is a trying position for any man who values his dignity and his reputation. I know—for I recently visited a friend to help him celebrate the receipt of Mr. Lloyd George's 30s. insurance benefit. The worst thing I could ever wish Mr. Cunliffe would be for him to wake up some morning with a head like I had—he would have a jolly good idea of what it is like for a person to be standing on his own head. I sincerely hope that Mr. Cunliffe won't get his back up—to borrow an expressive term from "Old Pro"—at my playfulness, and that next year he has a hard-working and intelligent committee, a record number of new members, and more work than ever; further, may Burnley win the cup.

A (CONTRITE) MEMBER.

Sir,—It appears I am wrong in saying that it was Mr. Davies who asked what became of the novices after they had won their three firsts. As a rule, I am a painstaking reader of your journal, and how I came to associate Mr. Davies with the expression I can't explain, unless it was because the notice appeared in the issue following the painful episode I have described in my reply to Mr. Cunliffe. I gather from "Old Pro's" letter that he seems to be undecided whether to rend me in twain or to agree with everything I say. As to his saying there are only two grades in the N.P.C., champions and amateurs, can he tell me the difference between a novice and an amateur in the N.P.C.? I say they are novices, no matter what the N.P.C. calls them, and my suggestion was for amateur classes for those who had won their three novice firsts. He seems to think that I am advocating these classes for my own benefit. I shouldn't be eligible to exhibit in those classes even if they were provided. He doesn't seem to favour them, but it may appeal to him that there are some members who think of people other than themselves. Then he says that I get my "back up" at the man with the well-lined pocket. Not likely, as on the contrary I recognise such men as pillars of the Fancy, and am aware that not a few have benefited a little from such men, while at the same time the money-bags benefit much—it all depends upon the point of view. It is curious that "Old Pro" should mention a subject which has been in my mind some time; I mean that of the composition of the committee. I remember the "loud cry" that was raised some years ago for the novice to be represented on the committee. If I remember right, before then the committee consisted of "Old Pros," to the exclusion of the novice, and when the novice had a grievance and stated it, he was politely asked what the deuce he knew about governing societies, and if he persisted he was less politely told to go to pot. Since then he has been represented, with what result? Why, his classes have improved in numbers enormously. Again why? Because he has now six classes where he used to have only four. Only last year classes of 30 and even over 40 were the rule. Does "Old Pro" think if they had not been represented they would ever have been allowed six classes? The majority of the members seem to think that because a man is a successful exhibitor, and holds all the best birds, he is just the man for the committee. There is one member—there are others, but I will mention only one—who has, I believe, lately retired from the Fancy, and whose retirement I regret, who from the point of view of debate and the qualifications generally, stands head and shoulders above any one on the committee. "Old Pro" knows this as well as I do, yet that fancier has never to my knowledge—and I think I am correct—been voted on the committee. Because he is a comparatively young man, and hasn't won the N.P.C. cup a few times, he isn't good enough for the committee. Brains and intelligence don't count. These are points we members must study when the voting papers are sent out. That reminds me, the tell-tale of attendances should this time be sent out to every member with his voting paper. I hope members will study it when making their marks.

Wanted, an Automatic Fountain.

Sir,—Can any of your readers kindly oblige by telling me where I can obtain an automatic spray fountain for outside aviary.

JOHN M. MILLAR.

Linnet Singing in Lancashire.

Sir,—On January 18th, the secretaries met to arrange fixtures for contests at Leigh, Tyldeslely, and Pendlebury—January 25 and February 15, Pendlebury; February 1st and 2nd, Leigh; February 8th, Tyldesley. These dates were agreed upon. Now the Leigh Club has issued bills for a contest on March 1st. I mentioned this to the Pendlebury Secretary, and he stated that he would not agree, as they had already arranged their club match to take place on March 1st. After all this, I find from last week's issue that Pendlebury have changed their date to March 8th. In my opinion, it is no use making terms one with another. If Leigh are going to do this sort of thing it will be a big blow to Linnet fanciers. It seems to me that Tyldesley L.C. is not worth recognising, or they would have notified us of the change of date, Feb. 22nd. to March 1st.

ISAAC HARRISON

A Grand Tip to all Bird Breeders for the coming Breeding Season.—You have everything ready to make a good start; your valuable birds will soon be paired up; they will make their nest, lay their eggs, and hatch their young, then everything will for a few days point to your having a splendid first round; until quite unexpectedly you discover some of your hens not feeding their youngsters, which is without doubt the greatest handicap in breeding cage birds. Have you made any preparations to cope with this setback? If not, it's ten to one you will lose the lot. My tip is don't wait until your hens stop feeding, but get a "Filup" Feeder at once, and keep your young birds strong when you have the opportunity. Thousands of valuable birds were successfully reared last season with the "Filup" Young Bird Feeder, which otherwise would have died. Be on the right side, send at once for a "Filup" Feeder and have a successful season. Send P.O. for 1/3 to sole manufacturers, who will forward post free per return with full instructions for use. Address: C. H. GOODMAN & CO., 24, Bedford Road, Kempston, Bedford. (519)

New Society for Gorton and Openshaw.

Sir,—I have been asked several times by friends about forming a Cage Bird Society for Gorton and Openshaw. I shall be pleased if you will make it known through your valuable paper, that any one wishing to help in forming one, should forward their names to me:—

The Southern Norwich Plainhead Club's £10 10s. Cup.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Gill's letter of last week, I should like to point out that I am not the legal advisor of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club. Mr. Gill has attended (I think) all the S.N.P.C. annual meetings, and entered into all the debates of the same, hence knows as much about the position of the cup as I do myself. It is for the committee to say what the position really is, and without a doubt the Secretary would be glad to give Mr. Gill any information he may require.

E. BAKER.

The Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—In reply to "Wide Awake's" letter of the 22nd Feb., I should like officially state that all his remarks are grossly inaccurate. Why he should persist in his mud-slinging (at which he seems to be a past master) at Holywood I do not know. But as the secretary of the Holywood C.B.S., I would like to state that the member that had the Roller in the shutter cage had as many entries as any exhibitor in the show (member or otherwise) and as regarding it being a "one man show," I can vouch that every member of our society has a voice in all its affairs, and there is nothing carried out without every man's sanction. As Secretary of the Holywood C.B.S., I would be very much obliged if "Wide Awake" would mind his own business (if he has any). I entirely agree with "Semper Idem" that it is men of the "Wide Awake" breed that cause all the friction and bad feeling in the Fancy.

J. DUNWOODY.

Sir,—I was not altogether surprised at "Plainhead's" outburst in last week's CAGE BIRDS; after the gruelling he got the week previous from our other correspondents. In passing, let me say, Mr. Editor, that your paper was never as eagerly looked forward to by all the Fancy in our part of the country as it is at the present time (the clique excepted). If "Plainhead" was amused at the other correspondents, I was more amused at his lines in which he referred to myself "withdrawing." The cap that has suited him so well must surely be coming down over his eyes. My previous letter seems to have touched a tender part. Now "Plainhead," no more bluffing. You did tell me about the cliques that, in your opinion, existed. I also took your first entry (but it was a Border, not a Norwich, as you try to tell the readers of this paper) and not so very long ago. As for the judges that have won more prizes, well, there are four in the clique, and with the exception of one of them (that one is not "Plainhead") I have won more than the other three put together. Sir, I do not want to advertise, but this is truth against falsehood. Suffice it to say that three of them were little better than novices when they first judged. But, of course, when a man does not put his name to what he writes he can tell as many "tales" as he pleases. Where were all the clique winners at Buckhaven, Brechin, Cowdenbeath, Dysart, and other shows I could mention?—most of them failed to get into the white tickets. As I have said before, a great deal of good will result from this correspondence, and I appeal to the younger fanciers to stick to their hobby. Even the clique judges cannot, after this exposure, again risk themselves so openly. I hope show committees will give careful consideration to the selection of judges in the Border Fancy section. By doing so, they will help the Border Fancy section, which is the backbone of all shows.

JAMES LOGAN.

Sir,—"Plainhead" tries to make your many readers believe that if all the fanciers visited as few shows or exhibited as few birds as myself there would shortly be no shows in Scotland. Now "Plainhead," who wrote first on this subject, was a Fifer (which will be seen from back numbers of this paper), and the "Plainhead" of Feb. 22 hails from Linlithgowshire. As regards visiting shows. I have been at a few this season, and it did not take me long to pick out "Plainhead's" cages (and a few others also). As for entering birds I would enter as many as any man in the Fancy if I could afford it, but I am not blessed with a long purse, so I have to show only when I think I will get a run for my 1s. 6d.—where there is a fair minded man judging. I think if there were a few more like me, the "clique" would soon burst up. With regard to paying for a Border, I think I have paid as much as ever you did, and perhaps you'll agree with me when I tell you that you have purchased many at 4s. 6d. (and less) at bird stores in Edinburgh, and most of them turned out winners when showed under certain judges. I did judge a few club shows, but I am certain I gave the best of satisfaction, and hope to see the day when I will be judging at open shows and judge accordingly to my opinion. I shall not require to mark "soft" on an honourable fancier's cage when I have put a friend's inferior birds first or second. This was done last season at a show in Scotland when the judge was told the bird was a winner he had put back—this was his best way out of the difficulty. For the benefit of the shows next season, I should like to ask what good purpose it serves prominent exhibitors to use extra thick spars, coarse gravel from the shore, fancy twisted wires on top of their cages or drinkers, or to have their numbers tied on with boot-lace. It is strange that no novice has any of the above, unless when imitating the champions, which comes off sometimes all right.

The Date of the 1914 Palace Show.

Sir,—I am sorry to see Mr. Ramsden's letter in this week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, inasmuch as the alteration in the dates to include Thursday, will make, I believe, so little difference in the sale of catalogues as to be hardly worth considering, the large majority of the suburbs of London closing early on Wednesday. Cannot some other way be found so as to include Wednesday? Does Mr. Ramsden mean that the railway companies refuse to accept the birds on the Saturday evening, or is it impossible to get them dispatched on that day? I presume it is too much to expect fanciers to allow their birds to remain at the show from Wednesday to Monday morning?

H. C. PEERLESS.

Late Entries at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—With reference to Mr. J. W. Ramsden's letter: This gentleman makes the assertion that he "was compelled to return the entries of eight would-be exhibitors. Their entry-fees, with one exception, would have been extra profit to the show." I do not agree with him in this respect, for, if Messrs. Mason's and Smalley's entries had been accepted, together with my own, full prize-money would have had to be paid in the Cinnamon classes. This would be an expense to the show and not a profit. Moreover, I have only quoted three of the eight would-be-exhibitors. I have also received information that a Welsh exhibitor sent his entries on Jan. 28 and that they were accepted. Mrs. Tweedle, Mr. Smalley, and myself sent our entries on Jan. 27. Those belonging to Mrs. Tweddle were accepted, but the others were returned as being "too late." Now if this is a "National" show, why accept one lot of entries, and return another? Is this a personal, or does the show exist merely as a money-making concern? If Mr. Smalley's and my own entries had been accepted, they would have incurred full prize-money in four Cinnamon classes, viz., three champion and one novice. With reference to class 85, Cinnamon novice, as far as I can gather only four exhibitors were interested in this class, namely: Messrs. Andrew Bros., Mr. W. T. Manning, Mrs. Tweddle and Mr. Smalley. The two former-mentioned sent in their entries previous to closing date, but the two latter despatched their entries on Jan. 27, as stated above. However, Mrs. Tweedle's entries brought the class up to eight (the half prize-money limit). Had these been returned, the awards would have stood as follows: Messrs. Andrew Bros. first, second and third, Mr. W. T. Manning fourth. I also venture to say that if Mr. Smalley's entries had been accepted, he would have been first with his yellow bird. Can interfering with entries in this manner be termed "National"? In conclusion, I may say that country exhibitors make little or no profit at this show, as the two-shilling entry fee, and carriage expenses exceed prize-money in most cases. In addition to this they are subject to much inconvenience and risk, as the dates of show are very near breeding season, and their best birds are away from home a week.

Roller Fanciers in the Potteries

Sir,—An effort is about to be made by the Burslem and District C.B.S., to start a series of Roller contests. The first of which takes place March 15, at the Barnfields Inn. Mr. J. Tomlinson, of the Provincial Roller Society, has kindly consented to judge same. If any fancier would like further particulars, will he please apply to me, at 41, Pleasant Street, Burslem, or to Mr. W. Watson, 6, Paradise Street, Tunstall.

The Moult of British Birds in Captivity.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. W. E. Teschemaker's letter of Feb. 8th, I may say with regard to his first question that I have hand-reared softbills, and have never observed any change in the plumage by the edges of feathers wearing off. The Redstart and Whinchat moult at the usual time, and then have a partial moult about February (in confinement) a few feathers at a time on the head and breast. I reared a hen Redstart a few years ago, and looked in vain for a dark underflue at the throat, thinking it might be a cock, but presently it moulted its feathers, and the new ones were cream at the throat. I have kept many kinds of British birds, both hard and soft-billed, and have never seen any feathers shed their tips in the spring.

How to Prevent Show Birds Being Stolen.

Sir,—Seeing the valuable letter in Cage Birds about having small doors in show cages to prevent birds from being stolen, I can give you a good idea myself about this. Mr. Milne, of Montrose, was 1st and special, with a Norwich hen at the City of Glasgow Show one year, but the bird was stolen, and he could get no trace of it. I met him at the Montrose show and claimed three birds from him. I was taking the birds away with me, but to my surprise could not find a door in the cage to allow me to get them out. I asked Mr. Milne where the door was, and he stood and laughed at me. Then he took a small screw-driver from his pocket, took out the screw-nail at the back and drew up the cage-back! Then he told me why he didn't put doors in his cages.

Proposed Foreign Bird Exhibitor's League.

Sir,—A scheme is about to be promoted by which a much wider and more popular classification can be guaranteed at bird shows, so that owners of both common, as well as rare birds will be encouraged to compete upon reasonably fair grounds. A perusal of earlier show catalogues points to the fact that foreign bird exhibiting has not increased in popularity, and it is obvious that so long as exhibitors are only encouraged to procure and exhibit rare and expensive birds, potential competitors refrain from entering the arena. As much as we appreciate the work that has been done by the Foreign Bird Club (of which we are members) we are of opinion that it is necessary for conditions to arise under which possessors of commonly imported birds can exhibit their specimens with some chance of recouping their expenses and we venture to suggest that this can only be brought about by forming a league of bird-keepers who will make it their especial business to forward such a project. The advancement of foreign bird exhibiting in any direction means the advancement of avicultural knowledge, and to aviculturists as well as to exhibitors we especially appeal. A meeting of foreign bird-keepers will be held at the Inns of Court Hotel, High Holborn, W.C., on Wednesday, 5th March, at 7 p.m. prompt and we hope all interested will endeavour to be present. Ladies are especially invited.

The Claims of the Cinnamon Border Fancy.

Sir,—The demand for Cinnamon Borders has been exceptional, and with a good breeding season I should say the Cinnamon will be quite as plentiful as the Green. Can we not get more shows to give Cinnamon classes, separate from the Greens? They would certainly fill well. It is not for want of birds anyhow, but the way to draw out entries is to give a reasonable classification. I think the Palace Show officials should provide two Cinnamon Border classes at their show in 1914. They give four Green classes, so why not two for Cinnamons? At the Scottish National Show these classes always fill well. I wish "C.B." the success it deserves.

Roller Canaries at the International Exhibition.

Is Revision of the Standard Necessary?

Sir,—After dispatching my reports of the National and International Roller shows, I became acquainted with the fact that Herr. H. Frisch had also stated that we had no deep bubbling water tour, and that the water glucke was bell glucke. This will form a very interesting, debatable subject at the various Roller societies' meetings. It will be interesting to know through your journal what each club decides, whether to retain the standard we have all become so accustomed to, or whether it will be preferable to revise it. Apropos of the letter from Mr. Jas. Canning, I certainly was under the impression that I had made my meaning lucid concerning the faulty birds owned and exhibited by the novices at the International. It was a conjecture on my part that some fanciers, not being conversant with all the tours, their birds sing, exhibit them to get the judge's version of the name and value of these tours, and as the birds in question were not amongst the prize-winners, it bears out my first statement, that the birds could not have been exhibition specimens. It will be noticed that the points deducted in the three novice classes, all under different judges, compare very favourably with the deductions made in the other classes. Of course, it is understood that judges vary in their opinion as to the value of the different tours. The proper deep hollow glucke is far removed from the chop; the danger lies in what we now name flat glucke, delivered in an unmistakable choppy, clattering manner, and brought principally by birds that sing the hollow and the bell glucke. Mr. Massey, the well-known Bolton fancier, has been condemning the tour in question for some time, and he has asserted that it would be conducive to the chop. We have no standard for "piccolo" notes, and have no tour known by this name in our contest bird. It is agreed that the flutes are a resting, or breathing point, in a bird's song. Again I cannot see eye to eye with Mr. Canning when he condemns the bell notes. We have the hollow bell, bell roll, and bell tour. This latter is no favourite of mine, and the former are both good tours. I have written previously on the bell tour, and did not wish to appear biased; for this reason I omitted to mention in my Palace report that a bird in the novice class had a very objectionable sharp bell tour, which it seemed to delight in repeating. I am pleased to see that in Leigh, Lancs., the "spirit is willing" to form a Roller society; and there are other places I could name that would be no poorer for possessing one.

A Suggested Southern Border Fancy Club.

Sir,—I had the pleasure of meeting several Southern Border Fanciers at the recent Palace show, and in the course of conversation the possibility of forming a Border Fancy Club for the South was again mentioned. It is now over two years since letters appeared in the columns of Cage Birds, but at that time there were not enough breeders of the wee gems in the south to make a club a success. Since that date the Borders have been taken up by a great many fanciers, and are fast becoming as popular as the Yorkshire and Norwich, and it is thought by several fanciers that the time is ripe now to form a successful club, and that it would be a great help to further popularise this variety, and ensure better classification at our southern shows. Perhaps Mr. MacCuffie will move in the matter, as he mentioned he might do, also Mr. Norman being a breeder of Borders might give his opinion, with other fanciers who are interested.

Fred Moore.

The Date of Alnwick Show.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. R. Forster, allow me to inform him that if all societies were like South Shields there would be no cause to complain. When we fixed November 15th for our show we were under the impression that date was vacant. In a letter to me, Mr. F. charges societies with "cribbing." He says in the Cage-bird Union days they had to shift their date for our convenience, and to my mind quite right too, for we are one of the oldest societies in the Kingdom, and, as far as fixing dates is concerned, very pure at that. We want no one's date; but a few year's ago another local society took our dates, and we had to remove ours. No doubt to try and assist Mr. F., we shall endeavour to alter ours again. But allow me to remind you, Mr. Forster, that ours is on Saturday, not Wednesday, although we must admit that is rather too close. I wish Alnwick and all other societies the best of luck, but I can't help but smile when Mr. F. says because they have held some very successful shows on that date, we are trying to crib theirs. Their 1912 show surely could not have been very successful, for only a few months ago I sold a book of tickets on their behalf. Was Mr. F. trying for a double success? I hope it came off. When they reach the age of South Shields they can look back upon the time with pride and say "Good old Alnwick, we are assisting them who are unable to assist themselves." Shields has done this not once, but often. We have had our ups and downs, but we got out the best way we could, and never asked anyone for assistance.

PROPOSED BIRD-TRADERS PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

A Combine to oppose the oppressive tactics of the R.S.P.C.A. and the R.S.P.B. (See notes and reports on page 187).

Sir,—It is surely time we took concerted action to protect ourselves from the prosecutions and persecutions of these rival societies. Here we have a large and influential trade, with over 500 dealers in the United Kingdom, worried by inspectors, who admit they know nothing about birds, and who call vets. who admit they know less. Only last week, before Mr. Plowden, the "expert" of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds said a Lark was not a softbill, and the only difference he could give between a Lark and a Linnet was that the latter was smaller, "but both were built alike." Then, on Monday, before Mr. Hopkins, two R.S.P.C.A. inspectors admitted they knew nothing about wild birds; one had kept Canaries, the other "had a brother who kept Linnets," and the vet. they produced to prove the birds were filthy and suffering, admitted he also knew nothing about wild birds. This would be amusing if it were not so serious for the person who is charged, and who, if undefended, may be fined £10, as a person was only a few weeks ago, when the inspectors of the two rival societies were swearing against each other. Even if the defendant is successful, as Luer was, it costs anything from £10 to £20 to fight the case. Now, I think it is time something was done to fight these societies, who are not really out to prevent cruelty, but to gain convictions. In Ireland the R.S.P.C.A. is a society worthy of its name; it works with the vet. profession, and Professor Craig, head of the Dublin Veterinary College, assures me they strive to prevent cruelty, not to allow it, and then strain everything to get convictions. No one who has the welfare of pet stock at heart can object to any society doing all in its power to make the lot of captive birds and animals as happy as possible, but we do feel the unfairness of being harassed by people who admit they don't know anything about the subject they try to get convictions upon. I do hope the case of Moxey v. Jenkins and the R.S.P.C.A. v. Luer will be fully reported in your paper. In the first case, Mr. Plowden said "this case should never have been brought into Court. The officer tells one story in one case, and a totally different one in another, just as it suits his purpose to get a conviction or an acquittal." The P.C. called by the inspector (Moxey) totally denied that the birds had no seed or water, and Mr. Plowden gave £3 3s. costs. The second case was tried by Mr. Hopkins, who said, "This is an ill-advised prosecution, and I wish I had had the courage of my convictions and quashed it last week. I have had no proof of cruelty.. You think it is unlawful to keep wild birds in cages. It is not," and dismissed the case, with £5 5s. costs against the society. I think it is time we had a society for the prevention of these charges, to embrace every variety of pet stock keeper, so that when these inspectors call, one may be able to get expert advice how to combat their charges. I should be glad to see this matter discussed in your pages, and am willing to do all I can to arrange the calling of a public meeting to settle preliminaries.

Proposed Roller Canary Club for Leigh (Lancs.).

Sir,—I am requested to announce that there will be a meeting of intending members at the Globe Inn, Bradshaw Gate, Leigh, on March 5, at 7.30, when we intend to open a Roller Canary Club. All interested will be made welcome. I may also say that since it was first published in your valuable paper, I have had numerous letters from well-known fanciers that they will be willing to give us all the support possible to make this club a success. I hope that all fanciers who promised to become members will attend.

J. McAllister (Sec. pro tem.).

The Thirsk and District C.B.S.

Sir,—In reply to "Interested," I will follow on from where he finished. He says that a committee was appointed and a set of rules drawn up, but since that time nothing more has been heard of it, by many of committee. I do not know from what source "Interested" gets his information, but if I can enlighten him for the sake of the Fancy I am only too pleased to do so. Now the committee met on April 25th, and drew up a set of rules; that appears as far as "Interested" can get. On May 11th we held a Linnet singing contest, followed by a general meeting, Mr. T. Wood occupying the chair; notice of this contest and meeting was given by printed bills posted in various parts of the town. Rules were passed and adopted at this meeting. I then placed the rules in the printer's hands. After receiving rules from printer I called a meeting in August, for the enrolment of members, notice of this meeting being given by postcards delivered to the residences of those known to me, and by a notice printed in the columns of club notices in Cage Birds. I attended the place of meeting on the evening appointed, fifteen minutes before the appointed time, and waited about three-quarters of an hour after the time, and greatly to my surprise, no one attended. The Thirsk and Dist. C.B.S. is not dead, although up to the present we only muster three members (hardly enough to have a large committee) but shall be exceedingly glad to hear from "Interested," or any of his friends, committeemen, or otherwise, who would like to become members, the club is sound financially. I shall be pleased to answer any further questions, and I ask some of those who took an active part in the formation of the society to come forward and become members

WEST BROMWICH C.B-S.

Members' show, held at headquarters, Feb. 11. The turn-out of birds in point of numbers was very disappointing, although quality as usual was up to standard. It is curious that the members will not show, at least, the majority. The specials put up are of good value, and well worth winning, so why the hanging back? It has been said that meetings are not interesting enough, but I have taken particular notice that when anything is put up for their benefit, and we have tried time after time, the majority are conspicuous by their absence. I am afraid unless the management get better support, they will stop trying. This will be a great pity, as no society has more enthusiastic officials, always ready to put their hands down for the benefit of the society. Now, fellow-members, give your support at our next pair show on February 28th, and what is more, get new members, and so increase the competition. Don't leave it to just a few; give encouragement to the management, and let them see you appreciate their efforts. Mr. F. I. Weaver judged, and gave every satisfaction. Great Show to Wind Up the Season.

The annual show held Feb. 22 drew together a collection of close on 600 exhibits from most of the leading exhibitors in the Fancy. Mules were a choice lot; the dark Mules were a show in themselves. British were extra, some of the classes being very keenly contested, all the cracks being forward doing battle. Unfortunately, in this section, the judge, Mr. Arrighi (who judged even numbers), tested a bird in the presence of society officials, and disqualified the exhibit for alleged staining. This was a Bullfinch in selling class, shown by R. D. Parlett, of Sheffield. [A letter from Mr. Parlett referring to the matter appears in our correspondence columns.—Ed.] Shortly afterwards a protest was lodged against the F.M. winning Lesser Redpoll, and the judge, Mr. Leigh, tested same before officials, and again the exhibit was disqualified for alleged staining; this bird was shown by R. Perrie, Larkhall. We were pleased to see the grand arrangements made for the show. The staging being round the hall gave plenty of room; light was very good, and everything up-to-date. The officials, as usual, are comprised of well-known names in the Fancy, and worked hard to make the show a success. The Fancy is indebted to a worthy patron of the show, Mr. James Livingstone, who, when the show was down in funds last year, kindly entered the breach and guaranteed the money to run another show. Mr. Bald, the worthy president, was, as usual, to the fore, and Mr. J. Nicholson, vice, was a good 2nd. The secretary, Mr. A. Nicol, is the right-hand man of the society, and he carried his duties out to the entire satisfaction of exhibitors and colleagues. The committee, Messrs. M. Bald, Showler, Haldane, Strachan, Cain, Flood, Spence, Cowie, Cruickshanks, Fleming, and D. Sharp, were all there in their respective positions, and did their utmost to make the show the success it deserved. The show was well patronised by fanciers from all over the country, and sales were numerous. The judges were: Mr. L. J. Arrighi (in the place of Mr. J. Brown, who we were pleased to meet in the afternoon and to find again on the safe road to health), and Mr. J. D. Leigh, and after a trying task, their awards met with the approval of the majority of those present, and very few comments were to be heard.

The members of the South Moor Social Club and Institute held a members' show February 15 and 16. The cage bird section was held in the large club room, a grand place for a show, it being well lighted, very roomy, and free from draughts, and kept at a nice heat. This, their first venture, was well looked after by a grand body of fanciers. Messrs. G. Bates and T. Howe were stewards, chairman Mr. T. Shelly. The secretarial duties were carried out by Mr. J. Armatage, who is very obliging, and the society should be very proud of him. Entries came up well, some 75 birds being staged to perfection. Mr. G. Lane was judge, and his awards were satisfactory to all. We hear that these club shows are a great rage about West Stanley. They are increasing the membership of the West Stanley C.B.S. The show was a complete success; some well-known fanciers from a distance were present, and spoke very highly of the exhibits.

LONDON AND P.O.S.

Members' pair show and table show of Hybrids, British, and Foreign birds, held at the "Raglan Hotel," Aldersgate Street, Feb. 20. About 100 entries were staged, and quality was well represented. Mr. Heath judged the pairs section, and Mr. Fulljames the classes for single birds—British, Hybrids, and Foreign. The show was somewhat crowded, the birds being staged in a small room in place of the large room, which had been engaged, a misunderstanding which brought about some little inconvenience, but everything went off very well under the supervision of Mr. Law, the hon. sec., and the judges' awards seemed to meet with very little adverse comment.

NORWICH (17), an exceptionally fine class, and Mr. Heath was quite enthusiastic about the quality of the pairs staged: 1, 2, Hodder, both yell. ck. and buff hen, the hen in the winning pair being of quite outstanding merit; her all round quality was of the very highest degree; 2, almost equal in merit as a pair, but here the cock stood out as considerably the better of the two; both pairs mated to produce extra good progeny; 3, Campbell, buff ck. and yell. hen, the hen of very fine qual. and extra size; 4, Hodder, varieg. ck. and a beautiful yell. hen; vhc, Kilby; hc, Richardson; c, Mrs. Thynne. YORKS (7): 1, vhc, Salter, leaders yell. ck. and buff hen, very nice pair, the hen surpassing in qual; 2, 3, hc, Bullen; 2, varieg. yell. cinn. ck. and buff hen, cock an especially lengthy bird of highest qual.; 3, buff ck. and varieg. yell. hen, smaller than 2nd, but full of qual. A.O.V. (4): 1, hc, Mrs. Salter, yell. ck. and very nice, even marked buff hen; 2, vhc, Shapespeare, Lizards. MULE or HYB., PAIRS (7): 1, 2, vhc, Tatten, Goldie and Chaff., cock especially nice, hen tight feathered, and nice qual.; 2, Siskin and Twite, the cock a bit unsteady, but the hen an exceptionally good coloured, and well mkd. example of her species; 1, vhc, a Goldie and a Redpoll; 3, c, Hull, Bramble and Bullie, and Bramble and Canary; hc, Mortlock. The members of the L. and P.O.S. are evidently ambitious, and if offspring result from the mating of some of the pairs here shown, fresh records will be set up. NOV. NOR. (10): 1, vhc, c, Fleet, nice team, the hen of the winning pair being of exceptionally high qual.; 2, Kerr, buff ck. and yell. hen, a nice couple, only losing to the winners in qual. of feather; 3, Cooper, yell. ck. and buff hen, might have been higher but for the hen being a bit loose in feather. YORKS.: 1, Bamber, varieg. yell. cinn. ck., nice lengthy bird, and good cl. buff hen; 2, Ward, good qual. buff ck. and a nice yell. hen, only behind the winners in length; 3, Clarke, yell. ck. and buff hen, not quite so finely drawn; vhc, hc, Percival; c, Ward. METROPOLITAN C.B.A

Annual show of pairs, held in All Saints' Parochial Hall, February 15. Mr. G. Denham, the hon. sec., and his committee, are to be congratulated upon the hearty response to their appeal and labour in the shape of a rattling entry, and some splendid quality. Borders seem to be going quite strong with the members, there being a fine array of these dainty little birds, and some keen competition. Norwich and Yorks. also were very fine. The specials were allotted as follows: Champion diploma for best in show, Mrs. Thynne, with a topping pair of Norwich, a grand buff cock, equally good yell. hen; Mrs. Thynne also took special for best Norwich. Best Yorks., Mr. Clemants; Bord., Mrs. Denham; novice diploma, Mr. King. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and at the close presented the cups and other trophies to the winners by points during the year. Mr. Gardner complimented the winners in a few well-chosen words, and wished them renewed success during the coming season. He alluded to the pairs on show, and said he was of opinion that the mating of many of the pairs evidenced considerable thought and judgment in selection.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Sixth annual members' show of pairs matched for breeding, held headquarters, Spencer Hall, Dartmouth Park Hill, February 22nd, when that well-known and much respected judge, Mr. W. Shakespeare, placed the cards, and gave great satisfaction. The entry was not quite as large as usual, some of our old friends and patrons, Mrs. G. E. Weston, Mrs. Giddy, Messrs. Lovegrove, and others being absent, to the great regret of all the members. It is hoped that at the young stock show all the members will rally round once again and help to make Highgate and Hampstead what it was twelve months ago, and thus wipe out the great trouble through which the society has passed, and which I am pleased to say, it is emerging from successfully. The show comes out on the right side, thanks to the excellent work of the committee and hard-working secretary, Mr. J. Hyde. The quality of the birds was excellent, and in some of the classes the work of placing the birds was really most difficult. The attendance was good during the afternoon and evening. For the silver cup presented by Mr. G. E. Weston, most points were scored by Mr. J. Hyde. Other special prize winners were: Messrs. Cowie, Byne, Wills, Dann, Shorter, Bush, Walmsley, Bell, Carrington, Milsom, Shearer, and Kent.

BUCKHAVEN C.B.S.

Smoker held in the I.O.R. Hall, February 22nd, and proved a great success, Mr. A. Peters, president, in the chair. Songs, etc., were given by members and friends. The open show date was fixed for November 22nd. Judges were then nominated. The sec., D. Allan, resigned, and I have been elected in his place. A number of new members were made, and a vote of thanks to the singers, etc., brought a very happy evening to a close.—Wm. Foster, 105, Randolph-street, Secretary.

NORWICH P.H.C.C. OF IRELAND.

Meeting held in Clarence Place Hall, May Street, Feb. 19, Mr. Barclay presiding. There was a good turn-up of members to consider the rules drafted by the sub-committee. Some of the rules caused a great deal of discussion; in the end all were passed except rule 20, which read that cups were to be competed for by unflighted birds bred by the competing exhibitor. The latter part has been deleted. Rule books will be ready in a few days. —James Stewart, Sec.

QUEENS PARK AND DIST. C.B.A.

A very enthusiastic meeting was held Feb. 20, Mr. Clarke in the chair. Prize money and specials won at the pair show were presented by the Chairman to the successful exhibitors. The Sec., Mr. Lethbridge, junr., owing to pressure of business, etc., was obliged to relinquish the office, and Mr. H. R. Lowe, of 10, Station Road, Kensal Rise, N.W., to whom all future correspondence should be addressed, was elected pro tem. The programme for the following year was mapped out, and should prove highly interesting, and it is hoped that several new members will join before the Young Bird show, especially considering the highly prosperous financial state of the Society. An interesting discussion then took place as to procedure, and was amicably closed. The new Rule Books with the fixtures will be ready about March 1, and the Sec. will be pleased to send one to fanciers who might think of joining. It is a Society in which a novice can always be sure of good competition. Next meeting, Mar. 13, at Emmanuel Hall, Harrow Road, when Mr. J. Robson will give a lecture on Canaries. Visitors, including ladies, are cordially invited, and will be made very welcome amongst a warm-hearted lot of fanciers.

The following members were declared winners of the various competitions promoted by the Club: Open Competition, 1st prize, "The Shackleton Trophy," value £10 10s., together with a club medal value £1 1s., and Mr. Ramsden's silver-plated teapot, Messrs. Ogden Bros., with 126 points; 2, L. Dykes, 106; 3, J. Thomas, 87; 4, C. Morrison, 68; 5, P. Mason, 56; special most points with third birds, C. Morrison, 30 points. Amateur competition: 1, A. M. If all Yorkshire Union Societies desirous of our patronage will apply to the Sec. not later than April, we could allocate the same where possible at our first meeting in May; this would enable them to draw up their schedules, and forward same to the Union Secretary in time for publication in the Yorkshire Union handbook. Mr. W. Bedforth was elected a member. Several subs. are still unpaid, will members kindly give this their early attention, to enable the Treas. to present a satisfactory balance sheet at the annual general meeting.—E. Clegg, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE CANARY CLUB OF SCOTLAND.

The adjourned annual general meeting to discuss the question of closed rings, etc., was held in Neilson's Hotel, Glasgow, February 18. President Heggie was in the chair, and there was a good attendance. After a discussion, in which practically everyone present took part, it was carried unanimously that all birds in young bird classes competing for club specials and trophies must be rung. Birds not rung may compete in these classes, but will not be allowed to count points for the trophies. If nominated for club prizes, they must be shown in old bird classes. It was decided to raise a subscription to provide a novice trophy, the said trophy to be for most points gained in young bird classes throughout the season, three highest birds at each show to count. Several members intimated subscriptions to this fund. Mr. Gilbert Crichton offered a medal for competition among the novices, and it was decided to allocate same at next meeting. Decided to allocate open show patronage at our first feather show. Clubs applying for our patronage might note the following conditions: Judges to be selected from the following list: Messrs. Heggie, Syson, Bowman, Webster Bruce Martin, Penman, Reid, Girvan, McLellan, Cochrane, and Sinclair; or any recognised English specialist. Classification required is as follows, viz., Cl. or tkd. yell. ck., ditto huff, ditto yell. hen, ditto buff, A.O.V. ck., A.O.V. hen, unflighted yell. ck., ditto buff, and A.V. hen. Members can have rings from the secretary at 1s. per dozen, postage for any quantity, 1d. extra. All Yorkshire fanciers intending to join our club might let me know at once, so that their names and addresses may be included in this year's list of members. Annual subs., 2s. 6d. All other particulars from R. B. Gibb, 2, Alexandria Terrace, Govan, Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER CANARY CLUB.

Annual Dinner and Smoking Concert.

Following the usual monthly meeting, the Provincial Roller Canary C. held its annual dinner and smoking concert on Feb. 22, at the Old Boar's Head, Manchester. The table decorations and the menu left nothing to be desired, and reflected great credit upon our host and hostess. The talent of the artistes engaged ensured a musical treat. Mr. Wareing, chair, heartily welcomed the four new members: Mr. Hepworth (Wakefield), Mr. McKnown (Shaw, Lancs.), Mr. Burnett and Mr. Law (Southport). He expressed his pleasure at the number of visitors present (the Bolton Society were strongly represented), and trusted that they, also the artistes, would spend an enjoyable evening. Mr. Fielding did full justice to a comic song. This was followed by duets by Messrs. Brooks and Partington. Mr. A. Foulds proposed and Mr. Tomlinson seconded, a vote of thanks to the host and hostess, and this was given with musical honours and cheers. The host, in a very suitable reply, thanked them on behalf of himself and wife. Mr. Pilkington followed with a fine rendering of "Which is the sinner and which is the saint?" Here Mr. Wareing took all by surprise, "Gentlemen, the cup winner." Mr. Ives responded. Mr. Fielding contributed "The Herring.' Mr. Schofield sang finely "A little child shall lead them." Mr. Leech aptly displayed a fine tenor voice in "Eileen Alannah." Mr. Brooks sang "When the Ebb Tide Flows,' and a parody on "We all went marching home again.' Mr. Pilkington gave "Pay Now!," "If you don't succeed," "What would the congregation say?" and "You shall die." Mr. Fielding kept the company laughing by his numerous witty sallies. Mr Partington ably rendered "In Old Madrid," and "The Magic of Your Voice." Mr Kilshaw kindly gave his services as pianist. A vote of thanks to the artistes and committee concluded the most enjoyable entertainment that has ever been held by this society. Will all novice exhibitors in the running for the points competition kindly assist Mr. Percival by sending him the number of points they have gained. Please note, on receiving new rule books, fresh rule relating to the winning of the cup.—J. Tomlinson, Newcastle, Staff.

BONNYRIGG C.B.S.

Meeting held in Calderwood Arms, February 22nd, Mr. A. Jardine (president) in the chair. Proposed by W. Smart, seconded Mr. J. Hamilton, that we elect judges at the next meeting. Resolved to do away with the May, June and July meetings. A motion was tabled by Fisher that we appoint a visiting committee at our next meeting. The following new members were admitted: John Steel (Dalkeith), John Currie and John Anderson (Musselburgh), Andr. Sinclair (Rosewell), and Robt. Smith (Roslin). A vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.—James Stirling, Sec.

CRAGHEAD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, February 1, at Punch Bowl Inn, M. Davinson in the chair. There was a good turn-out of members. The society still continues to add to its membership. We had five new members at the meeting, making a total of 36. Decided to have another table show for British birds, with seven classes, Mr. W. Knowles judge. The awards Mr. Knowles gave at the last show made all the members plump for him again; he has promised a show cage as sp. for most points vhc. Secretary will give as special a show cage for the member who shows the most birds, and get the least number of points. Mr. T. Collicot, treas., has also promised a special. All fanciers welcome.—Alf. Dawson, Sec. (Please write on one side only of each sheet of paper used.—Ed.)

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held Red Lion Hotel, Bankfoot, Feb. 18th, Mr. B. Wilman (vice-pres.) in the chair. The balance sheet was presented and showed the society to be in a sound and flourishing condition. The funds have increased slightly year by year since its formation (5 years ago), but the most marked advance has been made during the past year. The amount in hand is over eight times that of twelve months ago; it will therefore be seen that the method adopted by the society twelve months ago has been very successful indeed. Everyone present was thoroughly satisfied with the result. Officers for the present year: The retiring officials, with three exceptions, were re-elected. Mr. B. Wilman was elected assistant secretary in place of Mr. W. North. Messrs. S. Smith and A. Knowles were elected as vice-presidents. In future the meeting night will be the first Tuesday in each month. Regarding joining the Yorkshire Union, it was decided to discuss this at next meeting, March 4th, when it is hoped all members will make a special effort to attend. I would remind fanciers and friends that the third, and probably last dance of the season will be held on Saturday, March 1st, at Brayshaw's Rooms, Bankfoot; programmes, 6d. each. In the "matched pairs for breeding" competition, held during the evening, Mr. H. B. Wood made the following decisions, and in addition gave a very acceptable special to the winner: 1, sp., Mitchell; 2, c, Hudson; 3, Hardaker; 4, hc, Smith; vhc, Wilman.—F. Gelder, Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting held February 24th, at 60, Paddington Street, W. The chairman, Mr. W. A. Shepherd, being unfortunately laid up with an attack of influenza, Mr. F. Knight (vice-chair), very ably presided over the meeting, with Mr. V. Wynn, Hon. Sec., and 50 members present. Mr. W. Lathbury and Mr. and Mrs. Salter were elected members, and Mr. A. Fleet, Mr. and Mrs. Hobden, and Messrs. Parnaby and Marks nominated for election at next meeting. Medals won at pair show were presented to Mrs. L. M. Thynne, Mr. Thurley, and Mr. T. Hart. The Hon. Sec. brought forward the balance sheet for last year, and Mr. A. W. Curtis, one of the auditors, having replied to queries raised by Messrs. Chard and E. C. Offord, the accounts were passed as correct. The delegates to the London Federation reported proceedings, and members were very disappointed to hear that the Association was liable for about £2 towards the loss sustained at the Federation annual show. Further discussion of this subject was adjourned till next meeting. On lines suggested by Mr. A. W. Curtis, a pair judging competition then took place. Norwich and Yorkshire varieties were staged in two classes. Cocks and hens were shown in separate cages, and members were invited to pair up as they considered the best for producing birds of good type and quality. The idea was excellent, but the time allowed each batch of members for judging (8 minutes) was not sufficient, there being 58 birds in all to select from. Mr. J. Robson was final judge, and after making his awards, he gave most interesting explanations as to his reasons for so doing. Unfortunately owing to the late hour, no discussion could be entered into. The members accorded Mr. Robson a very hearty vote of thanks for his kindness.—Fred Thynne, Assist. Hon. Sec.

The balance-sheet for 1912 was dealt with, and shown that after paying all working expenses for the year we had a good balance on hand. This was duly adopted on the motion of Mr. G. A. COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Second annual smoker, held in the Raith Arms, Feb. 19. A large turnout of members and friends met and had a most enjoyable night. Owing to Mr. John Murray's, president, recent bereavement he was unable to be present. Mr. A. Simpson, vice-pres., took the chair. After a few remarks on the progress, the society had made during the last season, he was quite sure, with the same support they received, they could still make a better success of the forthcoming year's work, with a little more energy put forth by the members. An excellent programme was gone through, the talent being of a superior quality, and was much appreciated. The health of the Cowdenbeath C.B.S. was proposed by the chairman, and met with a hearty response from all present. The following contributed towards an evening's enjoyment:—Messrs. Rattray, Desmond, Reid, Harris, While, Robertson, McVicar, Holms, Simpson, etc.—J. W. Holms, Sec.

LIVERPOOL FANCIERS C.C.

Those fanciers who are able to resist the temptation of studying their birds (after cleaning all the cages out, etc) will find it very healthful to throw in their lot with the members of the Liverpool Fanciers Cycling Club. Botany and birds form two excellent nature studies at the end of a nice run on the cycle. Fully qualified lecturers will attend the runs, and, if not too tired, will conduct the party on wild bird chases, and other equally exciting tours—before and after tea. Gathering wild seeds will be another useful object of the club and its professors. At a general meeting held last week the following officials were elected: Chairman, Mr. M. A. Wilson; captain, Mr. R. Malone; sub-captain, Mr. H. Ritchie; Committee, Messrs. Metcalfe, Robinson, Woods, Steinart, Handley, Parsons and Crowe. Hon. Sec., Mr. W. Ritchie, 65, Wraybourne Street, Earle Road, Liverpool; Hon. Treas., Mr. F. Draper.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

The committee expressed their regret, and hoped that he will make a speedy recovery. Mr. DeMaillett in the chair. After a short discussion re the Roller section, it was recommended that the society should cater for the Roller fanciers of Birmingham and district. The business for the coming year was next brought forward, and agreed as follows:—March 5, general meeting, re Rollers, 8 o'clock. Lecture by Mr. T. J. Weaver, of Wolverhampton, on the Norwich Canary, at 8.30. April 2, table show of British, Mules, and Muling pairs, and a lecture on British Softbills, by Mr. G. J. Jeffrey, of Birmingham. After discussing the value and cost, it was decided that the society should purchase these, the manner and conditions under which they are to be competed for, being left over until probably next meeting night, when the society hope all members will cancel all other arrangements, and so put in an appearance and have a voice in this matter.—P. N. Jenkinson, Assist. Sec.

PLYMOUTH W.C.O.S.

Monthly meeting held at Oddfellows Hall, Moreley Street, Plymouth, Feb. 18. Mr. C. Dart presided over a good muster of members. Letters were read from Messrs. Robson and Battye, accepting judging engagements for open show, Oct. 14, 15. Several alterations were made in show rules, and an extended list of prizes for open classes was agreed to. The members learned with regret of the departure from Plymouth of Mr. W. A. Dyer, for seven years assist. sec. to the society, and the names of Messrs. Reed, Rowe and Snell were suggested as probable successors. It is hoped to have a point judging competition at next meeting on March 18th.—Thos Pope, Hon. Sec.

BUGLE F.A.

Meeting held in the Institute Hall, February 19th, Col. Sir W. Serjeant, Kt., C.B., presiding, supported by Mr. E. H. Richards. The Hon. Sec. brought forward a draft schedule, as per sectional committees. After some little discussion and a few minor alterations, the whole of the classes, numbering over 70, also the estimate for prize money, upwards of £100, were unanimously passed. A valuable lot of specials were also forthcoming, and at the close of meeting two or three cups were promised. It is particularly requested that exhibitors should note all specials are confined to members of the Association, which is open to the County of Cornwall.—A. C. Gregor, Assist. Sec.

[Kindly note that reports of meetings, etc., should be sent in duplicate if it is wished that they appear both in POULTRY WORLD. and CAGE BIRDS.—ED.]

MIDLAND COUNTIES Y.C.C.

Meeting held Feb. 20, Chairman Wells being in his usual place before a moderate attendance. The resignation of Mr. Millincamp was accepted, although the members hope that he would reconsider his decision before the show season commences. Balance sheet for the year, after purchasing cups, etc., showed 3/3 in hand, but the coming season was well opened by donations from Mr. P. Lane, the chairman, and others. New and useful rules were passed, and the chairman remarked strongly about several members' action in not sending there subscription, but marking their forms M.C.Y.C.C., and competing for the speciale. A rule dealing with this matter is passed, and all subs. must in future be paid before the first show where the patronage is given. Two new names were nominatod, and Mr. Smith, of Handsworth, becomes a member. It was decided to extend the time for the various clubs to apply for the patronage until Sept. The presentation of the cups and medal was then dealt with, the recipients very suitable responding, and the meeting ended with well wishes for a very prosperous season for the M.C.Y.C.C.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

Washing competition held Feb. 17. The room at headquarters, the Deansgate Temperance Hotel, was comfortably filled with members and friends. There were not many competitors considering the splendid prizes which had been promised. The open and amateur sections were competing for a gold medal given by Mr. Oldham, and the novices were promised a special by Mr. Jones. As things turned out, we were only able to decide the open and amateur competition. The judges were Mr. Cook and Mr. Atkinson (Mr. Davis being detained by business) and their task was none of the easiest. They had to decide not only the best washed bird, but had also to award points for the handling. Mr. Spencer was declared the winner, having gained the maximum number of points, 100; Mr. Buckley, 2nd, 85; Mr. Raynes, 3rd, 83. We then had an informal chat about the social which is to take place on March 1st at the Clarion Cafe, Market Street. It was announced that a thoroughly good programme had been arranged. It only remains now for the members and friends to buy the tickets, and they may rely on a very enjoyable evening. Perhaps the most important item on the programme will be the presentation to Mr. Bladon, our President. Anyone who desires to show their appreciation of the services rendered, both to the society and to the Fancy generally, should communicate with our secretary, Mr. Boothman, 10, Parker Street, Levenshulme. The balance sheet for 1912 was in the hands of the members, and it was decided to discuss it at the next meeting. We were reminded of the lecture, with illustrations, by Mr. Cutmore, of Liverpool, subject, "Pedigree breeding and heredity." This is to take place on March 14th, and any member who misses this will miss a treat indeed. We shall also be glad to welcome any friends. A table show of British is on the agenda for next meeting, March 3rd. Mr. Smith will judge. We decided to have a ramble to Pickmere on May 4. This finished the business of the meeting, and after passing votes of thanks to the judges, and to the donors of the prizes in the washing competition, the meeting closed.—E. H. Fulcher, Asst. Sec.

£5 REWARD

The above will be paid for information, on conviction of person or persons, who were the instigators of a false rumour to the effect that my advertised outdoor garden aviaries, consisted of brick lofts over bakehouse in constant use. This is absolutely false. For the first instance I sold my baker's business in 1901 (at that time kept no foreign birds) neither since that date have I possessed premises with bakehouse or any artificial heating. My birds are not coddled over same. All are kept in outdoor garden (not backyard) sheds, except a collection of very choice Tanagers, Sugar Birds, Gouldians, Ruficaudas, etc., which at this time of year are kept in a splendidly fitted and appointed cold room. Call and inspect, and prove for yourself. New catalogue with photos of my various garden aviaries ready shortly: Collingbourne, Sheen Vale Aviaries, East Sheen. (521)
